"Young Helpers' League"

HOLIDAY FESTIVAL AT STEPNEY.

Boys and Girls from happy homes are affectionately invited to visit the STEPNEY CAUSEWAY HOMES on FRIDAY, JANUARY 8, 1892,

When an EXHIBITION and ENTERTAINMENT will be given, to begin at 1.15 p.m., and to close shortly after 5.

Several events of peculiar interest will take place, of which the chief are as follows:—

(1) MILITARY DRILL in the Grounds at 1.15 p.m. precisely.
(2) MUSICAL DRILL by a squad of our trained boys.
(3) SOME OF OUR LITTLE CRIPPLES will be marshalled.
(4) SWIMMING MATCHES in the large Swimming Bath.
(5) THE HIGHLAND PIPERS and the HAND-BELL RINGERS will play merrily.
(6) HER MAJESTY'S HOSPITAL FOR WAIF CHILDREN will be open to visitors between 1 and 5 o'clock, after which hour no one can be admitted.
(7) ALL THE WORKSHOPS will be open to view. Some of these have been recently enlarged, and new ones have been added. The following trades can now be seen in full operation on the day in question:—

BAKERS.	BLACKSMITHS.	BRUSHMAKERS.
CARPENTERS.	HARNESS-MAKERS.	MATMAKERS.
PRINTERS.	SHOEMAKERS.	TAILORS.
TINSMITHS.	WHEELWRIGHTS.	WOODCHOPPERS.

(8) At 3.30 precisely, the

FIRST PUBLIC MEETING

IN CONNECTION WITH THE

"Young Helpers' League"

WILL BE HELD IN THE GYMNASIUM, WHEN

THE RIGHT HON. THE LORD KINNAIRD

WILL TAKE THE CHAIR.

It is hoped that the following will, among others, take part in the proceedings;

Mrs. EVERED POOLE,
Rev. Prebendary GORDON CALTHROP,
and Dr. BARNARDO.

Opportunity will be given to join the League immediately after the Meeting.

ADMISSION TICKETS, price Sixpence each, will be furnished on application to the Secretary, in order of priority. As no more Tickets will be issued than the premises will comfortably accommodate, overcrowding will be prevented. All admission tickets should therefore be secured beforehand of the undersigned.

As regards the Swimming Contest, the tickets will be of TWO COLOURS; RED Tickets for the first Entertainment (from 4.30 to 5.15); BLUE Tickets for the second Entertainment (from 5.30 to 6.15).

REFRESHMENT TICKETS (which can be obtained on arrival) will be supplied at Sixpence per head.

Please, therefore, remember the hour, 1.15 p.m., and the necessity for applying beforehand for Admission Tickets.

Of course there will be a COLLECTION during the progress of the Meeting.

18 TO 26, STEPNEY CAUSEWAY, LONDON, E.

JOHN ODLING, Secretary.

TIRETTA BAZAR MISSION, CALCUTTA.

EDWARD S. WENGER is desirous of erecting a PLACE of WORSHIP for 100 persons, as also a SCHOOL for 100 children in connection with this Mission. A central spot in the Chinapara is essential. An estimate has been prepared, and it is reckoned that at the very least some 7000 Rupees will be required for the erection of the building. To this will have to be added the cost of land and cost of furnishing, so that at the lowest figure 16,000 Rupees will be required for the work. The amount already subscribed is only 650 Rupees. It is therefore necessary to raise

ABOUT 15,400 RUPEES MORE.

Any contributions towards this sum will be thankfully received and duly acknowledged by Mr. E. S. Wenger, 21/1, Tiretta Bazar Street, Calcutta, or may be sent to Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

MISSIONARY NURSES' TRAINING HOME

IN CO-OPERATION WITH THE GLASGOW MEDICAL MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

All seeking admission to the above Home are reminded that the next medical session begins in April, 1892. Previous to their medical course all are recommended to spend the three months' probation—from January to April—in the evangelistic branch (the Lady Missionaries' Training Home), where a regular course of Biblical lectures will be delivered by ministers of the various evangelical denominations, and others interested in the training of missionaries, and where they will have supervision in evangelistic work. The above lectures will be free to any ladies in Glasgow who may wish to attend. (For days and hours see future advertisements.)

The Lady Missionaries' Training Home will also be used as a training home for any who desire one or two years' Biblical instruction with evangelistic work, &c., before engaging as missionaries. For such arrangements are being made whereby any who wish dispensary and ambulance instruction, &c., can have this upon payment of an additional fee.

For terms and full particulars of both Homes, applicants are requested to communicate at earliest convenience with the Hon. Secy., Miss FORRESTER PATON, Mars-hill House, Alloa.

John: whom Jesus Loved.
A SKETCH OF THE CHARACTER, WRITINGS, THEOLOGY, AND INFLUENCE OF THE BELOVED DISCIPLE.
With Eight Chromo-Lithographic Views.
Tinted Covers, 2s.; cloth boards, 2s. 6d.;
Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.
Rev. C. H. SPURGEON writes in The Sword and Trowel:—"Preachers abound; but divines are few. The printing press pours forth a mass of matter; but a real book is a phenomenon. We count ourselves happy, for we have met with a divine in Dr. James Culross; and in his work entitled 'JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED,' we have found a book. Many writers are mere echoes of other men's voices—they imitate the good steward in bringing forth things old, but things new are quite out of their way. One of the excellences of Dr. Culross is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch; he is no withered bough of the autumn forest. His mind allows young flowers to break through its soil after their own fashion, and to blossom in their own sweet way."
"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."

"Thy First Love:"
CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH OF EPHESUS.
With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece.
Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.

"We do not know higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly. We heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."

The City of the Seven Hills.

AN HISTORICAL POEM. By H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, D.D.

Crown octavo, 300 pages, fully Illustrated (45 engravings), with copious Notes. In cloth boards, gilt, price 5s.

"Few living men have done so much to expose the horror and wickedness of Popery as Dr. Grattan Guinness. His latest blow at the demonic system is a poem entitled THE CITY OF THE SEVEN HILLS. It is profusely illustrated. . . . Among the many amusing or interesting books given at this season, this one of grave reality, relating to the past, the present, and the future, demands a foremost place."—The Christian.

Children's Meetings
And How to Conduct Them.

A BOOK FOR SABBATH-SCHOOL TEACHERS, PARENTS, AND PREACHERS TO THE YOUNG.

By LUCY J. RIDER and NELLIE M. CARMAN,

Assisted by many well-known Writers.

With Introduction by Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D.

Containing 60 Outline Lessons, 48 Diagrams for the Blackboard, and 25 Children's Popular Hymns, with Tunes. 220 pages, crown 8vo, tinted covers, 2s.

Presentation Edition, cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"We do not hesitate to affirm that the very best Sunday-school worker in this country may learn much from this book. It deals with the nature, essential elements, and methods of the teaching process; and also with the Sunday-school teacher's other work than teaching—the shaping and guidance of his scholars. There is certainly no existing teacher's manual worthy to be placed by its side."—Methodist Times.

"We give this book a hearty welcome. Anything that will stimulate the instructors of our young people to greater freshness and force in their teaching—as this volume is well fitted to do—is to be hailed with great satisfaction."—Nonconformist.

WORKS ON ROMANISM.

"Popery can find no favour where 'Foxe's Martyrs' is studied."—Christian Progress.

MORGAN & SCOTT'S EDITION.

FOXE'S BOOK OF MARTYRS.

A COMPLETE AND AUTHENTIC ACCOUNT OF

THE LIVES, SUFFERINGS, AND TRIUMPHANT DEATHS, OF EARLY CHRISTIAN AND PROTESTANT MARTYRS, IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

WITH TWELVE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Complete in One Handsome Volume, cloth, bevelled boards, 10s. 6d.
Presentation Edition, cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 12s. 6d.

"We are glad to see our old friend John Foxe in this new and handsome form. Of all the editions that we have seen, this of Messrs. Morgan and Scott's is decidedly the best. The additions of the Editor's, bringing the history down to recent date, help to show the unchanged nature of Romanism, and the need of watching its insidious encroachments. Rev. Ingram Cobbin's introductory essay on Popery is of a very vigorous and instructive character. The numerous engravings lend additional interest to the book, and its excellent 'get up' renders it an ornament worthy of any drawing-room."—Methodist Recorder.

"A new edition of this useful and standard work; and a most masterly exposure of what Romanism really is, and what it can do when it has the upper hand. The perusal of this book should form part of the education of our youth. Heads of families should purchase it for their children to read. Popery can find no favour where FOXE'S MARTYRS is studied."—Christian Progress.

THE CATACOMBS AT ROME:
Their Contents and Teachings.

A VINDICATION OF PURE AND PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY; AND AN EXPOSURE OF THE CORRUPTIONS OF ROMANISM; DERIVED FROM THE SEPULCHRAL REMAINS OF THE EARLY CHRISTIANS AT ROME.

By BENJAMIN SCOTT, F.R.A.S.,
Chamberlain of the City of London.

Fourth Edition. Revised and Improved.
With many Illustrations.
Tinted Covers, 2s. Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Scott's volume possesses great antiquarian and historical interest."—Word and Work.
"Most people have heard of these famous CATACOMBS; but nowhere have we met with a more graphic or instructive account of their contents than in this book. The many wood engravings help to make the whole thing quite plain. We advise our young ministers, or more educated Sunday-school teachers, to study this volume."
General Baptist Magazine.

BY ELIZA RICHARDSON.

THE VEIL LIFTED;
OR, THE ROMANCE AND REALITY OF CONVENT LIFE.

Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"A valuable little work. We wish we could place it in the hands of thousands; and more, we wish we could induce that hapless multitude who are now given over to a blind infatuation of Romanism and Ritualism, under a glossed and gilded form, to 'read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest' what the author has here advanced upon this all-important subject."—The Gospel Magazine.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE OF ROMAN CATHOLICISM:
WITH INCIDENTS OF CONVENT LIFE.

Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"Now, more than ever, ought books like this to be diligently circulated, for not only is Rome as busy with her wiles as heretofore; but in what was once a Protestant Church we have convents and the confessional too. As for the book of Miss Richardson, we can answer for the accuracy of many of its details."—Evangelical Christendom.

THE CONFESSIONAL:
A PERSONAL NARRATIVE.

Neatly Printed in Red and Black; suitable for enclosing in the modern square envelope.
1s. per Dozen; 7s. 6d. per 100.

"It was a dark page in my experience, when first I knelt at the feet of a mortal to confess what should have been poured into the ear of God alone. I cannot dwell upon this; but a brief time before it would have for ever put to rest my longings after Romanism. But the mantle of evening had already cast its shadowy folds around me, and they were fast enveloping me in darkness as of midnight."

☞ It is particularly requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan & Scott, and not to individual members. Communications for THE CHRISTIAN should be addressed to the Editor. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of Rev. CHARLES BULLOCK, B.D., founder of the Robin Dinners to poor children, and promoter of wholesome literature among the working classes.

Many of our readers will note with regret the absence at this time of the usual articles upon the Old Year and the New, contributed by Rev. Wm. Guest, which for so many successive seasons formed a feature of this journal. The pen of this able and thoughtful writer was stilled in May last, but not before it had ministered in Divine things to many thousands of believers the wide world over. We cannot let the season pass without paying our tribute to his revered memory.

We note with thankfulness that the special plea issued by the esteemed Vicar of St. Jude's, Rev. D. B. Hankin, on behalf of the Mildmay Institutions, has been so well responded to, that of the £5000 asked for, some £4000 have already been sent in, enabling the Treasurer to close the accounts clear of debt. To Mrs. Pennefather, we understand, it has been most cheering to find such a warm and loving interest shown in Mildmay.

Our brother, Mr. Henry Varley, who has lately returned from a prolonged sojourn at the Antipodes, is to conduct a special mission for young men at the Aldersgate-street Y.M.C.A., commencing on Sunday next at 3.30 p.m., and continuing on each evening (except Saturday) in the following week at 8 p.m. His forcible way of delivering the truth that he holds is especially of value to young men in these days, when belief and testimony are so often limp and indefinite. On Monday Mr. Varley addressed the noon meeting, speaking from 2 Peter i. 1—11.

In one of his most moving discourses, Mr. Moody exults in the fact that it was Adam's fall that brought out the Divine love. "God did not come down to Eden and hurl his erring child from his presence for ever; right there he gave him the sure promise of a coming Saviour." All too seldom do we meet in human society with a practical reflection of this Divine, forgiving love. A pathetic instance of this is recorded in the daily papers in connection with what is known as the "Pearl Case," that recently came to such an inglorious termination in the law courts. A journalist interviewed Mrs. Hargreaves, the lady from whom the jewels had been stolen, and asked, as a parting question, what she would do if her poor culprit sister were to come to her and crave for mercy and forgiveness. The lady's noble answer deserves to be held in public remembrance:—

"If the poor, wretched woman were to come to you to-day and crave for mercy and forgiveness, what would you do?" In a choking voice she replied: "Do! what would I do? Why, forgive the poor girl, of course, and take her to my heart again. Poor Ethel, how wretched, how miserable she must be!"

Human illustrations of forgiving grace are feeble and halting at the best, but such an example is welcome all the more because of its comparative rarity.

Children of God are born of the Spirit, not made by intellectual conviction or ecclesiastical ordinance. There is no department of Christian evidence that affords more weighty testimony to the truth of revelation and the reality of the Gospel than that of personal religion. Though candid onlookers may admit this fact, it is only the believer who knows the motions and joys of being indwelt of the Holy Spirit. In an article in the January issue of The Critical Review Dr. Stalker well says:—

Christianity is not a system of beliefs about Him; it is Christ Himself standing at the door and offering to enter with all the forces of salvation in his train. The argument from experience is, that, when Christianity in this sense is admitted into the human mind, it carries with it its own proof. When God comes into the soul, the effect is the same as when sunshine comes into a dark place. Light needs no demonstration. When a man has actually been saved by Christ, how can there be for him any question as to whether there exists a Christ or a salvation?

Those who are Christ's should know it experimentally and show it practically. "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the doctrine;" and those who do the will of God are easily recognised as actuated by motives that are not of earth.

It is reported that the Roman Catholic Bishop of Portsmouth is in Rome, conducting negotiations on behalf of the British Government for the re-establishment of the Papal hierarchy in Egypt. The object of the "negotiations" is to urge the Vatican to create English and not Italian bishops. There is wonderful cunning in the way that Rome makes use of secular governments; but she is content with nothing short of their submission to her spiritual authority. The work of the Papacy in Egypt is entitled to no patronage on the part of the British Government; yet there seems to be helpless fatuity in the acts whereby, from time to time, indifferent (if not Romanising) statesmen play into the hands of this increasingly aggressive and arrogant ecclesiastical organisation. Rome ever seeks to translate into fact the claim that she is "catholic," and that she has rights over the bodies and souls of all men.

Mr. E. B. Nicholson, Bodley's Librarian at Oxford, is about to publish, by the aid of photography, some of the rarest books and documents now under his charge. Romanists will not be pleased to learn that the first volume will be the rare pamphlet which gives the order of the processions and rejoicing in Rome upon the "destruction" of the Huguenots. The pamphlet bears the date of the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, 1572. The republication will be sold at one shilling (Quaritch, Piccadilly); and we trust it will have a large and influential circulation.

"The Tsar Persecutor" is the subject of a powerful article, by E. B. Lanin, in the current issue of The Contemporary Review. It is a statement of the case for the poor Stundists, and the information is acknowledged from official and other Russian sources. Dissent from the corrupt orthodoxy of the Greek Church is the crime of the Stundists, the moral excellence of whom is attested even by those who carry out the wicked edicts of the authorities in Church and State.

The indictment, in some of its most aggravated features, is thus formulated by this well-informed writer on Russian affairs:—

As the rule of Alexander II. was the mildest and most liberal, so that of his son and successor is by far the most despotic experienced by the Russian people since the days of Ivan the Terrible. Especially during the last five or six years all the legal formalities and other frail barriers that stood between sectarians and ruin have been completely swept away, and flogging, fining, imprisonment, and life-long torture in the Siberian mines can be, and frequently are, meted out, without let or hindrance or judicial delay, to men and women whom practical Englishmen or Americans would be disposed to regard as good citizens and benefactors to the community.

It is an indisputable fact that the only large body of peasants in all Russia who contrive to have excellent harvests, in spite of frost, blight, and drought, who are never in arrear with their taxes, have no debts and no incumbrances on their land, and dwell in huts as trim and tidy as English cottages, are the Stundists. The only body of men whose word is a bond, whose russet years and kersey nays outweigh a score of orthodox oaths, whose hearts vibrate to the most delicate thrills of pity for their fellows and sympathy with all creation, are the Stundists.

And yet these are the people whom State and Church combine to wipe off the face of the earth! Incredible though it may seem when put into words, it is a plain fact that these powers, which give their imprimatur to cheap editions of the filthiest of Zola's novels, allow taverns and the worst dens of vice to be kept open on Sundays and holy days, and punish those peasants who wish to ostracise them—these guides of the people make it a felony for three honest men to come together for prayer, or to read the Gospel aloud in the private room of a hut.

The writer declares, with truth and force, that the history of Stundism during the past few years is a sickening martyrology. The powers of evil and the workings of grace have been, and still are, in conflict. God has stood by his servants, and we know that He will yet overrule the wrath of man to his own glory. In the meantime, let us pray for the suffering Stundists, and show our sympathy with them in their sore affliction.

A correspondence is going on in the daily papers with respect to improved methods of tending the wounded in battle. The famous war correspondent, Mr. Archibald Forbes, in contributing to the discussion, expresses a fervent hope that the time may soon come when the brutal arbitrament of warfare shall be scouted as intolerable among all reasonable and Christian people:—

Stern experience of future warfare will force home upon the nations the decision whether their wounded and necessarily untended warriors in their thousands are to lie bleeding to death on the battle-fields, while the strife is raging above them; or whether the peoples of Europe will take the accomplishment of the blessed millennium into their own hands, and bring it about in the words of the Scottish paraphrase, that

> No longer hosts, encountering hosts,
> Shall crowds of slain deplore.

All true friends of humanity, much more all true disciples of the Prince of Peace, ought to pray and work for this end.

In a very instructive article on the higher criticism in the January issue of The Expository Times, Bishop Ellicott says:—

Another principle which has produced almost equal effects [with the rejection of the supernatural in all its relations to the history of the Chosen People] in the shaping of theories as to the component parts of the books of the Old Testament, is this—to assume the existence of a continuous conflict between the schools of the Prophets and the Priesthood, and also of persistent efforts made, especially in the later periods of the history of the nation, on the part of the Priests and Levites, to secure the supremacy.

Some of us are old enough to remember how books of the New Testament, about the design of which no reasonable doubt could be entertained, were regarded simply as the outcome of the controversies that arose between Judaism and Gentile Christianity. Where now are these theories? Cast away long since on the waste-heap of baseless speculations, exploded and forgotten. And that such will be the fate of a large portion of those that we are now considering in reference to the Old Testament, is certainly not a very hazardous prophecy.

Inability to accept the supernatural is the distinctive feature of the analytical system; all its results patently disclose it; all its investigations unconsciously presuppose it. How modifications of such a system, or deductions that may be drawn from it, however cautiously and guardedly, can ever be used to help failing faith, especially in such an age as our own, is to me inconceivable.

That must be a singular mental turn that thinks it possible to convince disciples of St. Thomas by alleging weak points in the evidences of the faith. That this confusion exists is made very clear by Canon Rawlinson in the January issue of The Thinker. Speaking of Mr. Gore's Bampton Lectures on the Incarnation, he says:—

In the short space of a single page, doubts are thrown on the historical character of the flood, and on the narrative in the Book of Jonah, while, at the same time, our Lord's testimony to the Mosaic authority of the Pentateuch is disparaged and made light of. One passage only out of twelve bearing upon the subject is quoted, and the question is represented as one of mere literary curiosity, on a par with that of the authorship of the Odyssey and Iliad. Is this exactly in the spirit of John Bampton's direction, that the subject of the Lecture which he founded should be "to confirm and establish the Christian faith, to confute all heretics and schismatics," and to establish "the Divine authority of the Holy Scriptures?"

The British Medical Journal, commenting upon the report of the Leprosy Commissioners, which, however, cannot be published until March next, with the completion of the Census, remarks that the returns will show marked decrease in the amount of leprosy in India. In other respects, too, our contemporary anticipates that the report will alter the state of facts, especially in regard to the risk of contagion.

There has been a great increase, as compared with the two preceding years, in the amount bequeathed for religious, educational, and charitable purposes during 1891, the amount being about £1,200,000. It is remarkable that of this total £1,100,000 came from only forty estates, the balance being derived from eighty other wills. It is to be regretted that more of this wealth was not devoted to charitable and religious purposes during the lifetime of the testators. In many cases the grain of mustard-seed might have become a tree of spreading branches before death called away the sower.

The Ideal Life.

I am the true Vine.—Jno. xv. i.
Ye are the branches.—Jno. xv. 5.
My Father is the husbandman.—Jno. xv. 1.

To abide in Him, to live every moment in conscious dependence upon Him, fellowship with Him, and surrender to Him—this is the ideal life. True discipleship, abundant fruitfulness, and power in prayer, depend upon it. How different our retrospect of the old year would have been if we had but lived thus!

Can the new year be better than the old? Is it possible for the abiding life to become more than a mere vision? Is there a way of making the ideal into the actual? How many hearts yearn to hear the right answer!

Nothing can help us more than the facts quoted above. "Facts" we call them; for, until they are accepted as such, the life of constant abiding cannot be ours. There is no difficulty in regarding the first and last statement as facts. We can begin the new year with an upward look into the face of our Lord and can gladly say to Him, "Thou art the True Vine." And through Him we can look to the Father and say, with no less confidence, "Thou art the Husbandman." But do not stop there. The other statement is just as definite and just as literally true. The same Faithful Witness who declares to us the facts concerning Himself and his Father, declares also concerning all his people, "Ye are the branches." The branch life, with all the blessing it suggests, is not held before us as a prize to be won by a long course of faithful service, not a condition into which we grow, but is true now of every one who believes. As surely as Christ is the Vine, so surely we are the branches.

Think what the branch life means. It expresses the most intimate union. It is no merely external bond that joins the branch to the vine. The union is one of life. The life of the vine is in the branch, and makes the branch a part of itself. The vine is incomplete without the branch, for who can conceive of a vine consisting only of root and stem? The branch is necessary to the fruitfulness of the vine. Its life can never express itself in leaf and flower and fruit, except through the branches.

If all this is implied in the branch life, all must be true of our relationship to the True Vine. Appropriate each item of it. Do not wait to feel worthy of it. The lesson you learned at the commencement of your Christian life—that fact precedes faith and is followed by feeling—is needful here. What Jesus declares is fact; meet it with quiet, unquestioning faith, and let feeling and experience result. Begin the year with this: I am a branch in the True Vine, vitally joined to Him, made a part of Himself. "He that is joined to the Lord is One Spirit." He needs me for his own completeness. The statement is almost startling. It is only because He has said it that we dare repeat it. But Paul has taught no less. "The Church, which is his body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all." I am necessary to his fruitfulness. The life that is in Him can only express itself in the lives of those who are vitally joined to Him.

Having appropriated this, then two things are necessary to the abiding life: (1) continual dependence; and (2) constant surrender. Neither can be separated from the other. For the first we need only weakness, helplessness, insufficiency in ourselves. "I cannot" is not the lament of failure, but the condition of strength. The more conscious we are of weakness the more shall we want to depend upon Him. "When I am weak, then am I strong." It is not our weakness, but our fancied strength that has kept us from the constant abiding. What we have pleaded as an excuse for failing to abide is exactly the condition upon which alone the abiding is made possible.

The surrender must be as constant as the dependence. Having once made it, we need reckon it as done, and stand to it. Live as the branch lives, for no other purpose than to receive and give expression to the life of the Vine. To seek the abiding life for the sake of the happiness it will bring is to fail. He has purposes to accomplish in this world—a witness to bear, a work to do. He will only make it possible for you to abide in Him as you yield yourself to live for his purpose.

Begin the year with this, repeat it in his presence day by day: I am already in the Vine. He will hold me by his own life which is in me. The life to which He calls me He will work in me. Each day as it comes, and each moment of each day, learn to say, "I do now abide in Thee."

THE HOUSE OF REST.

The New Year's Day meetings at the House of Rest, St. John's Wood, were well attended, and proved very helpful in their character to Christians generally, entering as all were upon the unknown and untrodden path of another year.

Rev. W. Fuller Gooch spoke in the afternoon on "The Ark of the Covenant goeth before," using these words as a symbol of Christ's work for, and on behalf of, his children. The principal points marked were—as the Ark proved God's presence to the Covenant children of Israel, so to-day our Ark, who is none other than the Lord Jesus, is with his Covenant people. The Ark was a link between the Israelites and God, as Christ is the only mediator between man and God, and the central point and meeting-place. The Ark represented the fulfilment of the law. For our sakes Christ has fulfilled the law, and in Him we are perfect. Once a year the Mercy Seat was sprinkled by the High Priest with the blood of the atoning lamb. Jesus' blood was shed to cleanse his people from their sin.

The rod of the priesthood enclosed within the Ark told that Aaron was the divinely-appointed High Priest. Jesus is the High Priest, and in Him we have one who maintains a living link of fellowship between us and God. The pot of manna told how God fed his people in the wilderness, and speaks and tells us that Christ is the daily sustenance of his people's life. The Ark which went before the Israelites was a pioneer of progress. Our Ark contains all we need, and will lead us until (like the Ark of old) we are presented at the Throne of God, to rest forever in the temple of God not made with hands. The practical teaching of the address was deep and earnest, and set forth the satisfying life which all Christians may attain. In the evening Mr. Reader Harris was the speaker.

LONDON CABMEN'S MISSION.—Mr. John Dupee, in his eighteenth annual report, states that through the preaching of the Gospel in the Hall at King's-cross, many cabmen and others have been saved. The past year was a prosperous one; several hundreds have signed the temperance pledge; not a few have been awakened by open-air preaching; the Home of Rest at Ventnor has proved healing to many and salvation to some; and the schoolroom for children is full every Sunday. It seems that there are now fifteen thousand cabmen in London, of whom one-third are Temperance men. Mr. Dupee's address is 165, Hemingford-road, Barnsbury, N.

PASTOR BROWN'S SILVER WEDDING.

Entering the large East London Tabernacle after the tea on Monday night, we found the building crowded in every part with an enthusiastic assemblage of Christian people, on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the church, and the silver wedding of Pastor Archibald G. Brown; indeed, many persons obtained only standing room in the passages. The platform was tastefully decorated with flowers and plants, and a large Sunday-school choir sang some special pieces appropriate to the occasion throughout the evening.

Mr. T. A Denny, with his cheery manner and frequent touches of quiet humour, made a very acceptable chairman. He said the meeting had come together to praise God for the good work which, during twenty-five years, He had enabled the pastor to do, in feeding the souls of the congregation, and caring for the naked and hungry of East London.

Rev. J. T. Wigner, who had laid one of the first bricks of the Tabernacle, and married Mr. Brown to his wife, traced with thankfulness the high spiritual characteristics of the ministry in that place, and trusted God would long spare their friend to win sinners to Christ and engage in works of mercy.

Mr. Townsend, as the representative of the congregation, uttered warm words of appreciation, and on leaving the platform heartily shook the pastor by the hand.

Mr. G. W. Ovenden, one of the deacons, dealt in affectionate terms with the rare event which they had met to celebrate. It was an inexpressible privilege to bear a tribute of praise to God, while acknowledging their indebtedness to his servant for individual and family blessings received through him. They thought the occasion called for more than the mere expression of appreciation, and, therefore, he had to present the pastor with an illuminated album containing a brief history of the church, accompanied by a cheque for £600. He was also the bearer of a travelling bag for the pastor's wife. The address in the album recorded, among other interesting details, that since the erection of the Tabernacle at a cost of £13,000, mostly collected by the pastor himself, the latter had given the right hand of fellowship to 4800 persons, the membership now numbering 2255. Then came a rapid sketch of the numerous good works associated with the Tabernacle, but for which, as Mr. Brown subsequently stated, outside financial help is needed to the extent of £50 weekly. These things had grown to their present magnitude as the result of unswerving fidelity to Jesus Christ, his word and work.

After the hearty singing of a special hymn, "God bless our pastor," the whole audience stood and vigorously applauded Mr. Brown, as he rose to express his heart's deepest thankfulness for what he described as the splendid gift made to him, and the loving manner in which it had been conveyed. He accepted the present willingly, and with all his heart thanked them for it. He should invest the money in some security which he need never trouble about, and thus as the dividends were paid, he would have a lasting reminder of their affection. During his long life in the East of London he had been privileged to sink in God's work the major part of his earthly possessions in confidence of good spiritual dividends. The success of his ministry was due to firm hold upon God's Word. His pulpit had never known a political sermon or a Sunday address upon a social question, but Jesus Christ was the theme on every occasion. After many years he felt they were only beginning to touch the unsearchable riches of Christ. He thanked God for affectionate and hard-working deacons, and his prayer was that God would keep himself and workers faithful to their high calling. Mr. Brown proceeded to read a letter of hearty Christian greeting from Sir Arthur Blackwood, expressive of keen disappointment at being absent through a severe cold. Mr. Brown much regretted the absence of one whose faithful dealing had, in years gone by, led him to Christ.

Rev. James Stephens, M.A., rejoiced to join in honouring the man who had honoured God, and whose mental gifts and physical strength had been so nobly consecrated to the cause of the Gospel. Mr. Geo. Nokes also spoke.

In some closing words Mr. Brown made touching reference to the influence of a good mother, and warmly thanked the many helpers who had from an early hour that morning been preparing for the anniversary.

"The Religious Condition of the People."—No. II.

BY REV. DR. ELDER CUMMING, GLASGOW.

1. In our former paper, we glanced at some of those national evils which beset the present state of our people, and call loudly for confession, humiliation, and repentance before God. The evils noticed were: The sin of intemperance, the neglect of all Church services, the sin of Sabbath-breaking, the prevalent spirit of scepticism and unbelief, the revolt against authority of every kind; and these in the face, not of a dead, but of a living and vigorous, Church.

The catalogue of evils is, however, not yet exhausted; and one or two more must be noted before we shall be free to turn to what are our prospects for the future.

2. We have said nothing as yet of the sin of national immorality, so widely spread in every part of the community, both town and country — at home, in India, and in the Colonies; a condition of things as to which it cannot be said that the State itself has clean hands, and which has been sapping the national strength and sense of righteousness. There is the opium traffic in India and China, the whole history of which has furnished a blot on the character of the nation loudly calling for repentance, and which it will take years to wipe away in the sight of men.

3. There is also an evil to which I must devote yet a few more words. There has fallen upon us lately the most extraordinary and even mysterious indifference to the prevalence and power of the in the midst of us. A few years ago, had any one predicted this, in the face of the past history of this country, whose most turbulent times and most bloody scenes have been connected with the attacks of the Papacy, and some of whose noblest recollections are intertwined with the popular resistance to them, it would have been deemed impossible. But at the present day, there is no shutting our eyes to the fast-growing influence which Popery is once more attaining among us; to the openly-expressed rejoicing of priest, bishop, and cardinal that the Church of England is sapped by this influence; and to the hope, almost vauntingly proclaimed, that at no distant time England will become again a Roman Catholic country. These are the boasts on the one hand; and, on the other, a singularly unaccountable indifference to the whole subject, the very mention of which is in many quarters absolutely tabooed. A large portion of the press of the country, and, perhaps, a still larger portion of the reporting staff, are in the hands of members of the Church of Rome.

An event for which I can vouch took place a few years ago at one of the largest conventions for the deepening of spiritual life. At the close, a lecture on unfulfilled prophecy was delivered by the chairman, and the official reporter, who had taken notes at all the meetings, was specially engaged to report it. The lecture proceeded on the ground that the Church of Rome was the Antichrist, and at the close, when the reporter was asked whether his notes were complete, he explained that he had very soon ceased to take them, and had destroyed those which he had taken, because he refused to record an attack upon his own Church! It then and thus appeared, for the first time, that he was a Roman Catholic. Such facts might well open one's eyes, but it would almost seem as if the god of this world had blinded them that believe not to all such things.

4. Another word must be added with regard to a sin which, of late years, has had fresh development among us. I mean that of GAMBLING.

Of course, for many generations, it has been known in the country in connection with horse-racing and cards. But the last ten years have seen its marvellous increase in such games as football, &c. No statistics of a fully reliable character are attainable, but fabulously large sums, paid in shillings, are rumoured to change hands every Saturday in each of our great cities. In a single town, of which we have heard, a sum of £10,000 a week was said to be not above the mark, and to have been almost entirely drawn from the weekly wages of working-men. Bookmaking, as it is called, on the open street for lads, shop-boys, and messengers, has become in some quarters a public nuisance which has called for the interference of the law.

5. Summing up, then, all that has been said of the darker aspects of our community, we turn to the great spiritual problem of what is to come for the nation in the future.

6. And dealing with this problem as a whole—which we have sought thus more fully to understand in its parts—we ask ourselves, Whether the evil is getting less? Whether, in a word, the problem is solving itself? And here I answer that two well-defined tendencies may be seen—one towards improvement and the other towards deterioration. On the one hand, there are what a recent writer has described, when he bids us "study the social evolution of humanity; the amelioration of life; the freeing of slaves; the elevation of woman; the purification of religion; and ask what these can be if not the coming of the kingdom of God on earth" (Drummond's "Programme of Christianity.")

Now, all these are large movements, public movements, affecting nations and masses of men. But they pass over the heads of myriads of the poor, the evil, the suffering, and the debased, who are increasing in number and sinking in position all the time. What can we say but that the world is getting better, and that it is getting worse? Its good is better, and its evil is worse than in former days. And the two extremes are farther apart than ever!

7. On the whole, then, I come to this conclusion, that there is a true sense in which we must confess in the midst of all this evil. By which, I mean, that we have done, not certainly all we could, but that we have done much; that the efforts of our best minds and our truest spirits have been made for years with little effect on the mass, and only with the result of saving many individual cases; and that we are face to face with this very serious questions—Can it be done? and Can it be done by us? I believe that we shall have to come to a sense of our helplessness, and to a confession of it before God; that we have reached very nearly one of those critical times which occur in history, when only the interposition of God can avail to set things right.

8. Once the Church comes to that conclusion, and makes that humble confession, we shall be prepared for something better. For then the hindrances shall be cleared away, and God enabled to work.

9. Yes, I repeat it, we seem to be coming near to one of those great crises in society which ever and again have visited the world of civilisation, when the smouldering forces of evil, which have long been gathering, will produce another eruption of the great volcanic fires which are below. What form that eruption is to take we cannot say beforehand. There are for the future, so far as one can see,

THREE ALTERNATIVES.

It may be the distant future, when our grandchildren shall bear the brunt; it may be in half a generation; and one could conceive of circumstances which would bring it nearer than that. The three possible alternatives which are before this and other countries like it, are—

i. A wonderful reviving, by God's Spirit, of true and vital Christianity, as in the earliest days of the Church, among all classes, rich and poor, by which evil shall be met, and fought, and overcome, and driven out of the midst; and what is now the life of our best and purest men shall be the rule and pattern of the great bulk of the people. That is a possible thing, not by any new methods, plans, or contrivances, but by the old Gospel, in its simplicity, coming home by the Spirit of God with power to the consciences, hearts, and wills of men, breaking the back of worldliness and evil habits, and bringing men in crowds and droves to the feet of Christ, the only Saviour of sinful men. That would be a remedy, and that is possible!

ii. Or, secondly, it may be that we have, as a nation, exhausted our opportunities, taken up our position to reject the truth, made up our minds that the Gospel of Christ is one which we will not have to cure us; and that the fate of other peoples in the past is in store for us—the fate of North Africa, which once was Christian; the fate of Asia Minor, which once was the light of the world; the fate of Egypt, which once was the guardian of civilisation; the fate of Turkey, which, with Constantinople, was once the metropolis of spiritual truth. Our light may go out, our candlestick may be removed elsewhere, and superstition and darkness and the tyranny of evil may reign in these lands again. That, also, is a possible future for ourselves and for other nations of modern Europe.

iii. A third alternative is that the promise of ancient prophets, and the hope of God's Church for ages, may speedily be accomplished. In the meantime, a little more degeneracy, a little farther inflow of the tides of sin and disorder, a little more upturning of the old and overturning of the good, a little more rebellion against God, a little more following of the bent of every man's unrestrained will; thrones going, authority defied, order set at nought, infidelity rampant, the rich richer and the poor poorer, the richer rich careful only of their own pleasures, the poorer poor determined to redress their wrongs by force; and the Church of Christ—like the woman in the wilderness — persecuted, and solitary, and powerless: and then, thank God! the heavens rent, and the trumpet sounding, and to take the kingdom and to save the world.

These three seem to be the alternatives which lie before this land and the other civilised lands of Europe and America. Which of them it shall be is in the hand of God!

Meantime, for us, with a broken and humble heart, expecting not our good things here, neither too confident nor too cast down, let us serve God as we best know how! Let us be his, not in word, but in truth! Let us be saviours of men, seeking to save whomsoever will! And whether we be the prophets whom no man regardeth, or whether we see the fruit of our labours, God's purposes shall yet be carried out, and the redemption of this poor sin-stained world shall be accomplished by the blood and the power of Christ, to whom be the glory!

THIS YEAR'S PRAYER.

"I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil."—JOHN xvii. 15.

"So be it, Father," we thy children echo;
Fain would we linger 'mid life's busy throng,
Doing our part for those around us bravely,
Shielded from evil all the way along.

Lending a helping hand to weak and stumbling;
Guarding the friendless from oppressor's might:
Willing for anything the Master willeth;
Calm in the comfort that He must be right.

Listening intently lest we miss the footfall,
Soft and mysterious, of celestial feet,
Somewhen and somewhere, 'mid the constant traffic,
Threading continually earth's crowded street.

Turning aside from any passing glory,
Living for "Jesus only" day by day;
"Hasting" that we may be the first to greet Him
When on his glorious returning way.

Thus we endorse our Saviour's earnest pleading,
Now upon thee we cast our every care,
Father, in love do thou protect and keep us!
Answer abundantly our New Year's Prayer!

Moses, the Servant of God.

Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Regent's-park Chapel.

THE SONG OF VICTORY.

Exodus xiv, xv.

When God's cloud brings any of his children into a position of unparalleled difficulty they may always count upon Him to deliver them. Our Almighty Parent, like the eagle of which Moses sang afterwards, delights to conduct the tender nestlings of his care to the very edge of the precipice, and even to thrust them off into the steeps of air, that they may learn their possession of unrealised powers of flight, to be for ever after a luxury; and if, in the attempt, they be exposed to unwonted peril, He is prepared to swoop beneath them, and to bear them upward on his mighty pinions.

A conspicuous example of this is given here. From his chariot-cloud their Almighty Friend looked down upon the cowering crowd of fugitives in their sore fear as they cried to Him. "In all their affliction He was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them; in his love and in his pity He redeemed them; and He bare them, and carried them" throughout that memorable night and day. As Moses foretold, 'He fought for them, while they held their peace."

It would almost seem, from an expression in the Psalms, that the children of Israel yielded to more rebellion at the Red Sea than appears from the narrative of Moses. We are told distinctly that they "were rebellious at the Sea, even at the Red Sea, because they remembered not the multitude of his mercies," so that God saved them in spite of their rebelliousness, for his Name's sake, and that He might make his mighty power to be seen (Psa. cvi. 7, 8). And this suggests the further thought, that our deliverance does not depend on our deserts, but upon the Divine purpose. And even though it might be supposed that our behaviour, in seasons of peril, must alienate from us the Divine helpfulness, yet it shall not be so; but notwithstanding all He will work miracles of power for such as have no claim on Him, save that which his love gives.

The one man who seemed unmoved amid the panic of the people was their heroic leader, whose faith was the organ of their deliverance. And therefore it is that in all after-allusions to this great event his hand is always alluded to as the instrument through which the might of Jehovah wrought. "Thou leddest," says the Psalmist, "thy people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron." "He caused," says Isaiah, "his glorious arm to go at the right hand of Moses." The people, therefore, had good reason to remember "the ancient days of Moses," for they were made famous by Moses' mighty faith. By his faith they passed through the Red Sea as by dry land.

The Rod.—There is a limit to prayer. While Moses presented an appearance of unbroken fortitude towards the people, rearing himself among them like a rock, before God he bent like a broken reed, crying to Him. That, however, was not the time for heart-rending supplication, but for action; he must give to the people the word of advance; over the sea, on which the shadows of night were falling rapidly, he must stretch out his rod; and by his faith he must afford the power of God a channel through which it should pass to the cleavage of the mighty waters.

That rod had already played many parts; it grew first in some watered glade of the Sinaitic peninsula, little witting of its destiny, till cut down by the shepherd for the purpose of guiding his flock, or clubbing some beast of prey; it was in his hand when God first met with him, and cast upon the ground it became a serpent, emblem of Egyptian pride; already it had figured in many of the Egyptian plagues; stretched over the waters of the river to turn them to blood; lifted towards heaven to summon the storm; extended over the land to turn the very dust to lice; hereafter it was to win victory over Amalek, and to open streams from the heart of the rock; everywhere emphatically as "the rod of God." But never in all its history had it done, nor would it do, such marvels as awaited it that night, when at the bidding of God it was stretched over the waters of the Red Sea.

As the rod was in the hands of Moses, so Moses was in the hand of God, and so may each of us be, if only we yield ourselves implicitly to Him for service. By nature we may be of the coarsest texture, not pine, or oak, or cedar; by education, we may be uncultured and unpolished; there may be many notches in us which mar our symmetry and beauty; but what do these things matter? the one essential is to know that we are being wielded and used by the hands that shaped the worlds, and built the arch of heaven. The glass-blower has beside him on his bench the rudest iron tools to aid him in the execution of the most exquisite designs, but the dexterity of his touch more than compensates for their apparent inaptitude. Be a piece of iron if you will, or a rod cut from the forest tree, but be sure that you are in the right hand of the Master Workman.

The Cloud.—Up till now the Pillar of Cloud had swept in majestic glory through the heavens; but at this juncture it settled down upon the ground like a great wall of billowy vapour, standing for a fence between the camp of Egypt and the camp of Israel. To the former it was dark and menacing, forbidding progress, and enshrouding the movements of the fugitives; to the latter it gave light, casting a sheen upon the sand and sea, and indicating, with unerring accuracy, the path that soon appeared. All night through, those heaven-lit beacon fires shone out, and in after-days the memory of the effect produced by the mingling of their light with the walls of glassy water, supplied the inspired seer with the imagery with which to depict the triumph of the redeemed, who stand on the shores of the "glassy sea mingled with fire, having the harps of God." It seemed as if inspiration itself could find no worthier emblem for that supreme event than the rapture and triumph of the host of Israel on the night, when the glory of the Shechinah flashed back from the crested billows, marshalled on either hand, as the pillared entrance to a mighty temple.

The Passage.—At this point, following the lead of the whole Psalmist band, it is clear that a terrific storm broke upon the scene. The earth shook and trembled; the massy foundations of the mountains rocked; from out the darkness brooding overhead, the curtains of God's pavilion, came the repeated flash of the lightning, followed by the long reverberation of the thunder. The Most High uttered his voice, which was followed by the pelt of the hailstones and the fall of fireballs. The east wind rose in fury, driving before it the retreating waters, which fled at the blast of the breath of his nostrils; then catching them up in its hands it piled them, wave on wave, until they stood up a wall of foam and tumult, from base to top, fretting, seething, fuming, chafing at the unexpected restraint, and wondering at the unwonted posture, but held steadily and always by the pressure of that mighty blast, that gave them no respite, but held them as in a vice; and all the water behind, backed up, leant upon that rampart, so strangely built, so marvellously maintained.

And on the other side the tide withdrew back and back towards the fountains of the great deep behind. It was as if every wavelet felt the pull, the suction of an abyss opening somewhere far down in the sea, and hastened to fill it, leaving the foundations of the deep naked in the headlong rush. Then the channels of water appeared, the foundations of the world were laid bare, so that rocks and stones deposited in primeval times, and closely veiled from all prying gaze, awoke to find themselves discovered.

Presently it seemed as if there was a pause in the speed of the retreating waters, and they began slowly to return; but as they did so they met with the restraint of the hand of God, which, leaving a pathway of sufficient breadth from the wall already formed, commenced to constitute a second, and "so the flood stood upright as an heap, and the deeps were congealed in the heart of the sea."

Shelving down from the shore between these two walls of water, a broad thoroughfare lay outspread, which the prophet compares to those mountain paths by which cattle descend from the heights on which they graze to the valleys where they rest (Is. lxiii. 14). Was there ever such a strange comparison? And yet for the moment it seemed almost as natural, and at that moment the word which had sprung from the lips of the leader, and had been caught by those who stood closest around him, passed like prairie fire, though in a whisper, from lip to lip, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward"; and immediately, without precipitate haste, but with glad obedience, the ransomed host stepped down, rank after rank, and passed between the walls of glass and fire amid the rattle of the storm, which made the withdrawal of their hosts inaudible to their foes.

Imagine, oh child of God, if you can, that triumphal march, the excited children restrained from ejaculations of wonder by the perpetual hush of their parents; the almost uncontrollable excitement of the women as they found themselves suddenly saved from a fate worse than death; while the men followed or accompanied them, ashamed or confounded that they had ever mistrusted God or murmured against Moses; and as you see those mighty walls of water piled by the outstretched hand of the Eternal in response to the faith of a single man, learn what God will do for his own. Dread not any result of implicit obedience to his command, fear not the angry waters which, in their proud insolence, forbid your progress; fear not the turbulent crowds of men who are perpetually compared to waters lifting up their voice and roaring with their waves. Fear none of these things. Above the voices of many waters, the mighty breakers of the sea, the Lord sits as king upon the flood; yea, the Lord sitteth as king for ever. A storm is only as the outskirts of his robe, the symptom of his advent, the environment of his presence. His way lies through, as well as in the sea, his path amid mighty waters, and his footsteps are veiled from human reason. Dare to trust Him, dare to follow Him. Step right down into the ooze of the sea, to find it rock; go down into the mighty depths, to discover that the very forces which barred your progress and threatened your life, at his bidding become the materials of which an avenue is made to liberty.

The Pursuit.—As soon as the Egyptians became aware that Israel was escaping, they followed them, and went on after them into the midst of the sea. There was a good deal of pride and obstinacy in this act, which tempted God and presumptuously dared Him to do his worst, and, forthwith, when the host was between the walls of water, the whole force of the storm seemed to spend itself on them. The Lord looked upon them through the pillar of fire and of cloud, and troubled them; a sudden panic seized them, their heavy chariots could make but ill progress amid the ooze of the sea bottom, and the wheels themselves became clogged and bound so that they could not move, and they turned to flee, conscious that a greater than Israel was engaged against them.

At this juncture the morning light began to break, and, at the bidding of God, Moses stretched out his hand over the sea from that further shore which he and Israel had by this time gained, and the sea returned to its strength. The Egyptians fled against it in vain, they were overwhelmed in the sudden rush of water toppling down on them from either side. They sank as lead in the mighty waters; they went down like a stone into its depths; and in less time than it takes to tell the story, not a trace of their proud array remained.

The Song of Moses.—"Then sang Moses." The morning dawn revealed one of the most memorable spectacles of history. A nation of slaves, fleeing from their masters, had suddenly become a nation of freemen, and stood emancipated upon the shores of a new continent. The proud people, which for generations had inflicted such untold griefs upon them had suffered a humiliation from which it would take them generations to recover. The chivalry of Egypt was overwhelmed in the midst of the sea, there remained not so much as one of them left; and all along the shore lay the bodies of the dead, cast up from the depths of the tide. At this day a significant blank in the hieroglyphed memorials of Egypt tells the story of that overwhelming disaster. And there was given to Israel for all subsequent time an evidence of the trustworthiness of God, which compelled belief, not only in their great Deliverer, but in his servant Moses. It is thus, if only we are still, and commit to Him our cause, that He will vindicate us from the aspersions of our detractors, and bring out our judgment to the light.

And from that ransomed host, congregated there in one vast throng, broke forth an anthem, whose sublime conceptions of language rendered it worthy of the occasion, as it has been the model for triumphal songs in all subsequent times.

There is no thought of any but the Lord throughout the entire piece. The song is sung to Him and is of Him. It is He that triumphed gloriously, and cast horse and rider into the sea. It was his right hand that had dashed in pieces the enemy. It was because He blew with his wind, that they sank as lead in the mighty waters. It was through the greatness of his excellency that they were overthrown who had risen against Him. All the honours of the victory were reverently laid at his feet. Moses is not once referred to.

And the ease of his victory was so clearly accentuated. The waters were filled by his breath. He blew with his wind, and a whole army sank as a stone into the depths. He had but to stretch out his right hand and the earth swallowed the flower of the greatest army of the time.

Note the epithets heaped on God: "My strength and song and salvation;" "glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders;" whilst the men extolled Him as "a man of war," and dwelt on the anguish that must take hold of the inhabitants of Canaan when they heard the story of the overthrow; the women, led by Miriam, replied in one vast refrain, "Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath He thrown into the sea."

Whether or not this ode were composed beforehand in anticipation of this moment we cannot tell. It may have been, else how could it have been sung by those assembled thousands. But this in itself would be a striking token of the faith which dwelt so vigorously in the heart of Moses. It was his song pre-eminently, and in its closing notes we catch a glimpse of this forecast of the future, and the certainty of his convictions, "Thou shalt bring them in and plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance."

So does God turn our anxieties into occasions of singing—weeping endures for a night, but joy comes in the morning. The redeemed obtain gladness and joy; God puts gladness into their hearts and new songs into their mouths. Long years of waiting and preparation and obedience shall be rewarded at last, as certainly as God is God. If not before, yet surely when the eternal morning is breaking on the shores of time, we shall join in shouts of victory, which shall awaken eternal echoes, as with myriads beside we sing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb.

BAPTIST MISSIONARY CENTENARY.

The dawn of the centennial year of the Baptist Missionary Society lent exceptional interest to the prayer meeting held on New Year's Day morning at the Mission House, Furnival-street; hence we were not surprised to find the large Library crowded to the door. Rightly, a considerable part of the time was devoted to prayer, representatives of various societies taking part therein.

Rev. Joseph Angus, D.D., who presided, read Luke xi. 1-13, and gave a brief address based on the Lord's Prayer as recorded in verses 2, 3, 4, showing that out of seven petitions six are spiritual and only one deal with temporal needs. Moreover, the first three have to do with God, the hallowing of his name, the coming of his kingdom, and the doing and suffering of his will, a proportion which is by no means commonly observed in the prayers of Christians. Passing on to speak of the spirit of acceptable prayer, the Chairman said it was a missionary spirit, an unselfish spirit, dependent and contented, penitent and forgiving, cautious and watchful, and holy and obedient. We may ask what we will, but it must be in patience, loving trust, and full submission to the will of God our Father.

It was well that at the beginning of the year such a gathering should take place, in which brethren of many names met as members of the one body to call on the one Father. The Baptist Missionary Society was in very deed cradled and nourished in prayer, and prayer was still the secret of its being and its strength.

Dr. A. T. Pierson took as his motto the words of a dying missionary in Japan, "Advance on your knees." Only here and there had this secret been discovered; yet the whole history of missions revolved around the history of prayer. Few societies have been a more magnificent demonstration of the power of prayer than the Baptist Missionary Society. The work among the Telegus, for example, has not been exceeded by anything in history.

After touching on various illustrations of this power of prayer, the speaker concluded with an exposition of Matt. xvii. 20: "If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed...nothing shall be impossible unto you"; Matt. xviii. 19: "If two of you shall agree (symphonize) as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father"; and Eph. iii. 20: "Able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think."

Liverpool Seamen's Friends' Society.

The new report, speaking of the callousness and wickedness of some sailors, gives the following:—"A sailor was brought to God in the Mission-room—'The Forecastle.' One day he fell overboard, and was being swept away by the strong current, when some of the men called to him, saying, 'Sing us one of your Sankey's hymns now!' Providentially he was rescued by the life-boat, after which he offered to sing, 'Safe in the Arms of Jesus.' Needless to say, they slunk away ashamed of themselves."

The committee regret that the improvement in sailors is not so great as could be desired, yet there is good being done; upwards of six hundred pledges have been taken, lives have been renewed, drunkards reformed, homes made happy, and men made better servants. All the meetings are well attended, and often the room is not large enough. An aged widow said concerning her deceased husband: "He was a wonderfully changed man since he went to your meetings." Nearly 100,000 tracts were distributed at the Birkenhead Bethel. When the men go back to sea the Society follow them with a library-box and bundles of magazines. Inquiries respecting the work should be addressed to Rev. James M. Wilkie, Speke-land-buildings, Canning-place, Liverpool.

PERIODICAL LITERATURE FOR IRISH ROMAN CATHOLICS.—The Catholic, the new monthly edited by Rev. Thomas (late "Father") Connellan, has made a good beginning. The January number explains evangelical aims and excellent methods by which it is hoped to bring the Romanists of Ireland under the power of the simple Gospel of Christ. The Christian Irishman, edited by Dr. Hamilton Magee, begins its tenth volume in the same admirable spirit which always breathes through its pages. Mr. Joseph Connellan continues to contribute to its pages, which will, it is hoped, also contain occasional articles from his esteemed brother, the ex-priest, who modestly describes his new and very promising venture as the exponent of a "forward movement" in Irish missionary work. These excellent penny monthlies should both be read by friends of Ireland. They are published by Mecredy & Kyle, 49, Middle Abbey-street, Dublin.

PATIENCE UNDER AFFLICTION.

Why should I start at the plough of my Lord, that maketh deep furrows on my soul? I know He is no idle husbandman; He purposeth a crop.

FORBEARANCE.

Endeavour to be patient in bearing with the defects and infirmities of others, of what sort soever they be; for that thyself also hast many failings which must be borne with by others.—Thomas à Kempis.

All usefulness and all comfort may be prevented by an unkind, a sour, crabbed temper of mind,—a mind that can bear with no difference of opinion or temperament.—Albert Barnes.

THE HUMBLE MIND.

There is no true and constant gentleness without humility. While we are so fond of ourselves, we are easily offended with others. Let us be persuaded that nothing is due to us, and then nothing will disturb us. Let us often think of our own infirmities, and we shall become indulgent towards those of others.—Fenelon.

DESCEND TO ASCEND.

From all false heights of vain ambition, from obstinate self-will and self-assertion, from wandering paths of carnal appetite, one way, one only way leads back to the kingdom of righteousness, and peace, and joy—the way of childlike self-subjection, the way of humility, the way of penitence, the humbling of the sinner in the dust before his God.

Theodore Christlieb.

"Who is my neighbour?" He whom thou
Hast power to aid or bless;
Whose aching heart or burning brow
Thy soothing hand may press.

Thy neighbour? Pass no mourner by;
Perhaps thou canst redeem
A breaking heart from misery;
Go, share his lot with him.

A MODEL SERMON.

Peter's sermon was not a fine display of eloquence; neither was it a pathetic plea; nor a loud but empty cry, "Believe, believe!" It was simple, a plain statement, and a soberly earnest argument. Its power lay in the truthfulness of the speaker, his appeal to Scripture, the concurrence of his witnessing brethren, and his own evident faith. Above all, in the Holy Spirit, who accompanied the word.

—C. H. Spurgeon.

SIN AND PUNISHMENT DISCRIMINATED.

Pharaoh more lamented the hard strokes that were upon him, than the hard heart that was within him. Esau mourned not because he sold the birthright, which was his sin, but because he lost the blessing, which was his punishment. Many complain more of the sorrows to which they are born, than of the sins with which they were born; they tremble more at the vengeance of sin than the venom of sin; one delights them, the other affrights them.

Rev. Wm. Secker (17th Century).

TIME FLIES.

Time speeds away—away—away;
Another hour, another day,
Another month, another year,
Drop from us like the leaflets sear;
Drop like the life-blood from our hearts—
The rose-bloom from the cheek departs,
The tresses from the temples fall,
The eyes grow dim, and strange to all.

Time speeds away—away—away;
No eagle through the skies of day,
No wind along the shore can flee
So swiftly or so smooth as he.
Like fiery steed, from stage to stage,
He bears us on from youth to age,
Then plunges in the fearful sea,
Of fathomless eternity!

—Anon.

MISS NAIRN, describing her work among Mohammedan girls in Mogador says:—"We were out this morning at our little sewing class; it may seem trivial work, but it is by such work I fondly trust that we are gaining the confidence of the children, and the attention of the parents to the Word of Life. The father (of the home where we held our sewing class) brought the two eldest girls to see us in our new house on a recent Saturday. I wish you could have seen them. Everything was so new and strange to them, but they soon made themselves at home. I showed them what pictures I had; and one scene, a shepherd in the snow, followed by his dog, and carrying a lamb in his arms, fixed their attention. If you could have seen their faces as I explained what it meant, and told them of Jesus, the Good Shepherd, wishing to carry them in his arms, it would have cheered your heart and encouraged you to go forward casting in the good seed, knowing the Master will tend his own. While we were entertaining the children, our brother was busy with the father, telling him of the great salvation."

Messrs. Moody and Sankey.

(BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

"AFTER MANY DAYS."

The evangelists meet with many things that give them good cheer during their current campaign. They are not without the need of that, for it would be idle to pretend that there are not hindrances and discouragements that make the work less productive of result than it would otherwise be. One thing that rejoices them greatly is the prolonged stream of testimony given as to the widespread and permanent good accomplished through their previous visits. A fact that came to light last week is the best possible answer to those who think little good can be done by a single meeting in any place. At a small country town in Scotland the evangelists held a one-day mission seventeen years ago. As a result of that one service five young men were brought to decision, who are now filling prominent positions in life and testifying for the Lord Jesus Christ. A father in the town resolved that his household would have neither part nor lot in the meeting because of Mr. Sankey's organ. Nevertheless, three of his sons and a daughter were converted in connection with the visit.

One young fellow had determined to have some sport at the expense of the evangelists. The service was in the open-air, and he secreted himself under a cart near the platform, having provided himself with a good supply of peas and a catapult. He had not been long there before the words of the preacher laid hold of him, and the peas remained in his pocket. For several days he was in a state of great mental concern, but light broke in, and he is now one of the brightest working Christians in the place.

"YOU HAVE A FATHER NOW."

Another very touching case related to the evangelists was of a man greatly addicted to drink. He was such a terror in his home that when the children heard his footstep when he came home drunk, they would either hide under the bed or retreat through the window. One night he accompanied his wife to the door of a church in the town in which he lived, where Mr. Moody was to preach. He left his wife, intending to go to a public-house, but as there was a great throng, and his spouse was somewhat nervous, he returned, with a view of helping her through the press. Almost before he knew it he found himself carried right into the church, much to the astonishment of some who knew him, and saw him there. During the service he was seen to be weeping bitterly. He was talked with by Mr. Moody and others, and after a somewhat lengthened period of deep soul-distress he was led into the light of forgiveness and rest. He then left the meeting and went home. Hearing the customary step, and not knowing of the change that had transpired, one of his boys retreated under the bed. The father came in, but the mother had no cause to be afraid that night. He kissed her, and asked her forgiveness for the way in which he had treated her. The boy, wondering, looked out from his hiding place, when his father took him in his arms, kissed him, and said, "You have got a father now." Family worship was started that very night, though the father broke down in his prayer. The sons of the man's master were drinking sceptics, and could not believe that he would "stand"; but he has stood faithful all these seventeen years.

ELGIN AND DUFFTOWN.

The second day's meetings in Elgin were noteworthy for the attendances. The congregation in the Established Church on Monday afternoon was far the largest that has come out to a week-day Bible reading since this tour commenced. In the evening the great church was about full. Mr. Moody's sermon was on "Excuses." In this discourse he threw out a very wide net that seemed fitted to catch all sorts of people, as the very varied excuses that people offer were set forth and shown to be inadmissible.

A recent curious experience of Mr. Moody furnishes him with a fresh illustration showing the perversity of the human heart. The last person he spoke to in the inquiry-room in one of the towns visited was a man of eighty years of age, who, by his force of character, had risen from the position of ploughman to that of landed proprietor. His worldly prosperity, however, had not given him rest of soul or power over sin. This evening, Mr. Moody had a long talk with the man, striving to set the truths of salvation clearly before him. Some words of Christ were quoted, but the man replied that Mr. Moody was not Christ, and that Christ Himself must speak to him. Peter's testimony was cited, but the same objection was raised. The man seemed to be expecting some special revelation of the truth to his mind and heart; but it was only a shuffle so that he might salve his conscience for refusing to accept salvation on God's terms. His parting compliment to Mr. Moody was to the effect that he was much too conceited a person to do him any good!

The immediate reaping work at Elgin cannot be said to have been extensive. Not that there were not plenty of anxious souls, but the convenience for sifting the congregations so as to find them out were lacking. There is no lecture-hall or building adjacent to the Established Church, where inquiry-meeting work could be carried on. One can but hope that the "following up" time may be one of rich harvesting. Rev. Simeon Macphail, of Liverpool, once pastor of the Free High Church at Elgin, is a man of intense evangelistic zeal and courage. He has complied with a pressing request that he should continue the special effort in his old town throughout this week. He will be warmly welcomed and supported by the local workers, and great hopes are cherished as to the issue. Mr. Moody has remarked that he never preaches on "Excuses" without hearing of some results, and he was not without this experience at Elgin. Indeed, one young lady was so deeply influenced that she came to the railway station next morning to thank the preacher for his words. She confessed she was not a believer, but was desirous to be led into the light, and doubtless she will.

was made by Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey on Monday forenoon. The meeting was convened at very short notice, but the public hall was crowded by the dwellers in this quiet Banffshire village and the surrounding district. Dufftown is happy in having two such pastors as Rev. James Smith, of the Free Church, and Rev. Mr. Cumming, of the Established Church, who sustain towards each other the most brotherly relations, and work hand in hand for the spiritual good of the people. No doubt these two faithful undershepherds will see to it that the impressions made by the meeting will be fostered. Mr. Moody's sermon was on the love of God, and it is impossible to conceive of that Gospel message being delivered without finding deep lodgment in many a heart.

ONE DAY IN FORRES.

The evangelists reached Forres on Tuesday forenoon in the midst of a snowstorm. The snow soon passed away, but left the roads sloppy enough to discourage ordinary churchgoers. It was the weekly market-day, and that probably swelled the big gathering that filled the fine Mechanics' Hall. A more eager and attentive audience the evangelists could not have wished, and Mr. Moody tested their attention pretty well, for he spoke over an hour. To a still more crowded company in the evening he preached on Confessing Christ. This duty and privilege he pressed home with great power. The weather had not improved towards evening, and the distance to be traversed in the wet, dark night between the hall and the Baptist Church for the after-meeting may have prevented many from taking the step that the preacher so fervidly urged. The workers were kept busy, however, till a late hour, and real solid work was done for eternity.

The Forres meetings were attended by numbers from distant places, among them being a goodly contingent from Nairn, who drove home through the storm. There was an unusually large muster of ministers, who, it is to be hoped, will carry away some of the holy fire generated by the proceedings of the day, and give it scope in their own spheres of work.

MR SANKEY

has had his full share of work in these Morayshire gatherings. Perhaps nowhere has his wonderful voice been heard to greater advantage than in the Established Church, Elgin. At Forres he delighted everybody by his effective and impressive rendering of the Gospel song. He and Mr. Moody sojourned on Tuesday night at the Cluny Hill Hydropathic Establishment, where there were some sixty temporary residents. Mr. Sankey sang at family worship evening and morning, and on the latter occasion Mr. Moody also took part. From all that could be learned there was a division among the dwellers at Cluny Hill because of the evangelists. Some believed in them and their work for the best of reasons. Others believed not, and went so far as to consider it great presumption for them to speak "as though they carried the Gospel round about with them." A strange opinion truly!

A CALL TO PRAYER.

One hundred thousand copies of the following have been distributed throughout Scotland:—

As representing the joint committees in Edinburgh and Glasgow associated with Messrs. Moody and Sankey in arranging their Scottish campaign, we have felt moved to address to our fellow-Christians throughout Scotland, and especially in the towns and districts soon to be visited by these brethren, an earnest call to prayer. Many circumstances seem to lend urgency to this call at the present time. We must recognise God's hand in the prevailing epidemic which is raging in many districts of Scotland, and has involved multitudes in the sorrow of bereavement. Surely there is some special purpose of love in this widespread chastening! Surely we are encouraged to pray that there may come to our land a great common benefit from this common affliction! We have also many reasons in the social condition of our country for coming together to plead with God for a revival of true religion in our midst. In addition to intemperance and impurity, gambling and betting are working grievous harm among our youth. There is a manifest relaxation of reverence, even among professing Christians, for the Lord's house and the Lord's Day. And there is growing up everywhere a pagan temper which believes merely in the seen, for which the spiritual has no meaning or even existence, to which its own immediate gratification is supreme law.

But we have been specially influenced in making this request by the numerous indications of an earnest desire for united prayer which have been appearing in many directions. The longing for an outpouring of God's Spirit on the Church is at once widespread and intense. A believing expectancy of coming blessing is cherished by many. And now, in answer to an invitation, singular in its spontaneity and in its representation of all districts of Scotland, all grades of workers, and all sections of the Church, these servants of Christ (whom God has been pleased to use in a remarkable way in former years) have been sent among us. While we honour them for their work's sake, our trust is not in them. Our trust is in the living God who made them his ministers to the salvation of thousands. And we ask you to join with us in prayer, and to take opportunities of assembling, or of meeting with, your fellow-believers in your district, in order expressly to plead with God that He may give us even now times of refreshing from his presence.

In the most explicit way Mr. Moody has again and again said that he is leaning upon the prayers of God's people, and that he looks for all blessing in answer to believing supplication. With a reliance on God which has touched the hearts of all who have heard him, he is putting himself into God's hand to be used by Him. Shall we not hold up his hands, and those of Mr. Sankey, the Rev. John M'Neill, and all the friends who are his fellow-labourers? Shall we not continue in earnest intercession for our own immediate localities and for our land? And bold toward God, shall we not entreat Him to give us not a mere evanescent wave of impulse, but such an ingathering of the unsaved, and such a baptism of God's Holy Spirit upon all his people, as shall make every congregation a centre of converting power, and Scotland a mightier factor than ever in the salvation of mankind.

KEITH AND HUNTLY.

With one day at Keith and two at Huntly the evangelists closed their work for 1891. Keith has been generally regarded as an out-of-the-world, barren kind of region, where the hearts of the community are as callous as the country is bleak and bare. However that may be, the brief visit of Mr. Moody and Sankey was most hopeful in character. Probably the reason is to be found in the fact that for some time special Gospel has been carried on there by the Hon. Miss Waldegrave, Mrs. Stewart, of Logie, Mr. Butland, and other friends. The afternoon and evening meetings of Wednesday last week were held in the Free Church, of which Mr. Fitzpatrick is pastor. In the evening there was an overflow in an adjoining hall where Mr. Sankey took part. At an after-meeting many were found seeking to know more perfectly the way of life.

The last day of the old year and the first day of the new were given to Huntly. Here the evangelists were on what may be called classic ground in the history of modern Scottish revival movements. Many middle-aged men and women now scattered to the four corners of the globe must look back with tender feelings to the "Huntly meetings" of thirty years ago, when the Duchess of Gordon was wont to gather round her the choicest and warmest spirits in the evangelistic ranks of that time, and large assemblies heard the Gospel in the Castle Park from the lips of such men as Duncan Matheson, Henry Williamson, Brownlow North, Reginald Radcliffe, Donald Fraser, John Murker, Thomas Cunningham (the Glasgow butcher), and others, who were anointed of God as powerful heralds of the Cross of Christ. On their visit to Huntly seventeen years ago, Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey spoke and sang the Gospel in the park, but on this occasion, of course, the services had to be indoors. The Established Church, where the meetings were held, is a very large structure, and at the six o'clock meetings its capacity was well taxed. The early meetings were at noon on both days, and even then there were large attendances with a great muster of pastors from the surrounding districts. It need scarcely be said that Mr. Moody's addresses were most powerful, and the songs sung by Mr. Sankey greatly moved the hearts of the people. In addition to the four meetings mentioned, the evangelists conducted a watch-night service in the last hour of the dying year. Mr. Moody spoke of some "new things" that belong to the Christian life, and when the lapse of time had shown that 1892 was born Mr. Sankey sounded forth his fellow-worker's favourite song,

Then shall my heart keep singing.

The evangelists went straight from a large after-meeting on Friday evening direct on to Aberdeen, where they rested on the Saturday, preparatory to the work of the present week. What may be the final outcome of their seven weeks' work in Scotland at the close of 1891 eternity alone will reveal; but certainly they have spared no pains and no effort to make it fruitful in good to souls and glory to their Divine Master.

SABBATH AT ABERDEEN.

On Saturday the chief workers were cheered by the arrival on the scene of Rev. John McNeill. He has been suffering rather severely from cold contracted in London. His share of the work will be largely regulated by the development of circumstances; he is ready to go wherever he is most needed, and where his presence will help most effectually to fan the flame of Gospel fire throughout old Scotland.

A ROUSING TALK TO WORKERS.

Sabbath morning broke bright and beautiful over the cold grey streets of the granite city. The air was piercingly cold, but the hearts of the Christian people of the town were warm enough to prompt them to flock in crowds to the Music Hall, which was quite filled, galleries and all, soon after 9.30 a.m. There must have been present about two thousand of the very pick and flower of Aberdeen believers. Messrs. Moody, Sankey, and McNeill were supported on the platform by an array of local ministers and magnates, and there were a goodly number of ministers also scattered through the great congregation. It was a most inspiring sight to see such a concourse of earnest-minded men and women out early on a winter morning. After prayer by Mr. McNeill, Mr. Moody, Professor Simpson, of Edinburgh, and others, Mr. Sankey grandly sang "Throw out the Life Line." The Music Hall is very defective in its acoustics for speaking, but Mr. Sankey's wonderful voice rang through in a way that was quite thrilling. He also sang "When the Mists Have Rolled Away," the fine choir and great organ taking up the chorus.

Mr. Moody's half-hour talk was on God's commission to Moses, as recorded in Exodus iii., and the various excuses that Moses put forward for not yielding instant obedience. The address sparkled with good things, characteristic of the evangelist's simple faith and a zeal that is undismayed by seeming difficulties. Mr. Moody showed how Moses had to be taught that God can use the most humble instrument that is fully surrendered to Him. The lack of this spirit of humility and the strife as to who shall be greatest is one of the chief hindrances in the Church at the present day. Every true Christian worker must stoop to conquer. Moses pleaded that he was slow of speech; but God showed him that eloquence was not needed. We have got too many silver-tongued orators, said Mr. Moody; the Lord deliver us from mere human eloquence! Too often it is a snare, and hinders a man's usefulness. What we need is to give the people God's word, and let Him speak through us. A story was told of a stammering man out in the Western States who was converted through his little girl, who went to Sunday-school. He was afterwards instrumental in the planting of twelve hundred Sunday-schools, many of which developed into flourishing churches. An earnest closing appeal was made to Christians to listen to the call of God and to obey it. He will excuse us from his service if we insist on being excused; but we shall miss the luxury of doing good now, and we shall miss the crown hereafter.

The Scottish National Union of Young Men's Christian Associations and Fellowship Unions and Associations issue a letter, in which they say:—We would remind our members that, at the last National Conference in Glasgow, the delegates with one voice expressed their satisfaction at the prospect of an early visit to Scotland of our honoured and beloved brethren, Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey. We cannot but regard it as a direct answer to many prayers, and as fulfilling the longing desire of many hearts, that their labours in Scotland should have followed so immediately upon the National Week of Prayer on behalf of Young Men. We would see in this coincidence a call from the Lord to our Christian young men everywhere to continue in prayer and to co-operate heartily for the conversion of young men in those places which our brethren may visit. Our work in Scotland owes much to the previous visits of our brethren, many members of associations having shared largely in the marvellous blessing which attended their labours. In name of the National Union, we earnestly request you to unite with us in waiting upon the Lord for a mighty outpouring of his Holy Spirit, that their labours at this time may result in the conversion to Him of thousands of our young men and others, and the quickening of believers. —Yours in the Lord's service,

John Stevenson, Chairman } of the Executive
John Pairman, Hon. Sec. } Committee.

Please read this letter in your association meetings, and have it exhibited in your place of meeting.

THE MUSIC HALL MEETINGS,

afternoon and evening, were crowded—in the one case with women and the other with men. Mr Sankey gave two solos to each congregation, and then left for the overflows in the Free West Church. Mr. Moody preached splendidly on both occasions, the only drawback being the difficulty of hearing his words, owing to the wretched acoustics of the hall. There were large second meetings. In the afternoon many requests for prayer on behalf of unsaved friends were presented, and subsequently a large number rose for prayer on their own behalf. At a third meeting, on the orchestra, personal conversation was held with inquirers, and fruit was gathered. The second meeting in the evening was drafted into the Christian Institute adjoining. Mr. Moody addressed the men for some time, being joined later on by Mr. McNeill and some others. Personal effort again followed, and though the crust of reserve seemed very hard to break, it cannot be doubted that good and real work was done in leading men to spiritual decision. It was a full Sabbath for Mr. Moody, who had preached at eleven o'clock in Free St. Clement's Church, and thus took a leading part in no less than six different meetings during the day. But his labours were not in vain in the Lord.

GOOD THINGS FROM MR. McNEILL.

Afternoon and evening Rev. John McNeill preached to crowded overflows in the Free West Church, the congregations being composed of both sexes. In the afternoon the preacher made an overpowering appeal to timid Christians to declare themselves on the side of Jesus Christ; the text was I. Chron. xii. 32: "At the time, day by day, there came to David to help him until it was of great host like the host of God." As it was with David, so (said Mr. McNeill) it is with the cause and Kingdom of Jesus Christ. He is not to be always in the background. This is a day of revival, and Christ is saying to the men and women of Aberdeen: "Are you for me or against me? Take your side and stick to it." The Kingdom of Jesus Christ is to-day the one great going concern, whether in Aberdeen or in London, with all its massive wickedness and indifference. Let the people of Aberdeen catch the spirit and enthusiasm of the hour. If they were tempted to be ashamed of Jesus, let them for ever give up their shame. Pray, what is there to be ashamed of in Him? Why should any young fellow blush like a boarding-school miss if somebody should say he has been converted? Men were not ashamed of their sweethearts, or wives of their husbands; why should they be ashamed of Christ? There is nothing to apologise for in Him or in his glorious Gospel. Young people like to belong to a big thing; if ever they were drawn to a big concern, let them come out openly and boldly for Christ. The longer he lived the longer he was amazed that Christ should condescend to take their help and should want for it.

A PARABLE OF SALVATION.

At night Mr. McNeill took the story of blind Bartimæus, and expounded it in a most sparkling and delightful way as a picture or parable of the way of life, drawing a contrast between the rich young ruler and the blind beggar, both mentioned in the same chapter. He said that if the first was stripped of his accidental wealth there was little to choose between them. In coming to Christ it is sometimes an advantage to be poor; there is less to give up. Bartimæus was free from many of the hindrances that might keep back a substantial Aberdeen business man. In referring to the cry for mercy of the beggar when Jesus was passing by, he said, that though he liked things done decently and in order he felt strongly that it would be no violation of decorum if there was more downright clamour for salvation. If one of them should cry out there in the church, "Thou Son of David, have mercy on me," God would not consider it an innovation or an interruption. It would break in upon the thrice accursed routine of going to church and coming from church with dry eyes and drier heart. Earnestness about salvation is not unnatural or unbecoming, it is the stifling of soul need that is unreal and vulgar and false to the core. If salvation is worth having at all, surely it is worth asking for, as though it were really wanted. The crowd wanted to shut the mouth of Bartimæus, and the crowd wants to do so still. If there are signs of true soul-earnestness the cry is raised, "Silence, it is not refined nor æsthetic." The organ or the choir may play and sing as loud an anything, but the cry of the perishing sinner is to be scouted and scowled down. But let no anxious one be afraid of the cold shoulder or the wet blanket, even though it might be administered by their own minister. God would feed the flame of their heavenly desire till full satisfaction came. Mr. McNeill asked young converts if they heard people talking scornful things about the Moody and Sankey business, or about him, to turn round on them and ask what they meant, to stand in the thick of it and rebuke the scoffers. The preacher closed a very telling gospel sermon by appealing to his hearers to imitate Bartimæus, to strip themselves of their garments of self-righteousness, and come to Christ for healing. Very beautiful and pathetic was the picture he drew of the man with his restored sight, gazing on the Christ who healed him, "Jesus is a grand sicht for sair e'en." He could imagine that up in heaven Bartimæus kept as close to the Saviour as he could; he would be one of those who "follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth."

Mr. Sankey's Gospel Songs in the Free West Church were very telling, and fitted in well with the preaching. Everybody seemed to be of opinion that Sabbath was a day of great privilege for Aberdeen. Certainly the spirit of hearing was wonderful. Of a truth, the good old Gospel has lost none of its power to attract, to charm, and to save.

The Aberdeen papers of Monday give copious and good accounts of the Sabbath meetings. The Scottish Leader continues to do yeoman service to the good cause throughout the country by its full and special daily reports, written with great care and ability by Mr. F. Lawrence, who has been specially commissioned to describe the meetings from Nairn onwards.

Mr. Sankey has sent to America for his friend, Mr. J. H. Burke, a very excellent Christian singer, to come over and help in the service of Gospel song. Mr. Burke is expected to join the evangelists very soon. As the Mission proceeds the meetings get multiplied, and the demands of Mr. Sankey's particular kind of service are more pressing.

Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey expect to proceed next week to Montrose, Arbroath, and Forfar, going the following week to Kirkcaldy, Dumfermline, and other places in Fife. Mr. McNeill's future plans are not yet definitely arranged; they will depend on the development of the Aberdeen work.

The Social Scheme of the Salvation Army.

I.—FOOD AND SHELTER DEPOTS.

BY PEARL FISHER.

"I propose to go straight for these sinking classes, and in doing so shall continue to aim at the heart. I still prophesy the uttermost disappointment, unless that citadel be reached. If we help the man it is in order that we may change him."

These words occur in the preface of a book which, just over a year ago, created no small stir; has their promise been fulfilled? The new social departure of the Salvation Army gave rise to much speculation. Large schemes were boldly sketched, public interest was aroused, means were forthcoming, the £100,000 asked for was secured; and now, after the interval, many may be inquiring, What is being done? Are the original anticipations being fulfilled? Are the "submerged" being raised and rescued? In helping the sinking classes, is the higher end being kept fully in view, or is it being lost sight of in the hard and constant toil involved in finding food and work for the out-of-works, homeless and hopeless?

Some answer to such questions is wanted by many. The literature of the Salvation Army is abundant enough, but without discounting or discrediting it, outside and independent testimony may be looked for. The task of furnishing some such evidence has been committed to me, and I have been desired to impartially and carefully examine the whole matter, learn how the work impresses the helpers and the helped, and report fairly thereupon. The fact that the first report of the Scheme has now appeared seems to render such an enquiry all the more timely.

In order to fulfil this commission I have devoted several days to visiting most of the Shelters, all the Elevators, and the Farm Colony, pushing inquiries wherever it seemed likely trustworthy information could be gained. In giving the result of these investigations I propose, in this opening paper, to summarise what I saw at the Shelters and Food depôts; in a second paper to deal with the Elevators; and in a third paper to sketch the operations at the Farm Colony, closing with a few general remarks on the whole scheme and its issues. Hence anything I have to say by way of criticism or commendation will be left to the concluding paper.

THE WHITECHAPEL DEPOT.

A typical Food and Shelter depôt occupies the historic buildings in Whitechapel—historic, that is, in the annals of the Salvation Army, for there the Christian Mission, out of which the Salvation Army evolved, had its headquarters. It is now over fifteen years since I interviewed Commissioner Railton, then secretary of the Christian Mission, in these premises. Now, however, all is changed, and I found the ground-floor thronged with the starving, struggling poor, enjoying at minimum cost the wholesome fare. One wing is set apart for women, and, at the time of my visit, was crowded with factory girls, street-sellers, and the like, who, for a halfpenny or a penny, can satisfy the claims of hunger. Further on, a large room was full of men, of a similar class, spending on an average 2d. to 3d. each on soup, bread, potatoes and stew. From thirteen to fourteen thousand meals are sold daily at this depôt alone.

The floors above have been transformed into dormitories, accommodating 250 men, who pay 2d. per night for a clean bed, a wash-up, use of kitchen, &c. Each man has an opportunity of washing his shirt overnight, if he chooses, and finding it dry for him in the morning. Familiar as I am with common lodging-houses, I mark readily the contrast between the ordinary arrangements and those in the Shelter. Alterations are in progress in rear of the building, which will shortly add considerably to the accommodation and convenience of the place.

Passing through, I inquire of the officer in charge, "Are you full up usually?" and am assured, "We are crammed out most nights." "What about spiritual work; are you doing anything in that way?" The answer is emphatic: "Certainly; were we not sure we were doing work for the Master, we could not toil as we do here. We have our nightly meetings, not compulsory, although largely attended, and there we have all sorts. We speak straight to them; and we know of many who have been saved in this place."

THE CLERKENWELL SHELTER.

In Clerkenwell, hard by St. John's-gate, that relic of mediæval London, I visited another Shelter. Sometime ago sensational articles appeared in an evening paper as to the condition of this Shelter, but so far as I could perceive the sanitary arrangements are satisfactory. Doubtless any one who enters the dormitories or wash-up in the morning, just after two hundred men—some in a bad state—have turned out, will discover many traces of their stay; but the scrubbers are daily at work, and an hour or so afterwards everything is clean. The following extract from a letter written by Mr. W. R. Putterill, Chairman of the Sanitary Committee, Clerkenwell, will carry more weight on this point than any words of mine. Having referred to the "gross misstatement of facts" contained in the articles mentioned, he adds:—

> The Shelter is remarkably clean, all the floor-boards caulked, the bunks painted stone-colour, the walls lime-whited at the top and painted dado, no smoking allowed on either of the sleeping floors, well heated and ventilated, the floors are scrubbed three times a week, the leathers used as coverings have a dry rub daily, and a wash weekly with disinfectant. In the basement I found ten galvanised washing baths and six taps to procure water, five large roller towels; as to soap, a large piece is supplied for a halfpenny. The w.c.'s and urinals are on the trough system, with automatic flushing arrangements. I tested all appliances, and could in no single instance find fault. Now, as to the inch of dirt on the floor, it is concrete and swilled down daily, so I leave your readers to judge as to the amount of dirt there is.
> I went quite prepared to act in the interests of these our poorer brethren by enforcing the Sanitary Acts, but after very careful investigation I find you have stated, though in all good faith, the reverse of what is fact.

I interviewed several men lodging in this Clerkenwell Shelter, and their testimony was clear as to its satisfactory condition. Moreover they avowed that, under God, their coming to this Shelter had been the means of their entering a new and changed life.

THE WOMEN'S SHELTER IN SPITALFIELDS.

Another type of Shelter I found in Hanbury-street, Spitalfields. This is the Women's Shelter under the charge of shrewd though sympathetic women. Accommodation is provided for 250. All are accepted who come, however miserable their condition. The charge is twopence per night, and the kind of shelter such women can find elsewhere for twopence is better imagined than described. The doors are closed at eleven p.m., and the necessity for this rule will be obvious to all who have experience of such work. The Shelter is not intended to afford a cheap retreat after late hours spent in sin, but rather a means of escape from sin. The rule, however, is not inflexible; exceptions are allowed at discretion, as in cases of obvious necessity—when, for example, a policeman or some kindly helper fetches some wandering one discovered in the streets.

Primarily the Shelter is for elderly women, and many such, homeless and hopeless, haunt the East-end, who once had homes of their own—good ones, too, in some cases—but have lost them through their husband's cruelty or desertion, intemperance or death, or through their own wrong-doing. Varied as are the causes, the case of these friendless women is pitiful. Here they find a decent shelter for twopence, and often, in sadly forlorn instances, even this fee is foregone.

A separate dormitory is provided for women with children, and yet another for young girls, who for obvious reasons cannot be mingled promiscuously with the ordinary inmates.

The quiet, earnest officer assured me that the nightly and Sunday meetings are fairly well attended, that not a few love them and long for them, and that many have been convicted of sin and, it is believed, truly converted; though many, alas! will neither hear nor heed.

Next door is a bright little crèche for thirty infants. Here mothers may leave their little ones, on payment of threepence, while they go to work for the family living.

THE WORKING MEN'S METROPOLE.

In the Ark, Southwark-street, I found a Shelter of a wholly different kind. Known as the working men's Métropole, it is a superior lodging-house, such as foreshadowed in Chapter VI., Part II. of Darkest London. Here 174 beds are provided at fourpence and sixpence, the better class being cubicles. I may not detail, but was much interested in the kitchen, reading-room, wash-up, baths and other provisions for health and comfort. The dormitories are usually full up. The officer in charge was ready with many cases, attested by changed lives, in which men who had sadly fallen have been won by the grace of God, and are now seeking to live to his glory, and to re-establish their footing as honest and respectable citizens.

OTHER SHELTERS OPEN AND TO BE OPENED.

Shelters similar to those described are now in operation in the Horseferry-road, Westminster (200 beds); West India-road, Limehouse (140 beds); and Stanhope-street, Drury-lane (110 beds); while a new Shelter was opened the other day in Royal Mint-street, Ratcliff-highway, with accommodation for 170; and another Food Depôt and Métropole combined, has just been opened in Bethnal-green, with 120 beds. A cheaper Shelter, to meet the case of Embankment "dossers," is fitting up in the Blackfriars-bridge-road, with accommodation for 400. Here the price is but one penny, for which a man can work if without the modest copper. Another penny Shelter was opened a few days ago in Lisson-grove, with space for 800 men; so that shelter will be provided at a penny per night for 1200 poor outcasts. A food depôt is also open in Burne-street, next door to the Edgware-road Metropolitan Station. In the provinces there are similar Food Depôts, Métropoles, and Shelters at Leeds, Bradford and Bristol.

THE "PENNILESS" AND THE "MARRIED."

Looking over my Shelter notes, I may remark that the sad case of the absolutely penniless is not yet met, except by the means indicated above. None of the shelters are free. Whether or not it would be wise to open any of them free is a question I may raise later on. Further, married men (as such) are not dealt with. Doubtless a large proportion of the men are married, but whatever may have become of wife and family, the men enter the Army Shelter as single men. But every practical worker knows that the suffering among poor families is widespread and intense. For these something must be devised. This difficulty General Booth frankly admits in his book, anticipating its solution in due course. That solution has not yet been found.

From what I have told of my observations, it will be seen that the Food and Shelter depôts, opened by the Social Wing of the Salvation Army, are doing a real and useful work. They are alleviating much suffering and distress, and in so doing (as I have found on unmistakable evidence) are winning a hearing for the Gospel amongst the submerged men and women who have long felt themselves past hope and help.

THE HAVEN, SOUTHWARK.

This beautiful work of mercy in Trinity-street, Borough, conducted by Mildmay deaconesses, is, we learn from a brief note, not dealing with one class of girls only—for "the deceived and disappointed, the captive by drink, the defenceless young one on the verge, the deserted wife and the little child, all group around us. All these we seek to win and raise by individual treatment and careful classification. The past has been very cheering, and we praise God for girls helped, three, four, and five years ago, who now rejoice our hearts by their upright happy lives." The following jotting from the diary will illustrate the work:—

"Nov. 1.—Two or three old girls came in either for tea or meetings. A worker from Bermondsey brought two young girls in an exhausted condition, who said they walked from Bury St. Edmunds. Their story was—'We could get no work there, and had heard as how there was plenty in London, so thought we would walk up. I had 6½d. in my pocket, she had nothing. We were too frightened when night came to sit down and sleep, so walked all the time, except one day, when our feet was so sore, we sat down and must have fell asleep. When we got to London we wandered about and went into a place where we heard singing, where a lady was, and she brought us here. London is dreadful, and we was so frightened.' Taken in, and on investigation found they were two tidy, respectable girls, with terrible poor homes."

The Deaconess-in-Charge of The Haven writes:—"Will our kind friends please remember that often our girls arrive without one decent garment—(frequently they have to be destroyed)—therefore old clothing, old boots (specially small sizes), in fact almost anything can be turned to good account. Story-books we shall be very grateful for. We are anxious to start meals for some terribly destitute families. Communications should be made to Mrs. McNaghten, 9, Effra-road, Brixton, S.W.

For the Young.

WHERE THE SHINE CAME FROM.

"WELL, grandma," said a little boy, resting his elbows on the old lady's stuffed chair-arm, "what have you been doing here at the window all day by yourself?"

"All I could," answered the old lady, cheerily. "I have read a little, and prayed a good deal, and then looked out at the people. There's one little girl, Arthur, that I have learned to watch for. She has sunny brown hair, her brown eyes have the same sunny look in them, and I wonder every day what makes her look so bright. Ah, here she comes now."

Arthur took his elbows off the stuffed arm, and planted them on the window-sill.

"That girl with the brown apron on?" he cried. Why, I know that girl. That's Susie Moore, and she has a dreadful hard time, grandma."

"Has she?" said Grandma. "Oh, little boy, wouldn't you give anything to know where she gets all her brightness from, then?"

"I'll ask her," said Arthur promptly, and to grandma's surprise, he raised the window and called:

"Susie, O Susie, come up here a minute; grandma wants to see you!"

The brown eyes opened wide in surprise, but the little maid turned at once and came in.

"Grandma wants to know, Susie Moore," explained the boy, "what makes you look so bright all the time."

"Why, I have to," said Susie; "you see, papa's been sick a long while, and mamma is tired out with nursing, and baby's cross with her teeth, and if I didn't be bright, who would be?"

"Yes, yes, I see," said dear old grandma, putting her arm around this little streak of sunshine. "That God's reason for things; they are, because somebody needs them. Shine on, little sun; there couldn't be a better reason for shining than because it is dark at home."—Selected.

THE STORY OF LITTLE GUNGABAI.

BY REV. A. W. PRAUTCH, BOMBAY.

A LADY missionary of the C.M.S. in India gives the following sad account of a little girl who is a confirmed opium-eater:—

The parents wash clothes for a living, and since infancy regularly have drugged the little girl, that she might not trouble them while they were at work. The doses had to be increased from time to time, as the former quantity no longer had the desired effect. At the age of seven she still required one anna's worth of opium a day. The mother, who is an opium eater, desired to break her daughter of the habit. So she brought her to the Mission Girls' School, but said nothing about the opium habit. The child was placed in the infant class, and at about eleven o'clock the teacher found it difficult to keep the little one awake; finally she fell off the bench, and the teacher allowed her to sleep, thinking that, this being the first day at school, she was weary. In an hour the child awoke, and was so restless and impatient that she had to be sent home.

The next day the mother brought her again, against the little one's will, and explained that she brought her to school to break her of the opium habit. The lady missionary willingly and earnestly entered into the plan of saving the little one from opium. At about eleven o'clock the child screamed, stamped her feet, and although everything was done to quiet and please her, she had to be carried home. The third day this same scene was repeated, and she had to be given up. To the question whether she would come to school, she said, "No; I won't get any opium there; but I will if I stay at home." The mother explained that one-sixth of her salary (salary six annas a day) goes for opium for the child, seven years old, and if the mother hesitates about giving the money the child tears about as if mad.

This happened two years ago; the child is now nine years old, and can be seen any day lounging on the street (too drowsy to play), a puny, emaciated, confirmed opium victim, only one of the thousands sacrificed to British greed for revenue.

It is sad to think that, while we are telling the good news of salvation to individuals, our Christian Government is wrecking whole nations. Instead of being a blessing, are we going to be a curse to all the weaker nations that are under us?

A NEW YEAR'S MOTTO.

MATT. vii. 12.

ON the roseate golden threshold
Of another glad New Year,
Listen, 'tis the voice of Jesus,
Falling on each heart and ear.
Will you take this glorious motto,
Keep it all the New Year through,
Do ye even unto others,
As you'd have them do to you?

Sweeter, holier is the blessing,
Dearer is the gift that's shared;
Let the love that bought and saved you,
Shine in every deed and word.
O! redeem the fleeting moments,
For perchance they may be few;
Ever doing unto others
As you'd have them do to you.

Seek to bear another's burden,
Share another's joy or pain,
Sympathy is Love's own healing,
Tenderness is ne'er in vain.
Be ye loving, pure, and gentle,
Wise and winning, brave and true;
Doing ever unto others
As you'd have them do to you.

HARRIET JULIA EVANS.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., Jan. 10, Joshua vi. 20-27; Mon., Jan. 11, vii. 1-13; Tues., Jan. 12, vii. 16-26; Wed., Jan. 13, viii. 1-13; Thurs., Jan. 14, viii. 14-25; Fri., Jan. 15, viii. 26-35; Sat., Jan. 16, ix. 1-15. Office—13a, Warwick-lane, London, E.C.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. E. Arrowsmith and Mr. W. H. Roberts, Bedford, to Jan 18; Mr. H. Hutchinson, Wesleyan School, Crouch-end, Jan. 15 to 23; Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, Lyndhurst-road Church, Hampstead, to Jan. 15; Presbyterian Church, Wandsworth, Jan. 24 to 29; Mr. Josiah Spiers, Sevenoaks, Jan. 22 to Feby. 8.

Sailors' Rest at Salonica.

A SAILORS' HOME has been started at Salonica Bay, Turkey in Europe, conducted and managed by the two ladies of Mrs. Constantine's Mission. They have been enabled to come over from Smyrna, and on December 19 the first meeting was held.

I am sure your readers will pray that God's blessing may attend the work. It is an interesting fact that in this Turkish town there are no fewer than seventy thousand Jews, who are greatly oppressed by taxes and are mostly poor.

A. P. DAVIDSON, Lieut. R.N.
H.M.S. Agamemnon, Mediterranean Squadron.

EAST LONDON SEWING CLASS FUND.—During the past year this Class, meeting twice a week for three hours, has been held regularly, at Sidney-street, Mile End. In the winter months it consisted of about seventy women, most of whom were either widows, or the bread-winners of their family. For the work done in the Mission Room the women are paid 2d. an hour, and the 1s. a week thus earned often enables them to obtain some of the bare necessities of life which they would otherwise have to do without. One or more of the ladies interested in the Class, personally superintends the work once a week, when the women are either read to, or a few simple words are spoken on a passage from the Bible, and hymns are heartily joined in by all. Although the object of the Sewing Class is to give material help to the women without pauperising them, besides this, it affords an opportunity for knowing them individually, and for visiting them in their homes. Communications may be addressed to Lady A. Hobart-Hampden, 63, St. George's-road, S.W.

PRESENT DANGERS IN CHINA.

MR. W. HOPE GILL, writing from Wan Hsien, Sz-chuen, as to affairs in the interior, says:—

The many telegrams now being sent to the home country must bring no small amount of anxiety to all those who have relations and friends in this vast mission-field of China. The state of the country down below this seems in a very disturbed state, placards and books of the most opprobrious terms being freely scattered against all foreigners, but missionaries in particular. "To be found in every Yamên throughout China and in thousands of private libraries, is poison, whose sale should be stopped, a collection of documents called Blue Books of China. Two books of the supplement are devoted to Christian missions." I quote from an article of Dr. John's, per The Chinese Recorder for September, 1891, which continues: "Anything more false, disgraceful, and inflammatory it would be difficult to find, even among the vile placards of Hunan." This province of Hunan is by far the most anti-foreign in the Empire, and the Hunanese are supposed to be at the bottom of all the recent riots, and the propaganda of these above-mentioned placards now being freely disseminated.

We learn also from the same article that "the foreign Powers have decided that the Hunan publications shall cease, because they poison the minds of the people." The Cabinets of the foreign Powers concerned, we learn now, are insisting on Hunan being opened to foreign trade, &c, and that ere very long things may be very serious, should China not yield to the demands made. War must be the result, we fear, and then what may be expected? Nothing less or more than a rebellion against the Government to overthrow the present dynasty, for the secret societies are strong all over the Empire, and are awaiting a suitable opportunity to rise, such as the Government being engaged in war will offer!

I write to ask most earnestly for the prayers of God's children at this time on behalf of the large number of us, his ambassadors, now witnessing for Him in this vast heathen field. What we in the interior and our fellow-labourers in the Coast Provinces may be called upon to go through is unknown to us, but known to Him whose we are. May we act like our Master, and endure afflictions as good soldiers of Jesus Christ, counting not our lives dear unto us, with the one object in view—the extension of our Redeemer's Kingdom, and seeking that our Father's name may be hallowed come what may, we being kept in perfect peace. Thus would I beseech all our home churches to pray.

Midnight Meeting Movement.

DURING the last week of 1891, in various parts of London, the committee of the Midnight Meeting Movement held midnight and other meetings of the fallen. In order to revive the recollections of earlier days those attending were regaled with Christmas fare and entertained with lantern scenes of the Holy Land and temperance pictures. The pictures, accompanying music, and songs and hymns appeared to impress those assembled.

At one meeting, at which there were about 150 women, ten penitents came forward. At this meeting a mother and her daughter were present. They were in a very wretched condition, but the mother wanted to save her daughter from absolute ruin; and in order that she might no longer be a burden to her proposed, with many tears, to go into the workhouse if the girl would go into a home; and so it was arranged. The meetings were conducted by Mr. John H. L. Christien, and warm invitations were given to all who desired help to call at the Society's office, 8A, Red Lion-square.

THE EDINBURGH EMIGRATION HOME.—The discontinuance of the Home at 6, Lauriston-lane is announced in a circular just published, also the various reasons which have combined to make it desirable and even necessary. One of these is the sale of the existing premises, another the opening of other institutions having a similar object, and a third the advancing years of the excellent lady who, for twenty years, has directed it. During this long period, 708 children have been received, of whom 301 have been emigrated to Canada, "an immense majority of whom have done well." The earnest hope is expressed that "friends who have helped us will now transfer their aid to kindred institutions," among which, special mention is made of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and Mr. Quarrier's Orphan Home.

CENTRAL AFRICAN NOTES.

Dr. Stewart, of Lovedale, has, according to latest tidings, successfully completed his new missionary expedition to Kilundu's country, on the Kibwezi river. The route lay through a difficult and jungly country and across a very dangerous and waterless waste, the Taro desert. The party are in good health and spirits, and have been well received by the headman, Kilundu. Ere long, it is fully hoped a "new Lovedale" will be in course of formation in the heart of British East Africa.

Mr. A. R. Colquhoun, writing in The Times, states that Mashonaland has been occupied without any kind of trouble from the Matabeles and Mashonas; the troubles with the Portuguese and the danger of a Boer trek from the Transvaal seem at an end. Progress last year was exceptionally hindered by the unusually protracted rains, but everything now promises rapid extension. The greater part of Mashonaland he regards as adapted for colonisation—the land is well watered and, for South Africa, well timbered, a large section being also from 4,000 to 5,000 feet above the sea level. The telegraph from the south now extends to Fort Victoria, and will shortly reach Fort Salisbury. Besides the southern route now opened up, along which hotels and stores are springing up, there is an eastern route by Port Beira. From Manica, also, a good road has been opened up to Fort Salisbury.

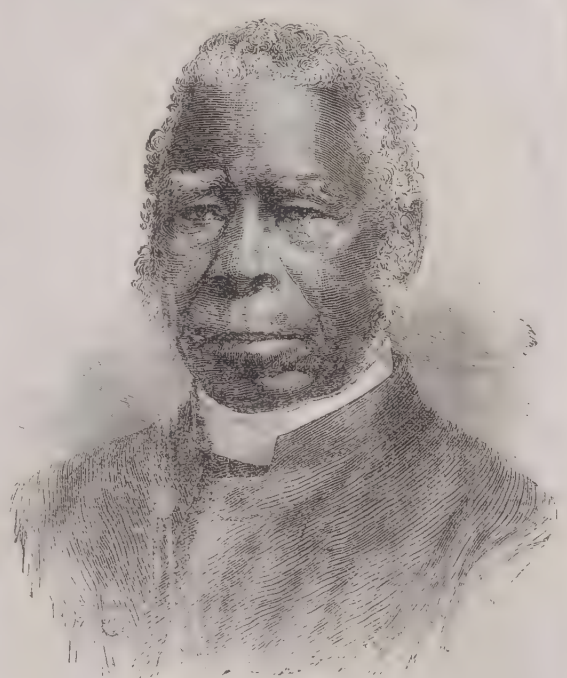
The report is anticipated with great interest of Mr. Theodore Bent's recent explorations in Zimbabye. From a missionary point of view, it is believed it will be of considerable value.

The Anti-Slavery Society raises a strong protest against the hiring of slave-porters by British officials—a course which, they maintain, must stimulate the slave trade, and encourage slave raiding, with all its consequent horrors.

The Secretary of the Free Church of Scotland Foreign Mission Committee (Dr. George Smith) has received a letter from Dr. Laws, which states that he has reached King William's Town, Cape Colony, on his way home. The letter further states that he intends to proceed to Lovedale, where he will leave four native students, whom he has taken from Central Africa to be trained. Dr. Laws was to spend some weeks in the colony, chiefly for the purpose of conferring with Rev. Dr. A. Murray and the leaders of the Dutch Reformed Church at Stellenbosch, which church co-operates with the Livingstonia Mission on Lake Nyassa. Dr. Laws may be expected in Scotland in the course of February. He has been for fifteen years labouring in Central Africa, and it is six years since he was last in this country on furlough. His long absence from Scotland, and the effective work he has done while absent, ensures for him a warm welcome on his return home.

Commenting on the journey to Garenganze of Mrs. Bird and Miss Gilchrist, with Mr. C. W. Bird's party, the editor of Echoes of Service says: "The deep need of the help of Christian women in Central Africa is well known. While rejoicing in the beginning made to supply this in the districts of Bihé and Bailundu, we may also give thanks for the setting forth of these two sisters for Nana Kandundu."

The large caravan, under the charge of Capt. Stairs, R.E. (recently of Mr. Stanley's expedition), which is making its way from Bagamoyo, on the Zanzibar coast, to Garenganze, is reported to have reached Tabora September 8. As it had been joined by smaller caravans, the number of armed men amounted to two thousand, and by this time they may have reached Msidi's capital. The alarm already felt in that part of Central Africa by the appearance of the small Congo Free State detachment will be greatly increased when this large force arrives. A very severe epidemic among cattle is said to have broken out in the region to the east of the Lakes. Wild animals also suffered from this disease, so that scarcity of meat was keenly felt by Capt. Stairs' caravan.



Their route is to be across the famous Lake Tanganyika, and as this would bring them somewhat in the direction taken by Mr. Sharpe, of the South Africa Company—against whom Msidi was prejudiced for coming that way—he may not look favourably on this caravan, but may fear to make any resistance, as the Katanga Company will probably be in a position to enforce its demands. Something more like European rule may thus soon be known in Garenganze, but the presence of so many Zanzibaris will be attended with serious drawbacks.

DEATH OF BISHOP CROWTHER.

The death of the venerable Bishop Crowther will cause widespread grief among Christians in Africa and friends of missions throughout the world. Some months ago a stroke of paralysis fell upon the Bishop, and such an event could not but cause much anxiety, for the Bishop had passed the limit of fourscore years, and had for a long time been in feeble health.

Just over two years ago, in our issue of Dec. 6, 1889, we gave a portrait and sketch of Dr. Crowther. As a lad, captured from slavery, his name was Adjai; on his baptism he was named Samuel Crowther, in memory of a clergyman in England whose ministrations had been blessed to the wife of Bishop Weeks, of Sierra Leone. In some interesting obituary remarks, The Record says:—

"Bishop Crowther's career is one of the most romantic in the history of Christian Missions. The slave-boy who became a Bishop has probably been the theme of more missionary addresses and allusions than Henry Martyn himself; for the story was one which touched the popular imagination. The public which first came to know of Samuel Crowther was a public to which the iniquities of the slave-trade were much more of a reality than they are to us, with whom even the American Civil War is getting a distant fact. Men rejoiced at any step which seemed in some sort an act of reparation to a cruelly ill-used race. Crowther's bility—his capacity for affairs, his tact in dealing with native races, his literary talent, and his ardour in the service of Christ—was hailed with satisfaction by many whose sympathies are not primarily enlisted in the cause of Foreign Missions.

"There were some who, when Mr. Crowther was consecrated first Bishop of the Niger Territory in 1864, felt that a new era had opened for the negro. Regarding the colour as a mere result of climatic influences, they saw no reason why the influence of Christianity should not at once begin so to work that the ancient glories of the Church in North Africa should be paralleled by new triumphs, evangelistic and literary. For a time the course of affairs on the Niger lent at least some countenance to this hope. But for some years of late the C.M.S. authorities have seen reason to fear that these hopes were premature. The Bishop had worked nobly, but with advancing years his control was, perhaps, less stringent than it might have been, and, to his sorrow, some of the agents proved unworthy of their trust. That the proof of this should have been amongst the last discoveries of the Bishop's active life is one of the saddest recollections men will have of his long and singularly varied career."

THE UNIVERSAL MERCY BOND MOVEMENT.—So far more than 11,670 Bonds have been formed, with probably some 860,000 members. This work of humane education is exerting a powerful influence.

HOMES FOR EURASIAN BOYS AND GIRLS, BANGALORE.—Miss Anstey has now sixty-two Eurasian children in this Home, and expects many more shortly, as food is already at famine prices in the district.

MR. SPURGEON: NEW YEAR MESSAGE.

The following letter from Mr. Spurgeon, dated Mentone, Dec. 31, was read at the morning and evening services at the Metropolitan Tabernacle on Sunday:—"My Dear Friends,—I believe I am right in reporting a greater change in the disease than could be spoken of before. It is still a great drain upon me: but as it has improved so far, I believe it will make more rapid diminution. What a joy it will be to be within measurable distance of the time to return to my pulpit and to you. I have not reached that point yet. Now, may the Lord cause the cloud of blessing to burst upon you in a great tropical shower. I am expecting this. Grateful beyond expression for all that the Lord has done and is doing, I am eager for more. Indulgence in covetousness is sinful, but not when we "covet earnestly the best gifts." All that I can do is to pray and expect. I am sometimes fearful lest anything in me should hinder the blessing; do you not each one feel the same fear on your own account? Before some sweet music is about to be heard there is a hush. Each one is afraid to breathe, lest the tone should be spoiled and the music marred. I feel just so at this moment. May no whisper that would grieve the Holy Spirit be heard in house or heart. Let all coldness, worldliness, difference, or selfishness, be put forth as the old leaven, that we may keep the feast of New Year without anything that defileth. The Lord Himself deal out to each one of his children a full portion, and to those who linger at the gate may the good Spirit give his gracious drawings that they may cross the sacred threshold this day. Peace be within the gates of our dear sanctuary and prosperity within the doors. For my brethren and companions' sake will I now say, 'Peace be within thee.'—Yours to serve when I can, and to love unceasingly, C. H. Spurgeon."

THE LONDON CITY MISSION.

On New Year's Day it is customary for the City missionaries to assemble for mutual encouragement and to hear an address. Last Friday this New Year's address was delivered by Rev. Dr. Pierson, at Exeter Hall, when nearly the whole of the 504 missionaries employed by the Society were present.

Rev. Robert Dawson, who presided, said that the object of the Mission is to extend the knowledge of the Gospel among the inhabitants of London and its vicinity (especially the poor), without reference to denominational distinctions or the peculiarities of Church government. To effect this object, missionaries of approved character and qualifications are employed and paid by the institution; and the object of these yearly gatherings is to encourage the men to persevere in the work. Last year alone the missionaries paid 3,614,938 visits and calls, of which 279,145 were to the sick and dying. Testaments and religious tracts were distributed in large numbers, whilst the indoor meetings and Bible-classes held numbered 48,636, with 22,335 additional indoor meetings in factories, workshops, penitentiaries, &c. There were 10,484 outdoor services held in addition. The result was that 587 persons were restored to Church communion, 1063 families were induced to commence family prayer, 1874 drunkards were reclaimed, 482 fallen women were admitted to asylums, restored to their homes, or otherwise rescued, 5556 persons were induced to attend public worship, and 6174 children were sent to Sunday-schools.

Dr. A. T. Pierson took as his subject the word "Service," a word which he urged his hearers to examine well and bear in mind throughout the year. What, he remarked, had been done in the past was sufficient encouragement for the future; but additional encouragement, he thought, would be derived if his hearers took as their motto the word "Service." The principle of "service" was to "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," and its secret communion with God.

Mr. George Williams briefly addressed the missionaries upon the words, "I will bless thee, and thou shalt be a blessing." According to custom, Mr. Williams afterwards presented each of the missionaries with two handsomely-bound volumes of "The Biblical Treasury."

REV. W. G. LAWES, F.R.G.S.,

Missionary to Niué (Savage Island) and New Guinea.

FORTY years ago two boys ran about in the pine-woods of Mortimer West, in Berkshire. Here, also, they attended a school kept by Mr. C. Pinner, their parents' home being at Aldermaston, two miles distant. Those who believe that God fashions special workmen in his own inimitable way will note that in this lonely spot was begun the training of missionaries who have occupied two of the loneliest stations in the mission-field, and who, through weary years, have persistently and successfully worked to raise the natives from the darkness and degradation of savagedom to happy Christian fellowship.

WILLIAM GEORGE LAWES, the elder of the brothers, after six years of business life, was accepted by the London Missionary Society, and sent to its institution at Bedford for training. In November, 1860, he was ordained in Trinity Chapel, Reading. Having married Miss F. Wickham, they left London in the John Williams, and arrived at Niué (Savage Island), Aug. 20, 1861. He was the first resident missionary, but the island had been for fifteen years occupied by zealous Samoan teachers, to whom God had given great success. The work had arrived at that stage when European aid was necessary to maintain discipline among the Christians, to produce literature, raise the standard of education, and train a native ministry.

On the arrival of Mr. Lawes there were only seven or eight heathens out of a population of 4500. In six months there was not one professed heathen, and over two hundred additional members had been added to the churches. Comparing the island with what it was fifteen years before, Mr. Lawes said, "Then no foreigner would have dared to land, nor been suffered to live on the island. Anarchy and bloodshed prevailed. The people had rebelled, and killed all their chiefs. For some years they had lost all faith in their gods and priests. While Christians were mourning that Savage Island was closed to them, the Great Master of the Vineyard was preparing the soil to receive the precious seed of the Word."

From the first month after arrival, Mr. Lawes had a class of sixteen young men in training as teachers. They were also sent as preachers on week-days to various stations. As soon as possible, Mr. Lawes took up the work of translation of the Scriptures. In February, 1863, whilst that was in progress, the Mission sustained the loss of the Samoan teacher, Paulo—the father and founder of the Mission. In October, 1849, he landed among savages clamorous for his life. In 1863 the whole population mourned the death of this able and loving teacher, whilst Mr. Lawes lost an invaluable pundit. At that time, also, about 130 of the finest young men were carried off by Peruvian slavers to the Guano Isles, while some were shot in their canoes. The morning after, the natives held a mass prayer-meeting, and an old warrior, who in former times would have been the first to retaliate, prayed for the murderers and kidnappers, that they might obtain mercy ere they died in their sins.

Thus, with steady progress, the solitary European missionary plodded on—receiving letters once a year from the outer world—until in March, 1867, when the beautiful new ship, John Williams No. 2, was wrecked on Savage Island. A number of missionaries and the crew were temporarily housed by Mr. Lawes, and the whole of the Polynesian missions suffered much, until the John Williams No. 3 appeared on those seas, which she has traversed to the present day.

The efforts of Mr. Lawes were not confined to the spiritual needs of the people. An epidemic of dysentery appeared in 1863, and much time was taken up in dispensing medicines. It was noticeable that the hand of God was recognised in this by the people. Their previous prejudice to foreigners had arisen from the fear of new diseases being introduced; but now in no one case did Mr. Lawes hear the new disease attributed to the missionary. Many of the Christians died giving unmistakable evidence of their faith in Christ. A young woman, whose husband had been shot by slavers, said when dying 'Kua Maama' ('It is light'). Thus to long-lost and degraded Savage Islanders, reared in the cruelties of heathenism, light came at eventide.

On Mr. Lawes' arrival, the houses were wretched hovels. He was convinced that such dwellings exerted a baneful influence, and, with Mrs. Lawes' help, he gave them all the stimulus possible to build good houses. The teachers' houses were made as models, and the furniture these good men produced would not disgrace an English mechanic's home. Speedily respectable, white-washed cottages sprang up in every village. As in all places during a transition period, there were in each of the settlements a few wild young men, who would have rejoiced in the subversion of all order and religion, while the cessation of that fear, which the reign of "club law" produces in savage minds, made them more bold and troublesome. The old custom of each village making its own laws was a frequent cause of dispute and fighting. The people, however, were anxious to keep better order, and, as the result of their questioning the missionary, they established a monthly parliament for the whole island, to meet at Alofi, where he lived. Each of the six settlements sent six members, while constables and judges were appointed to deal summarily with the evil-doers.

The people were not slow to appreciate the benefits which the Mission bestowed, and their offerings in money, cotton, and cocoanut fibre usually exceeded £300 per annum. In March, 1868, the Mission was reinforced by Rev. Francis E. Lawes, whose name is associated with the later growth of the Mission, as that of his brother, "Misi Lao," is with its earlier history. The first stage of European oversight may be summed up thus:—twelve hundred baptized, native ministry educated, New Testament, Genesis, Exodus, and Psalms translated.

Rev. W. G. Lawes left Niué on furlough in January, 1872, and was requested by the directors of the London Missionary Society to join Dr. Macfarlane in the New Guinea Mission. Some islands had been previously occupied in Torres Straits, but Mr. Lawes was the first European missionary resident in New Guinea when he landed at Port Moresby in 1874. Whilst in England he was delighted to learn that five Niué teachers were on their way in the John Williams to help him in New Guinea. In exchanging their own healthy island for that sickly land they had to leave twenty-one children behind them at Niué. Mr. Lawes noted that significant fact at the time with the remark, "Their feelings are as strong as ours."

It had been decided that the headquarters of the Eastern branch of the Mission under Mr. Lawes should be on the beautiful harbour of Port Moresby. Arriving there with the missionary steamer Ellengowan and the barque John Williams, they interviewed the chiefs in the cabin of the latter. Their desire was still strong to have a missionary, and the land on a hill between the villages of Hanuabada and Elevara was given as a site for a mission-house. These villages are built on poles in the sea. The crews of the two vessels and the teachers wrought with such a will that in four and a-half days the house was advanced enough for occupation.

The great attraction to the natives was Mrs. Lawes and her son, little Charlie. The house was crowded with naked savages from dawn to dark, and only their fear of evil spirits made them retire to their houses in the sea, The people at first had attended the services as a novelty, but they said at the close, "We have come to hear you preach, and now we want something to eat." Food not being forthcoming, they soon ceased to attend, though many were within sound of the preacher's voice while they were at work; and frequently a man or woman would shout, in reply to something the teacher had said, "That's a lie!" Their desire to have teachers came solely from a wish to get beads, tobacco, and food.

Within the first year of his residence at Port Moresby Mr. Lawes set up a small printing press, and produced a sheet alphabet, which he styled "The first step towards giving the people the Word of God." With steady, patient toil he has held on to his great purpose, and the last step has just been taken. In September, 1891, the final sheets of the complete New Testament, translated by Mr. Lawes into the Motu language of the south-east coast of New Guinea, were printed by the British and Foreign Bible Society, and corrected by the translator.

Mr. Lawes' attention was not solely confined to the district around Port Moresby and to translation, but in the early days of his work there he did much pioneering work along the coast, placing new teachers, examining the work the others had done, and bringing those who were ill to Port Moresby for careful nursing. As converts began to multiply, the most suitable were brought to reside with him for training as teachers, and during 1882 a college was built at Port Moresby in which twenty New Guinea teachers and their wives, now at work, were trained and educated. Herein the New Guinea Mission differs from most others in its early, rapid, and continuous success. We are accustomed to a long sowing time, then the slow appearance of the first fruits. Here, however, men have been found dark and ignorant, with the unrestfulness of the savage—stalwart warriors who, wakening at dead of the night, would tremble at the rustling of leaves and the soughing of the wind, for might it not be the bewitching spirits passing by! or the breaking of dry sticks under the tread of a foraging pig would inspire the idea of bloodthirsty marauders from a neighbouring village, with whom they were at enmity. In such a case, certain death awaited them and the dear ones who lay sleeping around.

Here, then, unto these dark homes light and peace have come; the stalwart warrior lays aside his spears and club for the book, and the inquisitive arrogance of the savage is succeeded by the docility of the Christian; the voice trained to war cries is now raised in neighbouring villages, and, as a messenger of peace, he tells the good news of salvation. The rapidity with which this miracle of grace is performed startles us, but time has shown it to be real. This change, though wrought primarily by the Holy Spirit, has been done through the patient toil of the humble Polynesian teachers, and the strenuous and watchful care of the European missionaries. Though hampered by the twenty-five dialects spoken, Mr. Lawes has made the language of the most active trading tribe—Motuan—the vehicle of communication, and now the London Missionary Society is about to erect a training institution to be conducted on similar methods to those at Samoa and Rarotonga. Mr. Lawes, who has just left England, has been asked to undertake the establishment of this college, and to be its principal.

Our space will not allow us to refer to the details of this Mission, but the following brief resumé by Mr. Lawes of the progress of the past ten years in the Eastern branch of the Mission is striking, though it possesses only the features of a "half-told tale," the best half of which, he truly says, "is greater than figures or pen and ink can describe."

Mr. Lawes writes:—

Sixteen stations were then occupied; now we have fifty-three. We had then three European missionaries and thirteen South Sea Island teachers, but no New Guineans; now we have six (not counting one in West) English, and thirty South Sea Island missionaries, and in addition twenty New Guineans. The attendance at our schools has greatly increased, so that not less than two thousand children are now in attendance. A church had just been formed in 1881, and numbered about ten; now we have in the Port Moresby district, 375 church members, and about seventy-five in the other districts. Then no portion of the Scriptures was printed in any language of South-East New Guinea; now we have one Gospel in one dialect, four in another, and the whole of the New Testament ready for the press. We had no college then, but we have one now with ten students and their wives. Missionary contributions have been begun, and the first "May" meeting held at Port Moresby. Books have been printed in six different dialects, and all have readers. The change is greater than figures or pen and ink can describe, but in the next ten years it should be greater. "According to your faith be it unto you."

The last fact of interest about New Guinea is that, notwithstanding two years of famine, the first May Meeting has been held, and the following collection made, which stands unique in the annals of missions:—

325 spears; 65 shell armlets, 92 bows; 180 arrows; besides shields, drums, shell necklaces, feather and other ornaments, sold for	£20	0	0

As our readers will see in the portrait herewith, Mr. Lawes possesses the first key to native hearts—a handsome face and stalwart figure, which repeated attacks of fever have not marred.

Although this notice has been confined to Mr. Lawes, he has not stood alone. During these thirty years of patient and unceasing toil an "alter ego" has stood by his side. Of her labours, natives and teachers, missionaries and Government officials have borne unanimous and admiring testimony, while godless traders with grateful memories tell, though in coarser strains, of the pluck and energy of "Misi Hahine." Mr. Lawes spoke simple truth in saying recently, "For whatever I have been able to do I am indebted to the loving, unwearied help of one whose energy has never flagged, and whose courage has never failed."

If any further bond than their strong love were needful to bind the hearts of these devoted missionaries to New Guinea, it is to be found in the small burying-ground at Port Moresby, where what is earthly of bright little Percy, their youngest son, peacefully awaits the Master's call, while his spirit stands in that Presence—a visible token of their faithful service.

BRISTOL CONFERENCE.—Mr. J. A. Vicary writes announcing the seventeenth Conference of Believers, intended to take place on January 12 and 13. He asks all to join in believing prayer, that the Holy Spirit of God may so direct and rule the hearts of all, that the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be magnified, and that the Conference of 1892 may be made an occasion of abundant revival and blessing to his people. The suggested subjects are, on Tuesday, "Waiting Upon God: its Character and Consequences," and "Walking With God: its Privileges and Power." On Wednesday, "Working for God: its Requirements and Reward." The following brethren from a distance are expected:—Dr. Neatby, Messrs. G. W. Hucklesby, J. W. C. Fegan, Thos. Newberry, Douglas Russell, Spencer Jones, and W. H. Bennett.

The Week of Prayer.

"Awake, awake, put on strength, O Arm of the Lord! Awake as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. Art thou not it that hath cut Rahab and wounded the dragon?" This will be the burden of the Church's cry this week, and the same response will come as came of old, "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city; for henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean."

We are drawing very near to a great crisis. Before twenty more Weeks of Prayer have passed, that great era the Times of the Gentiles will probably have run out; and the witnesses of Jesus have done almost nothing to evangelize the world. In all the world's history no such weighty responsibility was ever so trifled with; no such possibility of laying up treasure in heaven was ever offered to the angels, yet how carelessly they have been allowed to pass away.

If the Church of Christ will yield herself to be used in answering her own prayers, the answer will come in floods, and before the twenty years are half over, the whole world will be evangelized

We respectfully appeal to all who lead in these meetings to keep before them our Lord's last great commission. All increase of blessing to the Church as a whole, or to individual believers, must express itself in more earnest effort to make known his Gospel to the heathen.

There will be prayer for the deepening of spiritual life, and for more entire consecration to the Lord Jesus. But to seek these blessings for no other purpose than the increase of our own happiness is vain. If we would be yielded to God it must be as instruments of righteousness—as vessels for his use—as members of his body by whom He may carry out his will.

There will be prayer for the Holy Spirit's power for service. But this can only be given in proportion to our willingness to be his witnesses to the ends of the earth, wherever He may direct, who stopped the way to Troas that Macedonia might receive the Gospel.

There will be prayer for children in school and at home, and for young people in business life. But Christian parents can only expect such prayers to be answered, as they are careful to select schools where the spiritual life and health of their children will be made a prominent concern, and put them to "honest trades" for necessary uses (Tit. iii. 14). Is it not also necessary that while children are readily given up to go abroad for worldly advancement, Christian parents should cease to talk about sacrifice when God calls their children to the mission field?

The great hindrance to our Lord's triumphant return is the Church's apathy in regard to the world's evangelisation. If we would hasten his coming, we must see that the Gospel is preached for a witness unto all the world. We trust that this Week of Prayer will serve to lay upon the Churches everywhere a deeper sense of the high privilege and solemn responsibility committed to them.

MONDAY, JANUARY 4th.

THE WEST-END MEETINGS.

These meetings, being held daily in the Portman Rooms, Baker-street, have so far been well attended.

On Monday the subject was: Confession, Humiliation, and Praise.—Humiliation and Confession: Personal, social, and national sins; inconsistency, slackness in prayer, rivalry, worldliness, pride, strife, and other sins. Praise for all spiritual blessings; for our union at the throne of grace; for our Great High Priest; for one faith, one hope, one common salvation; for the real unity of all believers, and the growing desire for its fuller manifestation; for the rich blessing upon the late Florence Conference. Prayer that believers everywhere may become more entirely consecrated to the Lord Jesus, more eager to realise their high calling, and less conformed to the world; that those who are laid aside from active service through age, infirmity, or affliction may enjoy much of the Lord's presence.

Gen. Sir R. PHAYRE, K.C.B., presided, and, having read Psa. li., briefly introduced the proceedings by dwelling on the value of prayer, and especially united prayer, such as now being offered throughout the world by Christians of many denominations. One thought seemed to him to enhance the importance of the Week of Prayer, and that was that as we look around us, in accordance with our Saviour's teaching, we see tokens that the times in which we live are verily fulfilling his word: "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of Man." The mystery of iniquity is at work among us. We see the inspiration of the Word denied, the Atonement derided, and the Holy Ghost rejected. Soon, therefore, as in the early days, we may expect to hear the solemn words: "My Spirit shall not always strive with men."

A season of prayer followed, in which Mr. D. Matheson, Revs. M. Washington, R. Taylor, and others took part.

Rev. FILMER SULIVAN, Vicar of St. Matthew's, Bayswater, read Isa. vi. 1-8, and said: There are three very important dates in these verses. The first is the date of confession—"Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." What had caused the confession? Simply the sight of the Lord in his glory. Nothing brings any one more speedily to contrite confession than a vision of God by faith. When the eye of faith is opened by the Spirit of God to behold him, then, like Job, like Isaiah, and like John, we fall on our faces confessing our sin.

There is another date, that of changing. When is that? Immediate on confession. No sooner is the heart broken than it is added: "Then flew one of the seraphim unto me, having a live coal in his hand. . . Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away and thy sin purged." Lo, this; nothing else. We have an altar, a sacrifice, a priest—Jesus only. We need no other. He is sufficient for our cleansing. His blood and merits applied by the Holy Ghost meets our every need.

The third date is that of response: "Then said I, Here am I; send me." Confession having been made, cleansing having been realised, there is prompt readiness to do the will of God; to be his messenger in free, glad service, at home, in business life, or abroad among the heathen, as He may direct to the glory of his name.

There was a good attendance in the large room of the

CENTENARY HALL,

Bishopsgate-street, devoted to Monday's meetings in connection with Whittington-avenue, Y.M.C.A. During the first hour—from twelve to one—the meeting was under the guidance of Rev. W. HASLAM, M.A., and was marked by much readiness and fervency in prayer. Special petitions were made on behalf of men absorbed in the business of the great City, and for God's ancient people in the neighbouring Houndsditch.

Mr. N. R. HUGHMAN, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., read Daniel ix. 3-11, 17-23; and in connection with the appointed subject of "Confession, Humiliation, and Praise," Mr. HASLAM mentioned some striking and gracious results which followed England's response to the call to prayer from Lodiana more than thirty years ago, tracing the growth of the observance of the annual week of prayer all over the world. The powerful effects of prayer were seen in the removal of obstacles to missionary enterprise and the opening of various countries to the Gospel, into which, however, labourers for God are still but slowly entering. The many topics of prayer appointed for the week must surely be crowned by the one great need of the enlightenment of the Holy Ghost upon the failure of Christians to come up to God's measure of spiritual attainment. Believers seem to come very short in appreciation of the presence of the Holy Ghost, and in giving honour to the Spirit of God. It is a cause for praise to be spared to have part in these wonderful times when God is so marvellously working. Not more than twenty years ago it was needful to contend for the truth of a present salvation, but that necessity seems to have passed away, and now it would appear that God is seeking to deal specially with believers, in order that they may be instruments of his hand and witnesses to the reality of Divine things. When the Lord comes He will ask what each of his servants has done for Him; therefore, now is the time for self-examination. When we testify of the things which we have seen, God has promised to increase our spiritual vision. Christ died not only to save us, but also to redeem us unto good works, and no power can hinder the gracious work of the Spirit to this end if we do not stand in our own way. The way to a more effectual usefulness is to humble ourselves before God, and yield to the Spirit for his full use of us in service to God's glory.

The second hour, from one to two o'clock, was under the direction of Rev. CHAS. SPURGEON, and was occupied with the subject of and praise for his goodness." After uttering a fervent supplication that God might draw nigh to his waiting people, Mr. SPURGEON gave out the appropriate hymn, "Praise Him, praise Him, Jesus our blessed Redeemer," and read Psalm ciii. Then came hearty prayer from some one in the body of the room, that God might save the great ones of the city, and lead them to transact their business in the fear of the Lord; also that Mr. C. H. Spurgeon might come out of the furnace more than ever fit for the Master's use, and yet declare to thousands what great things the Lord hath done for him. This was followed by a solemn appeal from another friend, that God would search the hearts of his people.

Rev. CHARLES SPURGEON proceeded to expound the psalm which he had read. God must have the first place in praise, if our song is to be lasting. There is something large, too, about the word bless. The soul of singing is the soul in singing. Oh, for an increase in our songs of praise, giving to God our best and our most, and, like the psalm, ending, as we began, with God. David suggests the exercise of memory, and tells first of forgiveness, then of soul health, followed by daily protection and provision, with special interposition and kindly grace. All through the psalm the bells of grace are set ringing, and, to change the figure, David marshals God's hosts, ministers, works, in the great orchestra of praise. David himself joins them in the great song of praise in which we also are privileged to have a part as we sing of our great High Priest, the common salvation, real unity among believers, and growing desire for its increase, and of countless other spiritual and temporal blessings.

SAILORS IN RATCLIFF HIGHWAY.

UNDER the auspices of the Seamen's Christian Friend Society a large number of sailors were entertained at tea in the Bethel contiguous to the London Docks last Friday evening, after which a public meeting was held. The chapel was filled with sailors from every clime, and as numbers continued to arrive an overflow meeting was held in the reading-room adjacent. Mr. M. H. Hodder presided, and urged all to give their hearts to God, and make the festival one for their souls as well as bodies.

Rev. G. J. HILL (secretary of the Society) remarked that this was the last New Year's festival that would be held in the building, as in March next this old warehouse, which, used as a Bethel for forty-six years, had been the birthplace of many souls, would be demolished in order that a new and more commodious edifice might be erected, in which the ever-increasing work might be carried on to better purpose. The Asylum for Destitute Seamen close by had been secured, so that the efforts of the Society could be continued.

Mr. and Mrs. and the Misses MAYNARD, Mr. W. H. SEAGRAM, Mr. W. R. LANE, Mr. BARCLAY (manager of the Sailors' Home), Mrs. HILL and Miss MESSER addressed the men, pointing out the uncertainty of life, and urging the unconverted to seek the Lord while He may be found. When the call for testimonies was made, one after another of the seamen rose and told of his wretched, lost condition before he was induced to accept Christ as his Saviour; but now all was changed.

Closely as the chapel was packed, scarcely a man attempted to leave, although before the close some had been there nigh on five hours, held together simply by Gospel addresses and singing. At the close each sailor was presented with a parcel containing woollen articles as a memento of the occasion. But the most remarkable feature of the proceedings was the number of men remaining to the inquiry meeting. Several conversions were the result; many more were seriously impressed, and upwards of thirty pledges were taken.

MR. McCULLOCH, superintendent of the Bengal Village Mission, in the Hooghly district, has been suffering from low fever, while two of his native superintendents have been very ill, owing to the swampy region in which they are working.

DR. BAEDEKER'S RUSSIAN MISSION.

I KNOW that many hearts have been pleading at the throne of grace on my behalf during the weeks which have passed while I have taken up again my service to the prisons in Russia. Our gracious God has indeed richly answered your prayers. He has set before me an open door which no man has been able to shut. He has enabled me to visit many desolate and oppressed ones, to bring them the consolations of the Gospel of God's grace, neither has He failed in supplying the strength and health required for this service. The journeys have not been without some unusual hardships, of which many young men might be ambitious—sleeping on boards instead of downy beds, travelling night and day, and living on food which the rough country supplies; riding on horseback over steep and high mountain passes, and then again being tossed up and down on a springless cart. All these are Russian experiences, and grand opportunities for the testing of faith; but again and again I would rejoice in the everlasting "Ebenezer" God. He has not failed to uphold me and to keep me hitherto.

I have to-day arrived at Erivan; yesterday (December 13th) I with my companion spread the feast in remembrance of the Lord, at a post station within sight of old, old Ararat. It was as if the ancient witness of God's faithfulness was looking on when we, the children of this generation, were feasting in remembrance of a much more glorious fact than that of God's saving Noah. But whilst we looked in adoration at the faithful witness of God's mercy, very suddenly a thick cloud hid the whole scene from view, as if to remind us that He abideth faithful, though clouds may hide the sight of his testimony. Ararat was still there, only hidden by a cloud, by-and-by to appear more glorious still. My companion and I had our feast seasoned by reading the marvellous ways of God with Noah, who had found grace in his sight; and our thoughts went over the wide, wide regions to the many millions of the descendants of Noah in all parts of the world, to whom the Church of God is debtor. Oh! that God's compassion would swell the bosom of his Church, and that going forth to reach the dark and neglected children of Noah might be the foremost thoughts of our hearts, and the burning desire in every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ.

My interpreter is a young Armenian, a husband and a father, whose heart is full of zeal for the Lord's service. After his first day with me in a large prison, where, in passing from room to room, he translated for me Tartar for the Tartars, Armenian for the Armenians, and Russ for the Russians, his heart was full of praise for being allowed to spend such a happy day in the service of the Lord—the happiest of his life, he said. His service is unremitting, caring for me as a son would for his father, and always ready by night or by day to supply any need. Pray for him also when you pray for me. I have yet before me some important visits—Etschmiazin, Kars, Alexandropol, Tiflis, Baku, Kutais, &c. On my arrival in Batoum from Odessa, I judged it best to push on to the far-away mountainous parts. I visited Elizabethpol, Schushah, Gerüsi, Nakhitschevan, Erivan, &c. Hitherto our Father has favoured us with beautiful weather, such as has not been known in these parts at this season for very many years.

I have just heard that dear aged Sarkis Hambarzoumow, of Schemachah, has been called home, at the age of eighty-four. He was for some years associated with Count Zaremba, and after years of great and sore trials old Sarkis gathered up the threads of the Lord's work in that part of the Kaukasus. Zaremba was called to his rest without being permitted to see any fruit of his labour, but the seed sown by him sprang up and is still springing up after many days. The work in the prisons is deeply and sadly interesting. Pray that the Lord of the harvest may send forth many labourers, and that the seed sown in weakness may bear much fruit in power.—I am ever, in Gospel bonds, Yours sincerely, F. W. BAEDEKER.

Erivan, Transkaukasia, Dec. 14, 1891.

SOUTHERN MOROCCO.—The workers at Mogador report quiet, steady work, and a few inquirers. The brethren at Mazagan make special mention of interesting conversation with Jews seeking after the truth. In Marrakesh Mr. M'Math's Medical Mission abours have been blessed in various ways.

AMERICAN NOTES.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The Chicago ministers are loud in their protest against the décolleté style of dress worn by ladies in public assemblies. They have scored the fashionable world because of its "undress parade." This outrage against modesty and morality has been severely denounced by leading pastors. They believe that by means of pulpit condemnation the evil will be lessened. Their outcry is, that Paris has been outdone by Chicago, and that women of the wealthy classes in their dress, or rather lack of dress, offend against high art, against dignity, and against purity. The evil of this modern device of Satan can neither be measured nor described.

Recently it was supposed that Dr. McGlynn, the seceder from the Papal Church, and the great opponent of the "Italian machine" would yield to the Pope's ultimatum, and humbly submit to the dictum of the Sacred Congregation. Archbishop Corrigan, of New York, expressed the hope that the rebellious priest would seek reconciliation and return to the bosom of the church. With this in view he proposed certain basal conditions. But all his calculations have been rudely set aside. Dr. McGlynn has given his ultimatum in vigorous Anglo-Saxon. He refuses to go to Rome; he refuses to sell his conscience; he refuses to notice Dr. Corrigan's proposition; he refuses to recognise the Pope, and he dares the hierarchy with all its intriguing agents.

La Grippe is again working mischief in our midst. As yet it is milder in type than formerly, but it is widespread and harmful. Many persons of distinction are laid aside, and not a few deaths have already taken place. Pastors and physicians are confined to their rooms and unable to attend to their duties.

One of the most tragic disasters, outrivalling all of the atrocious perpetrations of recent years, occurred a few days since in New York. A young man appeared in the office of millionaire Sage, a prominent money speculator, and demanded of him the sum of one million and a quarter dollars. He threatened that if he met with refusal, to blow up the whole building with a dynamite bomb, which he carried in a bag. His demand being refused, he instantly executed his purpose. Mr. Sage miraculously escaped, but several persons were killed, and others were wounded, while the dynamiter was blown into fragments. There were many providential escapes from a horrible death in adjacent offices. Among others that of Mr. D. W. McWilliams, the life-long friend of Mr. D. L. Moody, and superintendent of the Sunday-school connected with Dr. Cuyler's church. Mr. McWilliams is known as an earnest Christian and a most generous donor. We rejoice that he escaped unhurt. Such princely men cannot well be spared, when so few of our influential citizens are found on the side of aggressive Christianity. For the gentleman whose life was so providentially shielded from damage, we give thanks to God.

It is a cause of much grief to the godly that the editor of The Christian Advocate, New York, should have attacked evangelists in his address before the recent Methodist celebration in the West. Dr. Buckley's opposition to evangelists has been outspoken, but his attacks lack the force of calm argument. It is not gracious to cry out against any class of men, because individuals ranked with that class may have proved unwise or unworthy. But the famous controversialist jabs his pen into worthy and heroic men whose labours compare well with the founders of Methodism. He feels it his duty to warn his Methodist brethren against the "patent evangelists," some of whom he avers make contracts for pay per capita—so many conversions, so much money!

It has been our privilege to be intimately associated with nearly all the American evangelists, and we can avouch that never has it come to our knowledge that any evangelist charged for his labours so much per convert. If any have been guilty of this folly, it certainly is not just to stigmatise evangelists generally on that account. Notwithstanding the constant attacks made on evangelists from many sources, the facts are incontestible that the revivals of recent years and the great ingathering of souls have been chiefly due to the instrumentality of the evangelist.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

In these days of "forward" movements it is gratifying to find this association, which has its headquarters at 185, Aldersgate-street, E.C., successfully striving to extend the good influence which it has exerted for some nineteen years upon many of those whose travels in the interest of the great commercial world afford such magnificent opportunities for making known the riches of God's grace.

Though the annual meeting, held on Monday, December 28, came so close upon Christmas, the attendance of members and friends at Exeter Hall was very cheering to the promoters of the gathering. Those who came so early as five o'clock had the pleasure of hearing some good vocal and instrumental music, varied by the clever recitations of Miss Alice Mary Vince.

After tea, Mr. Geo. Williams took the chair at seven o'clock, and called upon Mr. Leonard Courtney, the general secretary, for his report. This twelve months' review breathed the spirit of thankfulness to God that the Association had amply justified its existence by shewing itself to be a living agency for extending God's kingdom upon earth. The membership might have been easily doubled, but that it was restricted to those who are really in sympathy with aggressive Christian effort; nevertheless, it had been increased by the addition, during the year, of no less than 190 names, making up the roll to a total of 1312. The weekly assembly, every Tuesday, from 1.15 to 2, at the office in Aldersgate-street, and the gathering held on the last Saturday of each month, from 2.30, had been well attended, and had proved spiritually refreshing meetings. The year had been made memorable by a new departure in the employment of the whole of Mr. Courtney's time for the visitation of various large towns for the purpose of establishing local branches of the Association. Mr. Courtney, like other speakers, dwelt on the importance of bringing Christian influence to bear, especially upon the many young men who are continually increasing the ranks of those "on the road." Though much of the work has to be done in faith, some cheering instances of conversion and restoration were graphically detailed. Then came mention of the fact that the number of libraries in the commercial rooms of various hotels had been increased by eight during the year; while Bibles had been sent to the bedrooms of many hotels beyond those houses previously supplied with this best of books. Through the beneficent fund, too, many cases of very great distress had been quietly but effectively relieved.

Mr. C. W. Stokes told how the Southsea branch, formed in May last, now numbers twenty members; and offered the practical suggestion that a register should be kept at every hotel, whereby members of the Association might be better known to each other.

Mr. Hudson Shepperd, of Belfast, testified that the Irish branches had already reaped a large measure of success, and that the members were actively engaged in the good work of winning their fellows, and even customers, to the love and service of God.

Mr. C. Twite gave a good account of the Ulster branch. Mr. T. B. Miller followed with some earnest words about boldness for and faithfulness to Christ in the commercial world. After Mr. P. J. Whitaker's very satisfactory financial statement,

The Chairman congratulated the Association upon the successful inauguration of the forward movement, and hoped to see increased godly influence brought to bear upon commercial circles by Christian men who move therein. Such a Society was an undoubted benefit to employers, and, therefore, worthy of increased support by those among them who profess the name of Christ. The past year had been one of much rejoicing for the Association, and he believed that much further prosperity was before it.

THE ANTI-OPIUM MOVEMENT.—Two important meetings have been arranged. The first, a demonstration at Mr. Spurgeon's Tabernacle on Monday evening next, to be addressed by Dr. Pierson, Mr. Cheok Hong Cheong, and others; the second, a meeting in Exeter Hall on the following evening, to protest against the opium iniquity in India as well as against the practical re-establishment, within the past few months, of the iniquitous system of State-licensed vice, the abolition of which was ordered by a resolution of the House of Commons in 1888. Mr. Alfred S. Dyer is expected to make some startling statements on this subject at the latter meeting, which is to be presided over by Mr. Benjamin Scott, Chamberlain of the City of London.

DR. PIERSON AT THE TABERNACLE.

A friend, a commercial traveller, tells me that he had been troubled by doubts and scepticisms of various kinds, which had been pressed upon him in his journeyings, but that he had met with Dr. Pierson's book, "Many Infallible Proofs,"* which had completely unpuzzled his mind, and stablished, strengthened, settled him more firmly than ever in the truth. Wishing to make others partakers with him of the blessing received, he has sent copies of the book to friends as New Year's gifts. The benefit derived from the book led him to go and hear Dr. Pierson at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, very much to his edification. This increased from time to time, so that he induced another friend to accompany him. This gentleman had been a very earnest and well-taught evangelist, who had become cold and careless. He was deeply moved by the doctor's preaching, and about two o'clock in the morning he awoke with the conviction that he should sign the pledge. He resolved to do so, but when he got up he began to recede from his determination. In his perplexity he solemnly prayed for guidance from the Word, and was distinctly answered, so that he went off at once to Mr. Charrington of whom he had some knowledge, got a pledge card and signed it.

The commercial traveller, himself a very intelligent Christian and a sucessful evangelist, is enthusiastic in praise of Dr. Pierson, and feels sure that a large number of conversions must have taken place during his ministry at the Tabernacle, while believers have been richly instructed and edified. His teaching has chiefly been in exposition of the Epistle to the Romans. The great edifice has of an evening been completely filled. M.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC REVIVAL.—In a "Call to Humiliation and Prayer" Mr. James L. Wood, of Cranbrook, Oakleigh-park, Whetstone, says:—"As the most unwearied efforts are being made on all hands to make what is now called 'The Great Catholic Revival' in these realms a real success, it has been suggested that a meeting should be convened at Exeter Hall, on the evening of the day of the opening of Parliament, for true Protestants, in unwavering faith in the all-sufficiency and protection of Almighty God, and in reliance on his Word, for humiliation, prayer, and exhortation. As the expense likely to be incurred in summoning such a gathering would amount to at least £100, I willingly offer to contribute £10 towards a fund for this purpose, which I have sent to the Protestant Alliance, by which Society this effort can best be initiated." Other subscriptions are being received by Mr. A. H. Guinness, Secretary Protestant Alliance, 9, Strand, W.C.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For fourteen days mission in Baptist Chapel, Sheepwash, N. Devon, by Mr. W. H. Dawe.—For a mission at Hadleigh, Suffolk, by Mr. J. Brown, of the Evangelisation Society, Jan. 10 to 24; also for a mission at Blackburn, Jan. 31 to Feb. 21, by the same evangelist.—For special meeting to-day (Thursday) for women engaged in "Venice" at Olympia.—For three weeks' mission in the United Methodist Free Church, Parson Drove, Wisbech, Cambs., by Mr. Ernest Bailey, of the Evangelisation Society, Jan. 3 to 24.—For fifteen days' mission at Copford, by Mr. H. Collins, of the Evangelisation Society, from Jan. 3.—For Manoel Melin, Portuguese Scripture reader, arrested for conducting the funeral of a native Protestant girl, at the Portuguese cemetery at Madeira, and who is to be tried without a jury.—For a mission by Mr. William Forbes at Buxton, to commence on Sunday, Jan. 17.

SOLDIERS AT GIBRALTAR.—The annual Christmas Tea, on December 25, proved a complete success. It is estimated that no fewer than 450 soldiers and sailors passed through the Institute. Ministers of various denominations attended, as well as other friends. During the evening earnest Gospel addresses were delivered, Temperance honours awarded, together with two stars of merit, which are presented each Christmas to two members of the Blue Ribbon Society, selected by the committee, who have done most work for the cause. Rev. T. Murray, Presbyterian chaplain, alluded in warm terms of praise to the growth of the work. Having been on the Rock six years, he had had an opportunity of watching the development of the Institute, and was confident of the good work it was doing. Towards the close of the evening 120 Christmas gifts, kindly sent out from England by Christian friends, were drawn for by lots, which caused a great deal of merriment and excitement. These gifts consisted chiefly of "huzzifs," which are very useful, and can be stowed away in the men's kit-bags. Any information about the Institute will be gladly furnished by the Honorary Secretary, Colonel H. S. Clarke, "Essendene," The Downs, Wimbledon.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which, of course, are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, JAN. 10.—2 CORINTHIANS XI.

The Simplicity of Christ (1-6).—"Bear with me in a little foolishness" (R.V.). As the bridegroom's friend he was eager to bring his Church to the Bridegroom of souls, and this made him anxious lest these false teachers should disturb the simplicity of their love. 3. See how the New Testament corroborates the Old. There is no doubt in the Apostle's mind as to the agency of the serpent in the temptation. "The simplicity and the purity that is toward Christ" (R.V.). 4. There would be some excuse if there were another Saviour and another Pentecost preferable to those they already possessed. 5. Since they had nothing better to give than he had given, he was able to hold his own with them, though they were "pre-eminent apostles" (R.V.). 6. The Apostle constantly refers to the rudeness of his speech as if he were very conscious of it, but he was very confident in his knowledge as given to him by direct revelation from God.

His Boasting (7-15).—At Corinth he maintained himself by his own work and by the gifts of other churches; he now asks significantly if this were a crime in their eyes, and the cause of their turning from him. This was his boast throughout Greece, not because he did not love them well enough to take their money, but because he desired to deprive his opponents of all ground of accusation. 13. Satan has always counterfeited the Gospel and its methods, and we need to fear a white devil even more than a black one. He came to Christ quoting Scripture.

A Marvellous Life of Suffering (16-33).—The Apostle here steps down from his lofty position as a servant of Christ, and poses as a foolish man in boasting of his sufferings in the cause of Christ, that he might show his opponents that even in their own field he was at least their equal, if not their superior. If they pointed to their sufferings for the Gospel as a reason why they should be heard, how much more had he a claim to be heard, whose sufferings had been so much more excessive? 20. They had suffered these men, by their teachings and example, to rob them of their freedom in the Gospel, how much more might they suffer him, whose words and work had been so entirely unselfish and Christ-exalting? 22-31. In these indignant questions we get some idea of the points in which they vaunted themselves over him. Their contention probably was that they were superior to him because they followed St. James and the Hebrew Christian school, but none of them had suffered for the Gospel as he had done. 33. In this enumeration there is omitted the record of all that the Apostle Paul suffered afterwards, so that we should add all that series of sufferings which lay between his arrest in the Temple and his appearance before Nero.

MONDAY, JAN. 11.—2 CORINTHIANS XII.

Third Heaven (1-6).—What a sublime phrase "A man in Christ." We only reach our true station when we are in Him; men are only truly men when the Man is in them and they in Him. Probably the Apostle had kept the secret to himself all this time with rare reticence. 3. What a contrast between the ludicrous "let down" of the basket, in which he dangled to the ground and this "caught up!" How indifferent the man of God may be to the derision of men. 4. Paradise and the third heaven are evidently the same place. 5. In himself one of the weakest of men, he had nothing to boast of, but he could say much of Him to whom he owed everything, and whose grace was conspicuous in his weakness.

The Thorn in the Flesh (7-10).—We do not know what this was; whether stuttering speech or ophthalmia, or some deformity in his body, he speaks of it as "a stake," the prolific source of much suffering, the stronghold of Satanic temptation. It was permitted as a make-weight to his revelations. 8. God does not always answer our prayers as we expect, but if He does not take away the thorn, He makes it the occasion of the manifestation of more grace. 9. So far from being ashamed of his weaknesses or alleging them as an excuse for doing nothing, he gloried in them, and claimed a proportionate increase of the strength of Christ. Instead of complaining of infirmity, use it as an argument with Christ that He should put forth more strength to make you equal to the work He has given you. 10. God is very jealous, and only lends his strength to such as have none of their own, that they may not be injured or led to boast. A weak wire may carry electric force enough to move the machinery of a factory.

Affectionate Remonstrances (11-21).—11. Those "pre-eminent apostles." R.V. mar. See also xi. 5. 12. Note that patience was as much the sign of an apostle as mighty deeds. Patient people stand high in the catalogue of God's saints. 14. He insists, even though he come again, on following the same line of procedure as before, so that none might accuse him of making game. 15. "For your souls" (R.V.). 16. Apparently, he had been accused of taking money through Titus, if not through his own hands; but this also had no basis in fact. 20. With tenderest manner, he urges them to put away all that would cause him grief when he came, or compel him to act harshly or peremptorily towards them.

TUESDAY, JAN. 12.—2 CORINTHIANS XIII.

Closing Exhortations.—The apostle proposed to have a thorough investigation of the abuses which had crept into the Church, and if needs were, to call witnesses. 2. "I have said beforehand, and I do say beforehand, as when I was present" (R.V.). 3. The proof that Christ spoke in him would appear in his words when he came. Ought not Christ always to speak in us? 4. We share the weakness and the power of Christ: weak as far as this world's standards of judgment are concerned, but strong in spiritual power. 5. Self-examination is often a wholesome exercise, especially when we attempt to try others. Indeed, we may doubt ourselves before we doubt them. If we are truly converted, the Lord Jesus is literally and really an occupant of our inner life, though, alas! too many of the rooms of our heart are blocked against Him, and too seldom do we allow Him who is in us to shine out through us in word and deed. 7. If they were real, surely he who had been the means of their conversion must be so. 8. Oh, blessed inability! would that life in each of us were always on the side of truth. 9. "Your perfecting" (R.V.). 10. Be careful to use Christ-given power for Christ-given objects. 11. The more we cultivate love and peace to man, the more we know of Him who is a fountain of each. 14. A proof-text of the Trinity: God's love the source; Christ's face the stream; the Holy Spirit's fellowship making the latter our eternal portion.

THE EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

Galatia was a province in the centre of Asia Minor, and derived its name from the Gauls who settled there, as also in the modern France. Jews were found there in large numbers, attracted by the opportunities of trade.

The Apostle visited this region in his third missionary journey (Acts xviii. 23). The converts, evidently composed largely of Jews, or of Jewish proselytes, showed great eagerness and affection at first; but when the Apostle had left them, they fell easily under the pernicious influence of the Judaisers, who followed him everywhere.

Their object seems to have been twofold; first, to represent the authority of the Apostle as inferior to that of Peter and others, from whom they said he had derived it; secondly, to insist on the observance on the part of the Gentile section of the rites of Judaism, and especially of circumcision.

On hearing of this intrusion, he wrote this urgent letter from Ephesus (A.D. 54): vindicating his own authority, as based on direct revelation; and insisting, as in the Epistle to the Romans, of the all-sufficiency of Christ's work.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 13.— GALATIANS I.

The Introduction (1-5).—The Apostle, in opposition to the cavils of his opponent, who dogged his footsteps, and endeavoured in every church to undermine his influence, begins this Epistle by strongly asserting his independence of human teachers. For "by" read through (R.V.) 4. Note that the death of the Lord Jesus was directly intended to promote the sanctification of the believer. We are detached through his death from the world which hated Him, and cast Him out (vi. 14). And in this He was the exponent and agent of the Father's will. It is the will of God that his children should not belong to or be identified with the present age, which is passing away. 5. The ages will not suffice to utter all God's glory.

Their Inconstancy (6-10).—"A different Gospel, which is not another." There is no other Gospel, and that which men offer as such is a perversion of the genuine article. 8. "Anathema" (R.V.). 10. These strong statements made it clear that he was not, as his foes alleged, a self-seeker. He had no thought of currying favour with any, but of doing his work in the sight of God. How searching is the statement, that the servant of Christ cannot seek to please man, or he forfeits his position (Matt. vi. 24).

His Apostolic Authority (11-24).—This was a strong point, on which he continually insisted, that he had had direct communication with the risen Lord. When men discount his statements as Pauline, we may well recall these assertions, and realise that the special form in which he cast the message of the Gospel was due to direct instructions received of Christ through the Holy Spirit (Acts i. 2). 13. "Conversation," i.e., "manner of life" (R.V.) 14. "Equals," i.e., in age or standing. 17. We all need these Arabias. It was not, perhaps, for long, as the "three years" evidently includes the whole period from his conversion (Acts ix. 26). 18. The sudden termination of this time with Peter is referred to in Luke's brief outline (Acts ix. 28). 19. The period was too short for him to have received the teaching and influence which his adversaries alleged. The relationship of James to our Lord is clearly attested (Matt. xiii. 55; Mark vi. 3; Acts xii. 17). 21. These words corroborate Acts ix. 30. 22. Our church life should be in Christ, as planets in the Solar system. 24. Let us see to it that men do not glorify us, but God in us (Matt. v. 16).

THURSDAY, JAN. 14.— GALATIANS II.

His Visit to Jerusalem (1-10).—This is probably the one referred to in Acts xv. 2. There was a concurrent warrant for this visit; first, in the revelation from Christ, and next in the request of the Church; thus, always, in the lives of those who walk with God, clear indications are given of duty. 3. This fact is adduced to show that the leading men in the mother-church had no sympathy with the views which were being propounded. 4. This verse should be connected with what follows. These false teachers would have robbed the churches of their liberty and of the full truth of the Gospel, therefore the Apostle was obliged to withstand them. 6. That is, they told him nothing that he did not know before. 8. Notice this wonderful in. It is easy to work when God works within. The weakest can be mighty when the Mighty One Himself is making use of the earthen vessel. The R.V. gives for for in. Happy are they who have the God of Jacob for their help.

Peter's Inconsistency (11-13).—The best men are men at the best. This on Peter's part was a grave inconsistency, especially after the lesson of Acts x. 13. How easily is a bad example followed. The fear of man bringeth a snare. 14. Paul states this remonstrance that he made, not to advertise Peter's sin, but to show that in an important crisis he was able to correct so great an Apostle, indicating his own apostolic authority.

The Apostle's Argument (14-21).—This is probably the outline of his argument with Peter, valuable for all time. He addresses Peter as having ordinarily abjured the prohibition of Judaism, and asked him what right he had in seeking to bring the Gentiles under their yoke, as he was doing, at least by example. 15. He went back to the first principle, that we are justified by faith, apart from works. A blessed truth surely for us all, for if we are trusting in the Saviour, however weakly, we stand accepted before God. 17. Peter, by going back to Jewish ceremonialism when he was at Antioch, implied that he had done wrong in ever deserting it, and this was equivalent to saying that Christ had led him into this wrong, so making Christ "the minister of sin." 19. "Died." (R.V.) Like cured like. He refers, of course, to the death of Christ "under the law," at which moment all who are one with Him died too. 20. "I have been," and therefore "I am crucified." We must make real day by day that which is our position in union with Christ. Our death with Him does not destroy our individuality, "Yet I live." Though our special temperament remains as it was, in proportion as we die to self we become possessed with Christ. Our death, and his life in us, are to each other as the respective globes of a sand-glass—the emptier the one, the fuller the other. "The faith which is in the Son of God" (R.V.)

FRIDAY, JAN. 15.—GALATIANS III.

Abraham's Children (1-9).—"Bewitch" might mean "fascinate." Here, Christ's crucifixion is referred to in its objective sense, as in the previous chapter in its subjective. 2. They had received, through faith, the gift of the Holy Spirit, as they never could have done by simply performing the works of the law. Did not that prove the superiority of faith? 5. At the very time that this Epistle was being written their teachers were ministering in the power of faith, proving that God was prepared to honour it. How far might we not supply the Spirit to one another if we lived more by faith? 6. A favourite verse with St. Paul, showing that even the Patriarch himself, before the rite of circumcision was ordained, lived by the faith which is the key-note of the Gospel. Directly we believe, we are reckoned righteous in the purpose of God, because faith is the germ of righteousness. 7. Rom. iv. 11-16. 8-9. The salvation of the Gentiles was predicted in that old-world story, and its very method.

The Curse of the Law (10-14).—To go back to the works of law, as these teachers wished when they imposed the rite of circumcision, was to pass under a curse, because, however eager we may be to do what the law bids, we are hindered from a perfect obedience by the very frailty of our nature. 13. Christ has interposed between us and the penalty of a broken law, intercepting the latter, so that the blessing that enriched Abraham's life may be also ours, and in addition the gift of the Spirit. Note that we receive the gift of the Spirit, like forgiveness, through faith.

The Seed (15-29).—16. Note that the argument turns upon an "s," showing how much stress may be laid upon the very words of Scripture. Christ here stands for all who belong to Him by faith, Jew or Gentile. 17. There was a sense in which Christ was present in Genesis xxii., because all God's dealings with men are through the Mediator. Both the antiquity of the way of faith, and the tenure of the inheritance which is by promise to faith, establish faith's precedence over legalism. 19. The law was superadded to show men their helplessness, and to drive them to Christ. 24. "The schoolmaster" was rather the slave that took children to school; so the law brings us to Christ. 27. Our baptism obliges us to Christlikeness at pain of self-stultification. 28. "One man in Christ" (R.V.) As if it takes all kinds of men to make up the Body of the One Man.

SATURDAY, JAN. 16.—GALATIANS IV.

The Spirit of Adoption (1-7).—"Child," i.e. "minor." 3. "Elements," i.e., "rudiments," referring to rites and ceremonies, which pass away with the time-sphere. 4. God always waits till the time is full. He is never for a moment behind it. 5. "Born of a woman," a noticeable expression! Christ's submission to the law of Moses was indicated by his circumcision; he fulfilled the rites of Judaism, that he might be the Saviour of Jews, and make Jews and Gentiles alike capable of becoming sons. 6. The work of the Spirit in the heart is the sign and seal that God recognises us as children.

Earnest Pleadings against Apostasy (8-30).—Our knowledge of God is but the reflection of his knowledge of us. How wonderful that we are known of Him even as Christ was (John x. 14). 9. It was indeed absurd for those who had been delivered from Gentile idolatry to go back to Jewish ceremonialism. 10. It is a bad sign when Christian people permit their religion to consist in outward observances. 13. They had loved him with a boundless enthusiasm, in spite of his deformity; and, for love's sake, he pleads with them to be true to the Gospel which he preached. 15. A possible allusion to his thorn in the flesh. 17. "They zealously seek you in no good way." (R.V.), i.e., the Judaising teachers wished to shut these converts up for themselves, that they might seek them only, to the exclusion of the Apostle. 18. He liked love which was constant in absence as in presence. 19, 20. This is religion, the forming of Christ under the scaffolding of our earthly life, but it is the result of soul travail.

An Allegory (21-31).—This remarkable application of Abraham's union with Sarah and Hagar, shows how many deep mysteries lie under the letter of Scripture. We need not suppose that the Apostle uses these things except allegorically. Sarah stood for the heavenly Jerusalem, the Church, the Bride, which includes all who believe; Hagar, for science, and for the law. 27. For centuries the law had had the precedence of faith, but now faith was to have a vast progeny of children. 30. The casting out of the bondwoman has nothing to do with the carnal nature, but with the principle of legalism, which should have no place in regenerated hearts. Our obedience, springing from love and union with Christ, must be better than the righteousness of mere legalism.

Revival in Michigan.

A work of grace, in which nearly all the evangelical churches of Muskegon, Mich., U.S.A., are united, is in progress under the direction of Evangelist Munhall. On Sunday, December 13, twelve hundred young men assembled in the Opera House. At the close of the address, which was about sin and judgment, more than five hundred rose as indicating a desire to live the Christian life. While this meeting was in progress the First Baptist Church was filled with women praying for its success.

At night the two largest churches in the city were filled, and many turned away. Hundreds publicly asked the prayers of the church in these meetings, and a number have professed to accept Jesus as Saviour by faith, and have made confession of Him before the multitude.

The churches decided to give up their Christmas entertainments and push the work for souls.

BISHOP HURST, of the United States, writing recently on "The Story of the Opium Curse in India," says: "Any one standing on the quay of the Hugli, at Calcutta, can frequently see a monotonous train of wagons, drawn by toiling, puffing bullocks. The progress is very slow, for the burden is heavy. The wagons are piled up with chests, all of equal size and appearance. The train is on the way to the customs. The contents are to be inspected, and then shipped to China and other countries. What are the contents? Opium, and nothing else. It is England's greatest contribution to the world's wretchedness."

BRUMANA, MOUNT LEBANON.—Reviewing the work of the past year Mr. S. H. Waldmeier writes: "We were often frightened by the cholera, which was not far from us at Homs and Hemath, Tripoli and Damascus, and took thousands of people away, while our part of this country was graciously spared from this destructive evil by the great mercy of the Lord. We have been permitted to carry on our mission work for the young in the different schools for the grown-up people by preaching the simple Gospel, and among the poor sufferers at the hospital, dispensary, and in various parts of the district."

EVANGELISATION OF THE RIVIERA AND CORSICA.—Major Colquhoun sends us a circular letter which he has published, stating "the present and prospective position of the Lord's work on the Riviera." In Mentone the Soldiers' Reading-room has an increasing attendance, and is to be open every evening. In Monte Carlo there is a small but growing band of anxious inquirers "whose altered lives evidence the change which has been wrought in them." At the present moment the Major is preparing for special work on the Island of Corsica, in company with a colporteur, and hopes, by introducing the Scriptures and preaching the Gospel, to bring some of the dwellers in the mountain villages to the Saviour, and then form them into small groups of believers. An abridgement of the last report, recently noticed in these columns, is appended. Communications to Major Colquhoun should be addressed Mentone, France.

International S. S. Lessons.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 17.

Overcome with Wine.—Isa. xxviii. 1-13.

Golden Text: Prov. xx. 1.

This is emphatically a Temperance lesson, and recent facts have shown how important it is to warn our scholars against the evils of strong drink. The young man guilty of the Brighton murder has written a touching letter, affirming his complete ignorance of the crime, which was committed under the influence of drink. The Bishop of Dover tells of an effort he made to trace one hundred scholars who had passed through his Sunday-school. Of twenty-five of them he could discover nothing, of the remaining seventy-five only two were in constant attendance at church, and thirty-nine were confirmed drunkards. Facts like these lay upon teachers a solemn responsibility. We need to use both word and example in order to protect our scholars from this terrible evil.

In this lesson drunkenness appears to be the vice of Ephraim; and its impending doom (1-4) is used as a warning to Judah (5-13), though even there the people are so given to strong drink that they make jest of the prophet's message.

Ephraim Warned and Threatened (1-4).—The Prophet refers to the custom of wine-drinkers wearing garlands of leaves and flowers at their feasts. Samaria, the chief city of the ten tribes, is compared to these garlands, "the proud crown of Ephraim." Its position on the brow of a hill, and at the head of a fertile valley, made the metaphor very appropriate. But its glory was ready to fade quickly, like that of the drunkard's wreaths. "The hasty fruit" (4) refers to the early fig. The earlier figs, which ripened in June, were considered a great delicacy, and were eaten immediately; thus speedily should the glory of Samaria depart. The reason for this was its drunkenness. This ensnaring vice is no respecter of persons. It disgraced Noah after the flood, and Lot after his great deliverance; and it overcame this people, though they were so favoured of God. They abandoned themselves to it (see Amos iv. 1; vi. 6). It is the sure precursor of doom to nations and to individuals. There is solemn need for repeating God's terrible "Woe to drunkards." If drinking yields present pleasure, there is a fearful end "at the last" (Prov. xxiii. 29-35). (See 1 Cor. vi. 10.) The instrument of Samaria's punishment would be Assyria (2). God never lacks servants to do his bidding. When men think not, so they are but weapons in his hand. The Assyrians came against Ephraim, intending only to do their own pleasure. God made use of them as the rod with which to chastise his guilty people.

The Righteous Remnant Encouraged (5-6).—God discriminates in his judgments. He knows intimately every one who is true to Him amidst surrounding iniquity. He is to them a crown and diadem, not fading quickly away, like that of Ephraim (1-4), but abiding and glorious. He will be to them what He will make them to be to Him (Isa. lxii. 3). By resisting temptation to luxury and self-indulgence we do not lose either honour or happiness, but obtain both in the best and most abiding form. More than that, God will be to them wisdom and courage for present difficulty (6). They shall be wise to know, courageous to act, and victorious against their most powerful foes. To possess God as our own is to possess all things in Him.

Judah Denounced (7-13).—There seems to be a hope that the coming doom of Ephraim will make Judah more ready to receive warning. If the one kingdom falls for the sin of drunkenness, the other kingdom must expect the same doom to follow the same sin. Surely the skater will avoid the ice where the word "Dangerous" gives him warning, and the mariner will not steer his vessel on to where the light warns him the coast is dangerous. Will Judah heed the warning given in the message to Ephraim?

Alas! it appears not. The sin of Judah is as terrible as that of Ephraim. The guilt of it is greater because it is committed in spite of such a warning. Is not the same folly being repeated by thousands? Our scholars do not reject Jesus and begin a course of sin and vice without knowing its dangers. Examples of physical, moral, and spiritual ruin abound on every hand. To every course that ends in ruin there must be a beginning. The way to avoid the bitter end is to refuse to make the guilty start, and to put the life into the hand of Him who is "mighty to save." Have we done so?

The picture of Judah's drunkenness is sad and humiliating. Its victims were found among priests and prophets (7). If they were examples of vice, what hope was there for the people whom they taught? In their drunkenness they became mere mockers of the prophet's message. Locking up from their cups they say, "Whom shall he teach knowledge," &c. (9) They described his message as fit only for babes. Verse 10 may be understood as their drunken mimicry of Isaiah. Men are in a hopeless condition when the Word which is their only hope of salvation becomes a theme for filthy jesting.

For Judah there is a doom as for Ephraim (11-13). They had rejected the message, though it had been offered to them a blessing so great (12), and had been purposely put in the plainest and simplest possible manner (13). Hence they not only lose the offered blessing of rest, but, like drunken men, they "fall backward" and are destroyed.

What a dangerous thing it is to tamper with drink! It is true that many who take it are never overcome by it; but such facts as this lesson gives us warns that the safer course is to leave it alone. It is not the only vice young people have to dread, and it is possible to escape this and to fall into others as hurtful to the soul. There is no true salvation except in Jesus, who "is able to save to the uttermost all them that come unto God by Him."

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

A Special Commissioner of The Northern Daily News has lately been investigating and describing in its columns social life in the Aberdeenshire country districts. In a concluding letter he recommends as a preventive to the alarming decrease of the rural population the provision of small holdings, the better housing of farm servants, with shorter hours of labour, and more frequent payment of wages.

Mr. John Gordon Macleod, son of Rev. A. G. Macleod, Croy, Inverness, is not only the youngest son of this manse, but he is the youngest of seven brothers, all of whom are ministers. The death is just reported of Mr. Macleod, the father. He was present, last week, at the marriage, in Edinburgh, of one of the sons, and is believed to have caught a chill.

Arbroath possesses a singular phenomenon in the shape of the minister of the Abbey Church. Speaking lately on the evils of present-day society, he hazarded the extraordinary statement that "teetotalism, in so far as it aspires to be a moral virtue, was the biggest heresy that had ever been forged by the father of lies. It was a reversion to the beggarly elements of Judaism, and the greatest danger to Christianity that had appeared in modern times." If Mr. Moody or Mr. McNeill should visit Arbroath, we hope they will give some attention to this pulpiteer.

Councillor Kinnaird, of Leith, has strong views as to the ministers and elders of that burgh. Many of the former he declares to be not only bigoted and hypocritical, but dishonest and extremely careless as the shepherds of the flock. He knew of cases where pastors had not visited their flocks for ten or fifteen years. Many of the elders were "a scheming and unworthy lot of men." If his statements are correct we do not wonder that twenty thousand of the young men and women of Leith are non-churchgoers. But we are doubtful if scolding will improve matters.

One of these same Leith ministers, Rev. T. Millar, of St. Paul's Church, also has strong views—about editors. He says they care more for dividends than for the enlightenment and edification of the people. They give great space to horse-racing and divorce cases, while small paragraphs only are devoted to spiritual matters. Mr. Millar should have mentioned some exceptions, e.g., the Scottish Leader and the Glasgow Daily Mail.

Rev. Alexander Davidson, of Duke-street Evangelical Union Church, Leith, expired suddenly one day last week in a shop in Leith-walk. Mr. Davidson was ordained in 1849; joined the Evangelical Union in 1854; and was inducted to his present charge in 1887. He had attained to the advanced age of 68 years, and was highly respected by his congregation and those of the general community with whom he came in contact.

The friends at Carrubbers' Close, Edinburgh, as usual kept watch-night on Thursday evening; there was a crowded gathering. Encouraging statements were made as to the progress of the Temperance cause during the past year. It was also reported that the bygone twelve months had been the most prosperous spiritually in the history of the Mission.

Rev. Dr. Walker, minister of Dysart Free Church, has intimated to the office-bearers of his congregation that he intends, at next General Assembly, to apply for a colleague. Dr. Walker has been forty-two years minister of the Church. He intends continuing to act as senior minister, and will retain his seat in the Free Presbytery. He will reside in Edinburgh.

In many of the towns, the publicans complied with the recommendation of the magistrates and closed their houses on New Year's Day, much to the public advantage.

STIRRING TIMES.—"We have," writes Mr. Douglas from Nagpur, "had stirring times in the principal bazaars during the last quarter. What we had most to fear was the attempt to put us down by force. With firmness and patience we have succeeded, to a great extent, in overcoming that. Now, for the first time in Nagpur, Hindu preachers are conducting rival meetings side by side with our own. The New Testament is their text-book, and their addresses are chiefly a tirade against Christianity. Pamphlets are being hawked about containing a perverted account of the gospel history, and with a caricature of Christ on the cross on the title-page. The most visible result of all this has been to excite a deeper interest in religious questions, and awaken a desire to know more about the religion that is being so spoken against."

OBITUARY.

VEN. ARCHDEACON NORRIS, D.D.

A somewhat mournful interest attaches to the death on Tuesday week of Archdeacon J. P. Norris, of Bristol, who in the morning's papers had been gazetted as appointed Dean of Chichester in succession to Dr. Pigou. His ministry dates from 1849. He was the author of numerous theological and devotional works, including Rudiments of Theology, Studia Sacra, Theological Remains of John Keble, and The New Testament, with Introductions and Notes.

REV. J. SIBREE, OF HULL.

Many will hear with regret of the death of Rev. J. Sibree, at one time a very prominent Congregational minister, who passed away, aged eighty-six, on Sunday-week at his residence in Hull. Having laboured in that town since 1831, he was widely beloved and respected as a devoted worker, a true friend of the seafaring population, and an earnest and faithful pastor. He was one of the founders of the Port of Hull Society, a seamen's mission, and the secretaryship of which he resigned only a fortnight ago. He was for nearly forty years secretary to the Hull Auxiliary of the London Missionary Society, was once President of the Yorkshire Congregationalist Union, and for many years was secretary of the Hull Sunday-School Union.

REV. HENRY M CAW.

Many will regret to hear of the death on Sunday week of Rev. Henry M'Caw, senior member of the Presbyterian church of Claggan, aged seventy-four, after long and faithful service. His settled work began in the disastrous "famine year" (1846), and he has often told how for his ordination dinner only three fairly-sized potatoes could be found in all the locality. He began and carried on a work in Claggan, the difficulties and the greatness of which only those who know the facts can understand. Commencing with a number of families on a bleak mountain side, he gathered around him, by his energy and enthusiasm, a devoted band of workers, built a church and manse, with Sabbath and day schoolrooms, to which he contributed largely of his own means, and literally turned the wilderness into a garden of roses. Now there is at Claggan a flourishing congregation, in which excellent Christian work is carried on. Mr. M'Caw had great love for the young, and gave much attention to the Sabbath-school and Band of Hope during his long pastorate. In 1887, owing to failing health and by medical advice, he obtained leave to retire from active duty, but still retained his earnest Christian service in many ways.

MRS. ELIZA BASTARD.

The widow of the late Mr. Richard Bastard, of Prospect, Slapton, near Kingsbridge, South Devon, quietly fell asleep in Jesus at her residence on the evening of Saturday, December 26, in the 87th year of her age. "Like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season." Early in their married life her husband and herself were turned to the Lord. It was a real turning, a thorough conversion, and the result was a united life of entire dedication of persons and possessions to the service and glory of their Lord and God. The need of their neighbours in spiritual and temporal things has been their constant concern. It is felt that a mother in Israel has departed. And while sorrowing for their loss, the many around rejoice in the full assurance that it is her gain.

The funeral was largely representative of the widespread respect and affection of the district for the departed saint. Mr. J. Crofton Rainey addressed the assembly in the meeting-room at Chillington, and the precious dust was laid to rest in the quiet little burying ground near the village, beside her late husband, to await the voice of the Archangel.

MR. FRANCIS PASSMORE.

Mr. Francis Passmore, cousin of the well-known publisher of the same name, one of the oldest members of the church at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, and superintendent of the Ragged School at Lansdowne-place, Kent-street, Southwark, has passed away suddenly, death no doubt being hastened by the fog and frost of Christmas week. Mr. Spurgeon and others will much feel the loss of this devoted worker. Mr. Passmore commenced his Christian service by teaching a class of infants at the old chapel in New Park-street. He next undertook the office of superintendent of the Sussex-road Sunday-school connected with Cornwall-road Chapel, Brixton. It was while there that he rendered eminent service in most efficiently conducting a large class of young men. About twelve years ago Mr. Passmore became associated with the Lansdowne-place school, which chiefly draws its scholars from the once notorious Kent-street and the neighbourhood. He took great interest in this work, and gave to it such time as he could spare from his profession. For some years he held an appointment in the literary department of the Pharmaceutical Society in Bloomsbury-square. Mr. Passmore possessed great tact as a teacher; and, when need arose, his kind persuasiveness seldom or never failed to conquer the most hardened natures which showed any disposition to give trouble.

Temperance Notes.

A RECENT canvass in Thornbury revealed the fact that the inhabitants were in favour of having the houses closed at ten p.m.

During the recent severe weather the Brookland Blue Ribbon Army distributed coals to the aged poor and widows of the district.

An article on "How Intemperance has been successfully combated," penned by the Duchess of Rutland, appears in The New Review for January.

At York a scheme for visiting every house in the city, with the view of securing adult and juvenile signatures to the total abstinence pledge, is now in operation.

The Good Templars are endeavouring to extend their operations in the army. Efforts are being made to organise a lodge in every regiment not provided with one.

In view of the General Election, the Scottish Temperance League will co-operate with other Temperance associations in holding a national convention early next year.

The Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Rhyl Church Congress writes denying that the committee made a profit out of the sale of beer in the Congress grounds.

A strangely termed gathering took place in Liverpool on Tuesday last week, an "ex-drunkards' demonstration," when many bore testimony how they had escaped the thraldom of drink.

The number of suicides in Paris last year was 1020, two hundred and forty-three being by hanging. The growth of spirit drinking is credited with being an important factor in the remarkable increase.

At Bolton the publicans' applications for extension of one hour for the sale of drink on the last day of the old year and the first day of the new were successfully opposed by the Nonconformist Ministers' Association.

Lady Henry Somerset will accompany her son on a visit to Japan, and will arrive in England at the end of May. She is now studying methods in America for the more effectual working of the British Women's organisation.

Mr. John Cory, J.P., of Cardiff, has just signified his intention of building in that town, entirely at his own expense, a Temperance-hall, to accommodate 1500 persons, at a cost of £5000. This is only a sample of the public munificence, repeatedly shown, for which the Cory brothers are so widely and justly famed.

The Dublin Methodists have taken a new departure by establishing a series of Pleasant Saturday Nights as a counter attraction to the public-house in South Great George's-street Hall, Dublin. The meetings, which promise to be successful, are under the management of Mr. Wm. Carty, the veteran temperance worker.

The Vegetarian says the overlaying of infants by their mothers furnishes material of the utmost value to those engaged in opposing the sale of alcoholic stimulants. Out of 1000 deaths so attributed, 280 occur on Saturday night, 170 on Monday, and then a gradual decreasing number until Saturday is again reached.

The Glasgow police commissioners have by 49 to 9 adopted a motion asking Dr. Cameron, M.P., to introduce a Bill to enable the exempted cities in Scotland to close the public-houses at 10 o'clock. Another motion was also adopted by 46 to 8 asking Dr. Cameron to introduce a Bill to abolish the jurisdiction of quarter sessions in regard to the refusal by the magistrates of renewals of licences.

At the Annual Conference of the Yorkshire Women's Christian Temperance Union (B.W.T.A.), recently held at Huddersfield, the following resolution was passed:—"In view of the entire wreck of home life, and the sad cruelties to children caused by intemperance among women, this conference is of opinion that the time has come for more drastic legislation for the care and treatment of habitual inebriates, and considers it desirable that magistrates should be empowered to commit such cases for lengthened periods to specially certified homes, instead of to prison for repeated short terms, which in most cases exert no curative influence."

MAIDSTONE TOWN MISSION.—Rev. S. F. Rimbault, of Maidstone Town Mission, has attained the jubilee of his pastorate, and in recognition of his valuable services it has been decided to present him with £50, and to organise a band of female helpers to assist him in the work, on account of his increasing age.

THE DAY OF REST.—The Working Men's Lord's Day Rest Association has issued a New Year's Address, which shows that the efforts to establish Sunday concerts had elicited important protests from several theatrical artistes, who feel the need of Sunday rest. Concerts on Sundays for money payment are illegal, but constant efforts are made to evade the law. Marvellous progress has been made in securing one day's rest in seven on the Continent. Sunday labour in connection with Sunday excursions has increased, and there are six distinct organisations striving to secularise the Sunday in London. The cause of Sunday Rest has lost powerful supporters by the decease during last year of the Right Hon. W. H. Smith, Sir R. N. Fowler, and Sir Thomas Chambers.

Personalia.

Rev. Dr. Mackennal has been elected to succeed Dr. Dale as chairman of the Mansfield College Council.

The revered and honoured Bishop Philpott is still lying seriously ill at his house in Cambridge.

Rev. A. N. Johnson, M.A., of Leicester, has been appointed home secretary of the London Missionary Society.

The Bishop of Exeter and Mrs. Bickersteth arrived from Japan on Wednesday week, and received a warm welcome in Exeter.

General Booth has concluded a successful campaign at Gujerat, where he has made special inquiries concerning village life among the natives.

The Earl of Lichfield has, we regret to hear, had a paralytic attack. He is now recovering, and we feel sure many will pray for his complete restoration.

Rev. J. Bambridge (C.M.S.), who, since he came home from Karachi, has been somewhat seriously ill, is now considerably better, and promises soon to be enabled to resume his valuable labours.

Rev. Richard Hughes, who came home a short time ago from the West Indies on leave of absence, has been rendering excellent service to the Wesleyan Missionary Society by addressing missionary meetings in North Wales.

Mr. Spurgeon's sermon last week commenced the 38th annual volume of The Metropolitan Tabernacle Pulpit. The theme, he says, has been specially selected "as most suitable to my own personal testimony at the present moment."

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. W. R. Lane has lately concluded an interesting mission at Cardiff, held in connection with the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Harmer's recent missions in Longford, near Coventry, Queensbury, Attleborough, and Nuneaton have been accompanied with many tokens of blessed result.

Willingham.—Mr. Temple, assisted by Rev. J. Carvath, has conducted a series of evangelistic services at Willingham. The mission has been spiritually blessed, the conversions being numerous.

Mr. John Burnham has been evangelising at Perry Green, Luton, and Okehampton, where much interest was awakened, and fruit gathered in. During the present month he is labouring at Old Sodbury and Hemyock.

Shrawley, Worcestershire.—Mr. R. Jones has just concluded a four weeks' mission in this village. The services were held in a club-room, lent by a publican's wife. Many remained to the after-meetings and received a blessing.

Feltham.—Mr. H. Collins, of the Evangelisation Society, has conducted a fortnight's evangelistic mission here. Much good has resulted, and as a result it has been decided to hold bright Gospel services in the Congregational church every Wednesday.

Ovoca, co. Wicklow.—A most successful series of Gospel services has just been held in the parish church of Ovoca by Rev. T. B. Robertson, of Newmarket. Many are believed to have been awakened and led to decision for Christ; and at the closing meeting two hundred persons stood up, to indicate that they were resolved to live a new life.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith's mission at Luton has been a success, pastors as well as private persons volunteering to give assistance in every way. In addition to the ordinary gatherings, a large meeting of the workpeople of an extensive iron foundry took place in the works by request of the men themselves; several professed change of heart. It is thought that the churches of the town will show an increase of membership through these special services.

Mr. J. M. Scroggie has just concluded a mission in Belfast. The meetings were held in Albert-street Presbyterian Church (Rev. Henry Montgomery's). A large band of workers prosecuted a vigorous canvass in the adjoining districts, inviting non-churchgoers to the services, and in many cases waiting for and accompanying those thus invited to the meetings. Meetings for prayer were also held before and during the mission. God blessed the preaching of his Word, for from the very first meeting there were gracious proofs of his presence. On Sundays the spacious edifice was crowded in every part, and many inquirers were dealt with during the progress of the work. Mr. Scroggie preaches the old Gospel fearlessly and fully, the three R's being emphasized in almost every address. Mr. A. W. Vance and his male choir sang most tellingly and tenderly at the Sunday afternoon services. The spirit of God seemed to rest specially on these tuneful brethren as with the whole congregation hushed into solemn awe they sang "Calvary." A number of backsliders professed to have been restored, while a goodly number, chiefly of young people, made hopeful profession of their faith in the Lord Jesus

The Book World.

Memorial Volumes.

James Stacey, D.D.: Reminiscences and Memorials. (5s. Hodder and Stoughton.) Rev. W. J. Townsend has produced this goodly volume, which gives an excellent outline of the life and teachings of one who long occupied a prominent position in the ministry of the Methodist New Connexion. The pages have a living and practical worth, and ministers and Christian workers will find them suggestive and profitable reading.

John Pillans: His Life and Thought. Edited by James Stark. (Huntly: William Simpson.) The brief memoir is followed by glimpses of the teaching of the late Mr. Pillans, whose labours in the Gospel, in connection with the Congregationalists, at Perth, Camberwell, and Huntly, will long be held in affectionate remembrance. Then there are twelve brief sermons—weighty in substance and sound in doctrine. The thought, at once clear and cultured, was worth preserving as a monument of the devoted life which Mr. Stark has so sympathetically sketched.

Sir George Burns, Bart.: His Times and Friends. By Edwin Hodder. (5s. Hodder and Stoughton.) We welcome a popular edition of this eminently readable life of "the patriarch of Wemyss Bay." The recollections relate to the varied interests and associations of one who combined signal piety with exceptional business capacity. The story of the founding of the Cunard Company is a chapter of special historical value, while the glimpses of Sir George's private life, as well as the records of his public acts, have many lessons for thoughtful readers. The "friends" included Lord Shaftesbury, Drs. Chalmers, Merle-D'Aubigné and Cæsar Malan, Revs. Robert Montgomery and W. H. Havergal, and many others; and the relations with these, as described by Mr. Hodder and disclosed by correspondence, are full of living interest.

Theodor Christlieb, D.D., of Bonn: Memoir and Sermons. (7s. 6d. Hodder and Stoughton.) This volume will for some time keep green the memory of a distinguished scholar and earnest labourer in the cause of Christ. Our readers have from time to time been kept informed of the eminently evangelical work of Dr. Christlieb as university professor, and the earnest promoter of missions in the Fatherland and the regions beyond. His widow writes a memoir full of interest; and nineteen sermons are appended, translated chiefly by Canons Kingsbury, of Coombe-Bisset, and Garratt, of Ipswich. The discourses give a good idea of their author as a teacher of large capacity and deep spirituality. Amongst the most remarkable are "The True Advent Prayer, 'Come, Lord Jesus,'" "Never Man Spake Like This Man," "The Need of Patience in an Over-Active Age," and "A Glimpse of Our Lord's Life of Prayer." There are also discourses on our Lord's victories over the tempter, and the Crucifixion and Resurrection. All are rich in doctrinal and practical matter; and while to preachers they will prove good exemplars, thoughtful readers of sermons will find them substantial and instructive in a high degree.

John Ploughman's Almanack. This wall sheet well maintains its fame for pithy and pointed sayings and useful matter. (1d. Passmore and Alabaster.) The same publishers send Mr. Spurgeon's Illustrated Almanack (1d. book), which well deserves a welcome far and near. The daily texts have been specially selected by Mrs. Spurgeon.

In The Church Missionary Intelligencer for January Rev. G. Ensor describes the measures that are in progress to give the Bible to the people of China in the most effective manner. The article is replete with historical details of great interest to the friends of mission work in China. (6d. Church Missionary House, Salisbury-square, E.C.)

The Thinker, the new "review of world-wide Christian thought," published by Messrs. Nisbet (1s.) has made a good beginning. It is not an advocate of any special school of thought or critical opinion. The January issue contains articles characterised by caution, as well as some of the type more favourable to "advanced" conclusions. If continued on its present lines, this review will prove of great value to exact students of theology.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Writing from Toronto, the Bishop of Algoma pleads urgently for more labourers for his diocese in the far West.

Rev. Coker Adams, who gained some notoriety a few years ago by publicly excommunicating one of his parishioners, has just died.

Rev. W. E. Barty, well known to many as the earnest and hardworking vicar of St. John's, Fulham, has been appointed to the rectory of Finchley.

The Bishop of Liverpool is actively interesting himself in a movement for augmenting a fund which is being raised for the widow and family of the late Mr. Clarke Aspinall.

The Church Army issues an urgent call for more evangelists—young men willing to be trained for service. Applications should be made to Rev. W. Carlile, 128, Edgware-road, W.

The Bishop of Maritzburg has definitively resolved to quit South Africa. His resignation will take effect in March, and on returning to England he will act as suffragan in a southern diocese.

As customary at this season, a children's service was held on Monday week in Westminster Abbey, which was crowded. Dean Bradley addressed the little ones from the words, "Little children, love one another."

In the C.M.S. Intelligencer for January, Archdeacon Warren gives a long and thrilling account of the recent earthquake in Japan, and of the narrow escape experienced by the Bishop of Exeter and certain missionaries.

It is noted with regret that Bishop Creighton appeared lately in Peterborough Cathedral in cope and mitre and attended by a crozier-bearer, an array in which no bishop has appeared in this cathedral since the Reformation.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. G. Frank Collins on Sunday commenced a series of services for the people at Wanstead Church.

A gift service was held lately in Marlborough Chapel, Old Kent-road; gifts of all kinds being brought in, and on the following day distributed to the poor.

The reopening of the Congregational Union Free Shelter at Medland Hall has been postponed; and meanwhile the shelter is carried on in Burdett-road.

Buildings formerly used for mission purposes by the Methodists in Bolton have been purchased for Mawdsley-street Congregational Church, which has detailed a strong committee to establish a mission centre.

The London Congregational Union reports 263 churches and 180 mission rooms. There are 218 ministers in charge. The number of churches described as "vacant" is twenty-two, while of ministers not actively engaged, only twenty are said to be seeking pastorates.

On Sunday, Jan. 3, 108 new members were received into fellowship at Harley-street Chapel, Bow, E. (W. Evans Hurndall). This, after a recent revision of the church-roll, makes the present membership 957. The membership at the commencement of the present pastorate was eighty-nine.

The Congregationalists report a total of 4886 places of worship in Great Britain and Ireland, those in England and Wales providing accommodation for 1,666,867 persons. There are also in the British colonies 721 additional churches. In England alone there are 3349 places of worship, and in Wales and Monmouthshire, 1137.

A good work is being carried on at Patcham, Sussex, by the Hassocks Mission. A cottage has been secured for the holding of Sunday services, and the owner of a plot of ground has allowed the missioners to conduct open-air services, which are being blessed; and as an outcome of the work, it is hoped that ere long a permanent place of worship and work will be established.

The natives of Apia, Samoa, have resolved to celebrate the centenary of the London Missionary Society by building a church at a cost of £3000, to be called the "John Williams Memorial Church." At the preliminary meeting the first £200 was subscribed, and a piece of land was promised by Seumanu, the chief of Apia, to sufficiently enlarge the site. The proposed cost will be for material only, the labour being given.

BAPTIST.

An eight days' Gospel temperance mission has just been held in Christchurch, Hants.

Great preparations are being made in America for holding what is there called the "Carey" Centennial.

The Baptist Missionary Society has accepted Mr. Jefferel, of the Pastors' College, for service on the Congo.

A special mission, conducted by Messrs. A. A. Harmer and H. Jeunes, has been held, with good issues, at Attleborough and Nuneaton.

The summary of statistics for Baptist churches throughout the world, issued at the close of 1891, gives a total of 42,650 churches, 27,858 pastors or missionaries, and a membership of 3,786,603.

Dr. Culross urges that the time has come when the Baptist Colleges ought to be set free from teaching literary and scientific matters, and devoted wholly to theological study and practical training.

The returns published in the "Baptist Handbook" for 1892 furnish the interesting fact that there are no less than 5328 names on the roll of communicants at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. There are twenty-six mission stations and thirty Sunday or ragged schools in connection with it.

At the prayer-meeting on Monday week, in the Baptist Chapel, Mare-street, Hackney, an interesting address was given by Miss Tebbutt, who is devoting her life to mission work amongst the Khonds, an altogether unevangelised hill tribe of India. Miss Tebbutt is the first lady who has given herself to the Khond Mission.

Nine new Baptist chapels were opened last year in Wales, at a cost of £10,421, while others were renovated at a further cost of £4,805, and debts on old chapels were reduced by £18,768. Including Monmouthshire, there are 845 Baptist places of worship in Wales, with 92,394 communicants. In the Sunday-schools there are 9,977 teachers and 97,010 scholars.

The London Baptist Board, a fraternal association of Baptist ministers, has recently entered upon its 169th annual session. The Board has taken an active interest in the wellbeing of the denomination, giving in the old days valuable advice to pastors and churches in want of them. The monthly meetings now are devoted to debates on various matters of interest.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. John McNeill addressed last week a large gathering of men in the Christian Institute, Glasgow.

It is stated that the congregation at Islington intend calling Rev. Henry Norwell, M.A., of Dunblane.

The Regent-square congregation appear to be turning their eyes to Scotland for a new minister, and Dr. Alexander Whyte is spoken of as the best man for the very trying and difficult position.

A thanksgiving service was held on Sunday week in Workington Church, in connection with the extinction of the debt. Rev. D. McLellan reviewed the past history, and showed how God had blessed the work.

Reviewing the work of the Evangelistic Committee during the past few months, Mr. Robert Stark recounts various missions held, and adds: "When the secrets of all hearts shall be revealed, it will doubtless be found that through these services many have been brought to decision for Christ, and many like myself, have had their spiritual graces strengthened.

METHODIST.

A revival which has taken place in Rochdale Circuit has resulted in several young people joining the church.

George-yard Chapel, Hull, has been reopened (after alterations) as a centre of work for the Hull Wesleyan Mission.

Mr. E. M. Bainbridge, J.P., not long ago built, at his own cost, a chapel on his Eshott Estate, and now Mrs. Bainbridge has built a similar chapel at Felton.

With the object of reaching the masses who do not attend church or chapel, the Wesleyans at Kingston have inaugurated a series of Sunday evening lantern services.

Owing to the opposition of the king and chiefs to the opening of a mission in the Zambesi district, the Primitive Methodist missionary party will probably travel further north into the heart of Africa.

An iron chapel at Ferndale, the headquarters of Methodism in that populous circuit, has just been sold, and is to be replaced by a handsome chapel, in memory of the late Mr. Lewis Davis, the foundation-stones of which will be laid early in the spring.

A successful mission has just been conducted at Nantyglo, Brynmawr, by Rev. Joseph Wells. A thousand invitation cards were issued, and several large posters were used. The mission was also preceded by a week of prayer. Results, large congregations, good meetings, and many conversions.

Mr. Jameson writes: "The East-end Mission workers held the fort all day at the 'Old Mahogany Bar.' In the afternoon good open-air work was done. None but those who come to see for themselves can understand the terrible poverty and vice which darkens this neighbourhood. The Lord our Master, was with us in power and blessing. It was our joy again to record poor sinners coming home."

Preaching at Leeds on Sunday week, the President of the Wesleyan Conference dwelt on the various forms of religious service which had prevailed in different ages, and, touching on modern methods, he said it was desirable that in any large centre of population all forms should be represented. No harm would be done thereby, particularly if no church was foolish enough to unchurch its neighbour.

The first Epworth League Association in England has been organized. The League was started by the Methodist Episcopal Church in America ten years ago, and has now a membership of over four hundred thousand. Its object is to promote the intellectual and religious welfare of the young people of Methodism, and attach them to the Church. There are four departments:—(1) Religious work; (2) mercy and help; (3) social work; (4) literary pursuits.

Rev. Owen Watkins, who has been prospecting in Mashonaland, in the interests of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, says he is presumably the first white man to see the Mount of Footprints, which he thus describes:—"At last we came to one large mount of rocks on the top of the hills. Here are thousands of impressions on the granite rock. Hundreds of human footsteps, thousands of footprints of animals—lions, jackals, wolves, and antelopes. On the top of the mount the appearance is as if a crowd of animals and men had rushed together in fright. At whatever period these footprints were made, it must have been before the outer surface of the rock had hardened."

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Two fresh lady-workers have been accepted for the Friends' Syrian Mission at Ras-el-meten.

The work at Bunhill Fields has shown among the adults great spiritual advance during the past year.

The death, on Christmas Eve, of J. T. Grace, of Colham Park, will be felt a serious loss to the Church.

A large number of Friends assembled at Hereford to welcome home W. J. Sayce, who has returned from a mission tour in Australia.

A well-known member has passed away at Reading in Thos. Gregory, at the age of seventy-three. He took great interest in Temperance and philanthropic work.

The Friend has commenced with January a weekly issue. The British Friend has also begun a new series under the editorship of William E. Turner, of Birkenhead.

At the Committee of the Friends' Foreign Mission Association, A. Priscilla Fowler, of Woodford, offered for service in India. The call to foreign service came to her in a quiet Friends' meeting four years ago, and had been confirmed by the special call to India at the Keswick Convention last July.

At a Meeting for Sufferings held lately, a committee was appointed to consider whether any practical measures could be taken to assist the sufferers in the widespread distress arising from the existing famine in Russia. As a result, two gentlemen—Messrs. Brooks and Fox—went to Russia, on a visit of inquiry and investigation.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The Earl of Pembroke has given £6000 for an additional building for Baggot-street Hospital, Dublin.

There are now thirty-six girls in training for domestic service in the Presbyterian Orphan Home, Belfast.

The Countess of Zetland intends to provide for some of the little girls rescued from the Carogh Orphanage.

A Lantern Mission has been formed, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., Belfast, and on Saturday evening week the first of a series of meetings was given in the Soldiers' Home.

Under the auspices of the Evangelical Alliance, the Week of Prayer is being observed this week in Dublin, Cork, Derry, Belfast, Newry, and many of the other towns and cities.

It is regarded as an unique occurrence in Ireland that Rev. Alex. T. Kirkpatrick, rector of Craigs, co. Antrim, has served the whole of his thirty-eight years in the ministry in that parish.

Following the example of the Newry, a vestryman removed a floral Maltese cross from over the communion table in Aughnacloy Church on Christmas morning, thus Special Religious Services in Theatres and Town Halls.

These Services were commenced more than thirty-two years ago and have been held every winter with great success. The Committee have recently added to their labours by building Mission Halls in memory of their late president, the seventh Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G., while some hundreds of smaller halls have been assisted by grants of money. The majority of these buildings are in the very poorest parts of London, where it is utterly impossible to raise funds locally.—Contributions will be gratefully received by the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, or by the Secretary, Mr. C. M. Sawell, 3, Bridewell-place, E.C.

[As it is found that infidels and others send tracts to the persons whose names are inserted here, it is most desirable that all books and papers sent should be carefully read before being given away.]

Homes For Aged Blind.—These deserving institutions will shortly celebrate the jubilee of their founder and hon. superintendent, Rev. Henry Bright, when it is proposed to establish a Jubilee Memorial Fund for freeing them from debt. The entire cost of four freehold houses, land, hall, &c., has been £7020, of which only £740 remain still unpaid. Any of our readers having an opportunity to visit the Homes (77, Hanley-road, Crouch-hill, N.), could not fail to have their sympathy drawn out towards these aged and poor blind folk. The work is economically managed, and conducted by voluntary agents. During the eleven years it has been established the inmates have been received from various parts of the country, extending over twenty-eight counties.

HOMES FOR

AGED CHRISTIAN BLIND MEN & WOMEN,

HANLEY ROAD, CROUCH HILL, LONDON, N.

AN URGENT AND EARNEST APPEAL is made on behalf of these HOMES, to meet present and pressing liabilities. The inmates now number 80, many of them, through weakness and infirmity, added to blindness, require night as well as day nursing. The winter months severely tax and exhaust the funds.

Also a strenuous effort is being made to raise £740 to free the property from debt; this done, the General Maintenance Fund will be greatly helped, as the interest will be saved.

CONTRIBUTIONS will be gladly received by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, Office of The Christian; or by the Founders and Hon. Superintendents, Rev. H. and Mrs. BRIGHT, at the Homes.

Trinitarian Bible Society

FOR THE CIRCULATION OF UNCORRUPTED VERSIONS OF THE WORD OF GOD.

THIS SOCIETY WAS INSTITUTED IN 1831.

IT IS A DISTINCTIVELY

PROTESTANT BIBLE SOCIETY.

It witnesses for the SON OF GOD, by excluding from governing membership Socinians, who deny the Deity and Atonement of Christ.

It witnesses for the TRUTH OF GOD, by excluding all corrupted Roman Catholic Versions from its circulation.

It witnesses for the GRACE OF GOD, by a Free Distribution of only the best translations that can be obtained, "Whether men will hear or whether they will forbear." During the past year its circulation was 227,036 Bibles, Testaments, and Portions in 21 languages.

It made free grants to Forty Missionary Societies at home and abroad.

The New Hebrew Testament has reached its fourth edition, and two hundred and twelfth thousand. It is being freely distributed amongst Jews in all parts of the world by the MILDMAY MISSION TO THE JEWS. This work is so extraordinary that it is one of the most remarkable signs of the times. See the Society's Quarterly Record.

The Society is producing a Judeo-German Bible. Six parts (355,000) have been published, and have been warmly welcomed.

The Society is actively engaged in freely distributing the first and only Protestant Bible in Brittany. It is also sending large and free grants to India, Brazil, Argentina, Italy, Spain, &c., &c.

DEPOSITORY, 7, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, LONDON, E.C.

Treasurer, JAMES MADEN HOLT, Esq; Chairman of Committee, HARRY CURTIS NISBET, Esq.; Secretary, Rev. E. W. BULLINGER, D.D., who will be glad to receive CONTRIBUTIONS for this important work.

P. P. Bliss:

HIS LIFE AND LIFE WORK.

With Introduction by D. L. MOODY; and Memorial Notice by IRA D. SANKEY; also Portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss and their Two Children.

Tinted covers, 6d.; cloth limp, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition, cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"An interesting sketch of the life and work of this lamented gentleman, with whose music lovers of sacred song are well acquainted. He rendered an immense service to the religious world, his whole life being devoted to the work of his Master; and the sudden and terrible death which befel him and Mrs. Bliss while on their way to and Messrs. Moody and Sankey at Chicago has added considerably to the interest attaching to so noble a life."

LONDON CITY MISSION.

500 MISSIONARIES now employed in beseeching the masses in the Metropolis to be reconciled to God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

House-to-House visitation. Personal dealing.
Work purely undenominational.

For the last two years the expenditure has exceeded the income by £3,500. To meet this deficit of £7,000 he Committee have been compelled to draw upon their comparatively small reserve fund.

Unless there is an immediate increase in the income of the Mission they fear they will be obliged, most reluctantly, to reduce their staff of Missionaries.

To avert this calamity they ask all friends to come, without loss of time, to the help of the Mission. The need is urgent.

BOOKS USEFUL TO ALL BIBLE STUDENTS.

"A remarkable work, packed with information, and invaluable as a simple and easy handbook. Indeed, the ingenuity that has succeeded in squeezing so much into the space deserves all praise. Scores of items combine to astonish the reader. The editing has been carefully done, and a very trustworthy and wonderfully complete and sufficient book is the result."—SCOTTISH LEADER, October 15, 1891.

The Bible Remembrancer:

A VALUABLE HANDBOOK TO THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS. Sixty classified Headings with copious scripture references. Tinted Covers, 2s.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

The whole of the work has been carefully revised, and a large portion entirely re-written; while several new features have been introduced, rendering this Edition one of the most comprehensive companions to the Bible extant. To the Sabbath-school Teacher or Local Preacher it is simply invaluable.

Among the prominent features may be mentioned

A Complete Modern Atlas of Bible Lands, Consisting of FOURTEEN Choice Coloured Maps, containing the results of the most recent research.

An Analysis and Summary of the entire Scriptures—by which any Biblical incident can immediately be traced.

The Words of Christ; the Miracles, and Prayers and Thanksgivings of Christ: with full references to each of the four Evangelists.

A Chart showing THE ORDER OF ENCAMPMENT AND MARCH OF THE ISRAELITES THROUGH THE WILDERNESS. (Specially prepared for this Edition.)

WHAT REV. C. H. SPURGEON WRITES
Regarding Morgan and Scott's PORTABLE "CRUDEN."

"Messrs. Morgan & Scott are resolved not to be beaten, and so they have produced a portable edition of 'Cruden's Concordance' for 3s. 6d. Nobody should now be without a Concordance: which is to the Bible-reader what a foot-rule is to a carpenter, or a chain to a land-surveyor. For the sake of all the poor parsons in the three kingdoms, we feel grateful to Messrs. Morgan and Scott. How they can issue such a book at such a price we cannot tell."

MORGAN AND SCOTT'S COMPLETE EDITIONS.

Cruden's Concordance
TO THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

ALL the Editions described below contain 757 pages, 2270 closely-printed columns, and about 250,000 references. A special feature is The List of Proper Names, newly translated by Rev. ALFRED JONES, M.A. This portion of the work is strictly copyright, and can only appear in Morgan & Scott's Editions.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"A powerful and brilliant work. Dr. PENTECOST is not only a man of marked ability and scholarship; he is also a pulpit orator of the highest order. He at once arrests the attention, penetrates the heart, moves the affections, fires the imagination, bends the will, and directs the conduct. There is no escaping the spell of his voice, the charm of his style, and the power of his utterances. Anything from his pen may be bought with eagerness. He is equally at home in addressing saint and sinner, as this volume amply proves."
Oldham Chronicle.

ADDRESSES. | BIBLE CHARACTERS. | THE OLD GOSPEL.
FAITHFUL SAYING. | PREVAILING PRAYER. | HEAVEN.
SOVEREIGN GRACE. | POWER FROM ON HIGH.
THE WAY TO GOD. | TO THE WORK!

"These are popular works by our great Evangelist; and they deserve a large sale. There can be no need for us to commend the living, blazing speech of our brother Moody. Who can equal him in natural simplicity, all aglow with holy passion!"—The Sword and the Trowel.

ADDRESSES BY D. L. MOODY. 132nd Thousand.

Delivered in England and Revised by Himself. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Primitive Methodist:—"With the effect of these Addresses when spoken the whole land is acquainted; and now that they are written, they will tend to keep in force the impression they have already made."

THE FAITHFUL SAYING: 19th Thousand.

A Series of Gospel Addresses. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The King's Highway:—"These discourses are full of power and homely beauty, and exemplify very fully the strong points of the great Evangelist. His anecdotes are so fresh, so pointed, and so touching."

HEAVEN: 50th Thousand.

Its Hopes, Its Inhabitants, Its Riches, Its Rewards. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Baptist Magazine:—"We have here the large verbal familiarity with Scripture; the raciness of style; the profuseness and aptness of illustration; and the intense spiritual earnestness—which are always to be expected when Mr. Moody opens his lips to speak or takes his pen to write."

POWER FROM ON HIGH: 31st Thousand.

Or, the Secret of Success in Christian Life and Christian Work. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from Christian Commonwealth:—"Every page is full of stimulating thought for Christian workers."

Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Christian Stream:—"This work should be secured by all who are anxiously seeking the 'Way to God'; because it is made plain there by His servant. Christian people, too, may have their faith strengthened by a careful perusal of this welcome volume."

PREVAILING PRAYER: 10th Thousand.

A Series of Addresses on Prayer.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

"The best thing Mr. Moody has given us for a long time. It is most searching and powerful in its appeals to the conscience, and abounds in well-told incidents."—Lay Preacher.

Indigestion

The Rev. E. CORNEILLE, writing on November 14, 1891, from the Manse, Donegal, Ireland, says:—"I have derived wonderful benefit from the Guy's Tonic you sent me. After taking a first bottle I ordered a second, and since I have finished that bottle I have been free from indigestion. I have recommended it to several members of my congregation, and they have experienced great good from its use."

We are continually receiving enthusiastic testimonials in favour of Guy's Tonic treatment for cases of Indigestion, Nervousness, and for Weak and Languid Feeling. To every one suffering from these distressing complaints we say—test the matter yourself, and you will immediately have the most convincing argument in favour of the Guy's Tonic treatment.

We do not claim

That Guy's Tonic will infallibly cure every evil under the sun, but we do say, here and now, that it should immediately be resorted to—

When digestion is accompanied by flatulency.
When pain, weight, fulness or distension, is felt after eating.
When there is drowsiness after meals—a very common symptom.
When there is distaste for foods of all kinds; or
When there is a dull, weak, failing, or pining appetite.

Guy's Tonic is sold by all chemists at 2s. 9d. per bottle, and Guy's Fruit Pills at 1s. 1½d. box. They will be sent post paid at these prices by the Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

LETTER from the WELL-KNOWN REPRESENTATIVE in ENGLAND of a SCOTCH TEMPERANCE PAPER.

"Dear Sir,—I am very glad indeed to state that your medicine has had a most beneficial effect upon Mrs. Cruickshank. All through the late trying winter she had a severe cough with expectoration. She became exceedingly weak and lost flesh considerably. Her left lung was pronounced to be diseased. After using your medicine a short time she had quite regained her strength; the lung is reported to be 'healed.' She now attends to her house duties in the ordinary way. She ascribes her restoration to health entirely to your treatment. Kindly accept my sincere thanks.
—Yours gratefully,
"W. CRUICKSHANK.
"65, Endwell-road, Brockley, S.E., May 29, 1891."

In a note to one of Mr. Congreve's assistants, Mr Cruickshank writes:—"Kindly send on the enclosed. Mr Congreve can use it as he pleases. I am, as you may imagine, greatly relieved. The prospect of 'mitherless bairns' was a sad one."

CADBURY'S COCOA

ABSOLUTELY PURE THEREFORE BEST.

To All who Drink Cocoa:—Cadbury's Cocoa contains in a condensed and increased form, all the nourishing properties of the Cocoa Bean. The most perfect of prepared Cocoas, of absolute purity, and always alike in quality.—The Analyst.

The Medical Annual advises practitioners to remember that when recommending Cocoa as a food and beverage for invalids, the name Cadbury on any packet of Cocoa is a guarantee of purity.

Cadbury's Cocoa has, in a remarkable degree, those natural elements of sustenance, which give the system endurance and hardihood, building up muscle and bodily vigour, with a steady action that renders it a most acceptable and reliable beverage.—Health.

NO CHEMICALS USED.

Look in the Glass!

WE get so used to our faces we do not know how ugly we are—most of us.

Colour of hair we never become insensible to; of eyes, any peculiar feature. What we cannot mend we think of and grieve over.

Strange to say, we tolerate faults of skin, which are almost directly within our control. We do not know how happier people pity us!

Look in the glass! Can you see no use for a soap that purges the skin of pallor and pimples and oil, that softens and smooths it, brings out the rose and alabaster?

The secret of PEARS' SOAP is that it has no excess of alkali in it. You may use it, no matter how much, you cannot roughen the skin with it.

Health is always beautiful. Other beauty there is none.

Mrs. Meredith's SPECIAL BUILDING FUND.

Office: CONFERENCE HALL, CLAPHAM ROAD, S.W.

The busy Flat-iron, with Washing and Mangling by Machinery, have caused the Industrial Branch of the Prison Mission to crowd out all other work on the premises.

An Annex for Gospel Meetings, and other labours for the Sick and Poor, must be immediately built.

For this Mrs. Meredith begs £3000.

Who will give this much-needed addition to her Institution, which has inaugurated all recent efforts for the Salvation of Criminals and their Children?

No new scheme can supersede her Scriptural System, for the support of which she most earnestly pleads.

Donations for Special Building Fund should be payable to SUSANNA MEREDITH, crossed "Union Bank," Charing Cross, W.C.

SOCIETY FOR RELIEF OF PERSECUTED JEWS

(Syrian Colonisation Fund).

Mr. Scott Moncrieff, the Society's Special Agent in Palestine, reports days of heavy rain at Jaffa and Jerusalem. On Christmas Eve snowstorm; snow six inches deep; still snowing on 27th. The ill-clad, fireless, famished people in terrible plight. He has FOUND OUT many more families in total destitution. "The poor women shrinking into dark corners (many of their abodes have NO windows) to hide from me their rags; others standing quietly crying as I speak to their husbands. It is the sight of such tears filling the eyes and flowing down the cheeks of a starving mother, with a starving babe at her poor empty breast, that makes me dumb." Hundreds live in holes and corners "so vile, in darkness and abominations that sicken all the senses." The Relief work now costs £100 weekly. Work can be got by very few of the famishing thousands.

MISSIONARY NURSES' TRAINING HOME
IN CO-OPERATION WITH THE GLASGOW MEDICAL MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

All seeking admission to the above Home are reminded that the next medical session begins in April, 1892. Previous to their medical course all are recommended to spend the three months' probation—from January to April—in the evangelistic branch (the Lady Missionaries' Training Home), where a regular course of Biblical lectures will be delivered by ministers of the various evangelical denominations, and others interested in the training of missionaries, and where they will have supervision in evangelistic work. The above lectures will be free to any ladies in Glasgow who may wish to attend. (For days and hours see future advertisements.)

The Lady Missionaries' Training Home will also be used as a training home for any who desire one or two years' Biblical instruction with evangelistic work, &c., before engaging as missionaries. For such arrangements are being made whereby any who wish dispensary and ambulance instruction, &c., can have this upon payment of an additional fee.

For terms and full particulars of both Homes, applicants are requested to communicate at earliest convenience with the Hon. Secy., Miss FORRESTER PATON, Mars-hill House, Alloa.

"ROBIN" DINNERS.

The Robin Dinners, originated by the Rev. Charles Bullock, B.D., Editor of Home Words, began thirteen years since, with three or four hundred guests; about FORTY THOUSAND now enjoy a happy evening every year at a cost of SIXPENCE EACH. But London alone contains several hundred thousand children who would rejoice to be "made happy for an evening"; and at Sixpence each for the Dinner and Evening's Entertainment, to welcome these would cost no less than £12,500. All we can do is to hope that the time will come—the earlier the better—when every poor child in London will know by happy experience what a "Robin Dinner" is. Will our Readers help us to hasten the time by doing what they can, and remember that "every little helps"?

WILL YOU HELP TO GIVE ONE EVENING'S HAPPINESS TO ONE CHILD THIS WINTER?

The whole funds go straight to the children through the agency of those who know best how to dispose of them—either the Clergy living and working in the poorest parishes of London, or through the Ragged School Union.

We can only print a few of the many striking letters we have received in the last few days from well-known clergymen and others.

SPITALFIELDS.

The Rev. J. H. SCOTT writes:—

"Thanks very much for so kindly renewing our grant for 'Robin' Dinners. Our poor children have not much to brighten their lives in a place like Spitalfields, and anything that comes to them like a ray of sunshine must have a beneficial effect. They are truly grateful."

BATTERSEA PARK.

The Rev. JOHN G. RICE, D.D., writes:

"For over eight years we have been able to gladden the hearts of six or seven hundred poor children, who would have no Christmas cheer but for the 'Robin' Dinners."

RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.

JOHN KIRK, Esq., writes:—

"The 'Robin' Dinners have been a boon and blessing to our Ragged Robins. To have been without them would have meant so much less joy and sunshine in the lives of thousands of sad pinched-faced ones who cannot be said to have too much gladness in them at any time. Our Ragged School teachers join with me in heartfelt thanks for the help."

The Rev. T. GIVEN WILSON, of Plaistow, writes:—

"Your 'Robin' Dinners have brought most timely help to hundreds of poor children in this large, poor parish (Plaistow) of 21,000 whose parents have been almost destitute through illness or scarcity of work. The praiseworthy feature about them is that not only is a substantial meal of roast beef and plum pudding provided for the children, but a happy evening, which must make them feel that there are kind hearts in the world who, for Christ's sake, think of them and care for them. I trust the opportunity which the 'Robin' Dinners offer, to children in happy and comfortable homes to help the children of the poor will be eagerly welcomed by them, so as to enable you largely to extend this winter 'Robin's' merciful work."

The Committee feel it necessary to state that they cannot be responsible for appeals sent out in the name of "Robin," unless bearing either the address of Coomrith, Bournemouth, or No. 7, Paternoster Square, London.

All Contributions are acknowledged in THE NEWS, published at HOME WORDS OFFICE. Reports of Dinners are also given.

An audited Balance Sheet is published every year. Subscriptions should be addressed to—

"ROBIN," Coomrith, Bournemouth; or to the Hon. Secs., C. ASHTON BULLOCK, B.A., and JOHN KIRK, "Robin" Dinner Fund, 7, Paternoster Square, London, E.C.

The Christian.

☞ It is particularly requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan & Scott, and not to individual members. Communications for THE CHRISTIAN should be addressed to the Editor. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of the late Dr. CRANAGE, of the Old Hall School, Wellington, Salop.

IN order to make room for other matters, Rev. F. B. Meyer's expository chapter on the life of MOSES is omitted this week. The subject has, so far, been treated in a manner which many have found very helpful, and we hope next week to continue the series.

Referring to a question raised in our issue for December 10, as to the character and tone of the religious instruction given in Board Schools, we are glad to have from one parent strong evidence as to the teaching in at least two London Board Schools. We observe, however, that in these instances the head master, and some of the assistants, are stated to be earnest Christians, and certainly we never doubted that where this is so the result must be satisfactory. The examination paper sent us shows that an intelligent understanding of the Scriptures is expected. All this is, of course, reassuring, so far as it goes; but we know that in some Board Schools the Scriptures are handled in a very different tone and temper.

The urgency and importance of the religious teaching of the coming generation justifies our repeated reference to the matter; and this one of our correspondents puts well in these words:—

> With Romanism, Atheism, and other delusions rampant, it is of the highest importance that the minds of the young be well fortified against the wiles of the evil one, and by the entrance of that Word which giveth light, made wise unto salvation.

That the well-to-do classes stand quite as much in need of evangelising as the poorer classes is obvious enough, and is, indeed, felt strongly by many, who, however, do not find them so easy of access as the humbler folk. Many are, we know, burdened by this matter, and by one means or another, as suggested by circumstances and opportunities, are labouring to bring the Gospel in all its simplicity under the personal notice of those who belong to the upper circles of society.

In this connection our attention has been called to a New Year's letter sent round in one prosperous suburban district. The writer puts the claims of personal religion, the necessity for individual salvation, in the plainest and most direct fashion, and he has, we understand, taken care that a copy should reach every house in the neighbourhood. Might not much more be done in this way during the whole of the year? In France the post has been largely utilised for the circulation of Gospel booklets and personal appeals, but we are not sure that, apart, perhaps, from the operations of the Monthly Tract Society, full use has yet been made of letter-writing in this country. This is all the more to be regretted, because some remarkable conversions are on record, in which the instrumentality owned of God was that of a personal letter, lovingly and prayerfully penned, setting forth the claims of Christ on the individual.

It is an interesting fact, as showing the progress which Christianity is making in Japan, that there are now no fewer than thirteen baptized Christians in the Japanese House of Representatives, and a Japanese journal remarks that if the average were preserved throughout the country the figures would imply that there are a million and a-half converts to Christianity in the island.

It cannot, unfortunately, be hoped that the actual percentage is anything like this, and in a letter from the Bishop of Exeter which recently appeared in The Times, it is stated that the native mind is at present being swayed hither and thither by the shifting currents of religious thought, but that it needs only a great effort on the part of Christendom to be won over to Christianity within a very short space of time. The Bishop, who has been travelling in Japan, adds that Buddhism has done nothing for the people; and he is enthusiastic in regard to the future of mission work in the country.

Vague statements are made from time to time as to the heavy expenditure supposed to be incurred by the missionary societies in administration. This charge will not, however, bear the test of examination. For example, the C.M.S. issues a memorandum to the following effect:—"Out of every sovereign expended, the proportion spent in the direct service of missions has increased from 15s. 10½d. to 16s. 8d.; while that for retired missionaries has decreased from 11d. to 8d.; collection of funds from 1s. 7d. to 1s. 3d.; and administration from 1s. 1½d. to 10½d." We learn, on inquiry, that the Baptist Missionary Society, and some others can show quite as good figures. In this, as in many other cases, objections raised by critics vanish on close investigation.

In a letter to Lord Salisbury, Mr. Henry Varley calls attention to some fearful evils he witnessed lately at Singapore. The first of these, the Chinese Coolie Immigration Traffic, "is nothing better than a system of slavery," for, without consulting their wishes or interests, the Coolies are forwarded by deceitful agents to places of service in the various islands. Describing this traffic, which involves the liberty of 150,000 Chinese every year, Mr. Varley says:—

> Singapore has become a vast slave market at the hands of Englishmen, and the Imperial Government appears not only to have closed its eyes to the facts, but to have protected and encouraged the inhuman traffic.

Another abomination which Mr. Varley exposes is the licensing of immoral houses by the Government. The revolting details show that this vile system is one urgently demanding suppression. Summing up, Mr. Varley asks:—

> Is it anything less than appalling to find the Imperial Legislature of the first and greatest Empire in the world protecting and tacitly recognising human slavery and slave dealers, licensing opium dens, as also immoral houses and their degraded keepers?

In another part of this issue, a brief report will be found of a meeting held on Monday evening in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, by way of hastening the abolition of the opium traffic. Readers of the daily papers will have noticed recently paragraphs announcing a decrease in the consumption of opium in India, consequent upon the enforcement of measures of prohibition in some of the Provinces. If this "official" statement were true, it would be good news; in any case, it concedes the contention of Christians and philanthropists that the system is evil, and ought to be severely held in check, if not totally abolished. But we are assured that the statement is quite misleading; and the facts and figures given by Mr. A. S. Dyer on December 4 at the meeting at Exeter Hall, taken from sources unquestionably official, make it impossible to extract any comfort from the telegraphed statements. We recommend our readers to study that address as reported in the December issue of The Anti-Opium News (1d. Dyer Bros., Paternoster-square, E.C.).

The misleading reports to which we have referred are calculated to hinder the rising tide of indignation against the opium iniquity. The great enemy of souls has ever been clever at minimising sin and making light of its terrible consequences, and we should all be mindful of his wiles. Simultaneously with the arrival of the telegrams which there is so much reason to discount, a copy of a memorial to Lord Salisbury has reached this country, signed by the highly-respected Bishop Thoburn, of the American Methodist Episcopal Mission. In it the ministers of the South India Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, assembled at Poona, say:—

> Your memorialists are daily pained by the devastating effects of the opium traffic, which is now spreading rapidly in India, and unless suppressed, will ruin the millions of the land as it has ruined individuals and families.
> Opium not only degrades its numerous victims, and brings sorrow and ruin to their families, but also so completely deadens the sensibilities and paralyses the moral nature, as effectually to bar all attempt in the direction of temporal, moral, and religious elevation.
> Your memorialists pray that this iniquitous traffic, which causes such a blot on the name of Great Britain and on Christianity, the defender of which it claims to be, may be speedily and entirely prohibited in India, except for medicinal purposes, and then under the same restrictions as in Great Britain.

This is the prayer of men who fear God and love those for whom Christ died. We sincerely trust the time is drawing near when the opium question shall be grasped by Christian people in Great Britain, for then the traffic will assuredly be ended. Britain's action in India will be influential in China; and with the hateful drug trodden under foot, the Gospel of the grace of God will gain the ear and the heart of millions of Orientals who are now enslaved by a deadly vice.

The last issue of The Record contained a number of instructive letters on the present attack upon the Bible. It is made very clear that acceptance of the conclusions of modern criticism is a challenge of the authority of Christ. One argument which is being much used, in order to explain away Christ's references to the Pentateuch as the work of Moses, is that in "emptying himself" the Lord became subject to human limitations of knowledge on matters of history as well as science. But is it not clear from the Gospel narrative, that in the days of his public ministry, as the Divine Prophet and Interpreter—"the Teacher come from God"—Christ spoke as one having full knowledge and absolute authority? We decline to allow to the "scientific method" the unlimited knowledge which it refuses to the Lord's Anointed. The question is rapidly taking the form of—Which Teacher—Christ or Criticism? Loyal disciples should have a ready answer.

This criticism turns the Old Testament topsy-turvy, and yet its devotees tell us that the spiritual teaching of Christ is not affected by those of his statements which it professes to disprove! To those intending to investigate the matter we give the advice—"Begin with Christ." In the light of his words and works, there is no doubt respecting the Old Testament; and regarding the New, there will not soon be any more questioning worth troubling about. A practical contribution to the discussion is made by Rev. W. Salter Price, of Wingfield, who shows that in the mission-field nothing can be done where there is not a firm conviction that the Bible is indeed "the Word of God."

It is grievous to reflect that some professed followers of Christ should be engaged in what we cannot but regard as the destruction of the Law of the Prophets, which the Master Himself came "not to destroy, but to fulfil." Of course, they will not succeed; but, at the same time, they will certainly do much to unsettle the weak and encourage the enemies of the Gospel. Mr. Gladstone, in a brief letter, points out that early Greek and Roman history were years ago attacked by a destructive criticism, which in the end was itself destroyed.

According to a recent report from the Registrar-General, it appears that there has been a rapid decline in what are termed "girl and boy marriages," the falling-off being most remarkable in the East-end of London, where, it will be remembered, these early marriages created the utmost concern in the public mind a few years ago. The register of the famous "Red Church," where no fees were charged for marriages, shows that during the past year, out of the five hundred marriages, in only about five cases were the parties under twenty years old.

MILDMAY MISSION TO THE JEWS.

The annual meetings for "Praise and Prayer" on behalf of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews were held in Room No. 6 of Mildmay Conference Hall on Monday, 4th inst. Mr. James E. Mathieson presided at the morning meeting. After leading the congregation in prayer to God, he spoke on Isaiah lxv. 17—25. Referring to the present state of unrest and expectancy throughout the world, he mentioned the fact that a similar condition of mind existed at the period of Christ's first coming. The ancient world had reached the summit of its civilisation, and the philosophers had failed to satisfy the hearts of men. It was then that Christ came into the world. Now we have reached a similar lavish display of wealth on the one hand and the grinding down of the poor on the other, and at the same time there is a widespread sense of insecurity and fear. "The End of the Age" is becoming a popular phrase in circles which have no sympathy with those that are looking for the coming of the Lord. And why should we long for this? That Israel may be saved, and that through them salvation may come to all men.

Dr. A. T. Pierson also gave an address, stating that his idea of a prayer-meeting was an occasion for the children of God to come together to have their hearts filled with rightly directed information to be subsequently used up in private and family prayer. He confessed that he had been obliged to give up his own theological ideas on the Jewish subject, and to get straight from the Bible God's teaching and purpose concerning Israel. He invited the audience to trace Scripture teaching as to the olive-tree in relation to the Jews. The olive-tree typifies peace, honour, priesthood, worship, covenant, redemption, Holy Spirit, communion, fertility, and glory. Its soil, Palestine; its root, Abraham; its branches, David and the tribes; its flower and fruit, Messiah; its fatness, the Holy Spirit; the excision, unbelief.

Colonel Morton took the chair at the evening meeting, and made some remarks on Psalm cxxxvii. To a Jew baptized at this meeting Dr. J. L. Maxwell presented a Bible, and addressed a few impressive words.

Rev. J. Wilkinson gave some account of the work. The Mission has thirty-seven paid agents at home and abroad, and a very large number of voluntary workers in all parts. During the past year over £9000 has been sent in for the work of the Mission; over forty thousand attendances have been registered at the various branches at home; 50,109 Hebrew New Testaments have been sent for distribution in Russia and elsewhere, and also 268,171 Judeo-German portions of the New Testament. A Mission has been established at Liverpool, and two shelters are being opened at the London and Tilbury Docks for affording some relief to Jewish immigrants. The new Central Hall in the East of London is expected to be ready for the workers in about three months. Mr. Wilkinson related some interesting facts reported by his agents in Russia, and Mr. Adler also added a few that have come under his own observation.

DR. PIERSON'S WORK IN LONDON.

A correspondent writes:—The services of Dr. Pierson at the Metropolitan Tabernacle having been greatly appreciated by the church and congregation, a memorial has been drawn up requesting him to remain until Mr. Spurgeon's return. This action on the part of the deacons and elders has the hearty approval of the members, and Dr. Pierson has intimated his willingness to comply with the request.

His fame having travelled far and wide, he has been inundated with applications, from all parts of the country, for sermons and speeches, and a very serious tax has been imposed upon his time and strength in attempting to answer his correspondents. As he finds the strain of his Metropolitan Tabernacle engagement as much as he can reasonably be expected to bear, there is no other course open to him than to treat the greater number of the applications for the extraneous services as though they had not been written.

THE ANTI-OPIUM MOVEMENT.

On Monday evening, by way of prelude to the Exeter Hall demonstration of Tuesday, the first hour of the Metropolitan Tabernacle weekly prayer-meeting was devoted to the consideration of the opium question.

Mr. T. A. Denny presided, and said that the subject was one of overwhelming importance, involving as it did the well-being or degradation of a vast proportion of the human race. After reviewing at some length the working of the opium traffic, and showing it was a money matter, the system being maintained for the sake of profit, the Chairman showed that a remedy might easily be found were some statesmen led to take up the question seriously. At all costs, we must free ourselves from complicity in this sinful traffic which violates the law of God and is condemned by every line of the teaching of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Dr. James L. Maxwell (Secretary of the Christian Union against the Opium Traffic) moved a resolution, pledging the meeting to take earnest action to prevent the continuance of this national wrong-doing. In the course of his address he said: I have here two letters, received this morning, one from the heart of China, the other from the island of Java, and both dwelling strongly on the evil wrought by opium. The first speaks of a prayer meeting held in the interior of China on this matter, and the writer says "we met to plead specially for the

the other deplores the extension of the opium curse in the East Indies.

Now, what is this opium traffic? Many may have little notion of its magnitude. For the last ten years the average amount of opium sent forth from India to China and the Straits Settlements has been ninety thousand chests, each chest containing 140 pounds weight of the drug. Sixty thousand of these chests have been produced in our own territory, and about thirty thousand in the Native States of India. Each chest brings to the Government six hundred rupees (or about £45) revenue, or some four millions per annum. And all this opium is most carefully prepared to suit the taste of the consumers, to minister to what is medically known as "the opium habit."

Next, what is the result of this traffic? I hold in my hand a paper signed by five thousand medical men in Great Britain and Ireland, declaring the use of the drug to be morally and physically debasing, a great danger to the well-being of the people, and urging that opium should be classed and sold as a poison. Such a paper, signed by so many medical men, ought to silence the attempts being made through the press to whitewash the system. As to this debasing effect, both morally and physically, I may be permitted to give my own experience as a medical missionary, that it is ruinous physically, and utterly destructive morally.

Now, in face of such facts, we ask of this state of things, not only in China, but in the Straits Settlements and Burmah? The guilt is at India's door, that is at our door, as the governors of India. But does not, it may be urged, China grow the poppy herself now? She does; but we introduced the drug, and taught her people the taste for it. We forced it on her against her will; and being compelled to admit, she now permits her own subjects to grow it, rather than that all the silver paid for opium should be sent out of the country. The sin, then, lies at our door, and we have come to the point that this thing must end. What is the difficulty? Merely that of revenue. It is stated that it is impossible to do without it; but various plans have been suggested, and might easily be carried out. Then there are those who say it is impossible to stop the growth; but facts show the Government has absolute control. It is said this procedure would break faith with the native princes, who derive a revenue from the growth; but examination shows their revenue from the drug to be very small indeed. Whatever arrangements be adopted, we demand the traffic must come to end; the axe must be laid to the root of this upas tree. Now is the time; if it be not done now we may awake soon to find it is too late, that the evil has been done and cannot be undone.

AT WHOSE DOOR LIES THE GUILT

Mr. Cheok Hong Cheong, in seconding the resolution, said: It is exceedingly appropriate that at this season of prayer you should be reminded of the words "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold, them also I must bring . . . and there shall be one fold and one Shepherd." What do these "other sheep" mean? The Gentiles, who, though not yet actually his, are his in the love of his heart and the purpose of his grace. But these "other sheep"

ARE NOW PERISHING IN MILLIONS.

No man seems to care for their souls, and, still worse, for the sake of gain, temptations are being thrown in their way. For, remember, not only the missionaries and native Christians look on the opium as evil, but the very heathen themselves consider it as the greatest curse which has yet visited China, before which even the disastrous floods on the great river, "China's sorrow," are as nothing. Their cry is for you to deliver them, to hasten to the rescue. One of our own statesmen (Chinese) has declared that fifty years more of this opium plague and China will be ruined. Even the victims call out for the temptation to be taken away. They cannot break the habit while the drug is to be had; but if it was made impossible to buy it, then they would have a chance of deliverance. Now, will you listen to their cry, or will you chide them for weakness in yielding? I have often tried the latter, but, alas! how vain once the habit is acquired and the drug is to be obtained. They are helpless and hopeless till the temptation is removed. Will you remove it, and do your best to remove the evil already wrought?

The resolution was unanimously adopted, and, after prayer, the proceedings concluded. We reserve to our next issue a report of the Tuesday evening demonstration.

THE OPIUM CURSE OF ASIA.

Oh! the fair fields of India, how brightly they shine
'Neath the sun in his tropical glow,
While the tints of the poppy so softly combine
To produce this magnificent show.

But a curse is concealed in the blossoms that wave
In the light of that tropical sun;
'Tis a curse that will render its victim a slave
In the course he hath madly begun.

He may strive to escape from its terrible thrall,
But he knows not the might of his foe.
And will clasp to his breast the foul fiend in his fall
As he sinks to the regions of woe!

Yet he dreams that he lives in a palace of gold,
Though he lies on a pallet of straw,
While his soul is decaying, his heart growing cold,
As he feels the fell hunger to gnaw.

On the wife of his bosom, whom once he held dear,
And the children around him that played,
He bestows not a thought, and he sheds not a tear
O'er the ruin his folly has made.

There are thousands of homes in the lands of the East
Where the poppy now reigneth supreme,
Where a man is reduced to the state of a beast,
And his life to a sickening dream.

For his rapturous feelings are followed ere long
By a fever that maddens his brain,
And the victim of vice sees a hideous throng
That exult in his terrible pain.

So he longs for the death that shall give him release
From the anguish he cannot endure;
For he knows that his agony never will cease,
And his malady nothing can cure.

Alas, Britain! thy garments are stained with the blood
Of thy victims on China's fair plains;
For thy greed hath swept down like the Hoang-ho's flood,
In pursuit of thy ill-gotten gains.

It is vain to contend that a valid excuse
Can be found in the revenue gained
By the growth of the poppy, or any abuse
Of the power which thou hast obtained.

For, O Britain! the voice of the blood thou hast shed
In that land where thy merchants have trod,
While their greed on its vitals hath cruelly fed,
Cries aloud for revenge to thy God.

Then, O Britain! repent of this terrible sin,
Let thy hands from oppression be clean,
Or the favour of Heaven thou never canst win,
And be crowned as of nations the queen.

Let the fair fields of India be planted with grain,
Let the poppy no longer allure,
Let the rice and the indigo flourish again,
And her revenue yet shall be sure;

And the hearts of the people once more shall rejoice,
As they welcome the Gospel we bring,
Till the lands of the East shall proclaim with one voice,
The Messiah ye worship is King

THANKSGIVING.

"Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy Name give glory."—Psalm cxv. 1.

THE REVIEW OF THE 34TH YEAR'S WORK on behalf of FRIENDLESS AND FALLEN Young Women and Girls, calls forth praise and thanksgiving to the Triune God for the grace, wisdom, and strength vouchsafed to conduct this mission of mercy thus far.

No good thing has been withheld, though certainly at times during 1891, trials and difficulties greatly perplexed those upon whom the actual responsibilities of the work rested.

RETURNS (SUBJECT TO FINAL CORRECTION).

560 Young Women and Girls admitted to the various Homes.

These would include a large number of the really Friendless and Virtuous.

Many in the first stages of a downward course—saved before sinking into still lower depths—and very many who had fallen into the lowest condition of moral turpitude.

653 have been sheltered in the OPEN-ALL-NIGHT REFUGE. This number does not include those who may have been lodged there in former years, and for whom mercy appears still to plead, reminding workers of the Saviour who said "I will in no wise cast out" (John vi. 37), and that "He is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by Him" (Heb. vii. 25). Very many precious souls have been gathered out of this moral débris.

At least 6,500 FREE LODGINGS, including food and other aid, will have been given during the year 1891, and Mr Thomas has visited this refuge as a rule every morning, and advised with each one present, in the hope of promoting the permanent welfare of all new comers, and offering at the same time to any suitable case the benefits of the Homes of the Institution

The question may be well asked,—How were these gathered in during 1891?

Sixty-three missions and various agencies were co-operated with in rescue work.

YOUNG WOMEN WERE RECEIVED FROM—

Midnight Meetings, The Streets, The Parks, The Police Courts, Prisons, Hospitals, Infirmaries, Bad Homes; also By Night, By Day, On Sundays, &c., &c.

A Metropolitan Magistrate, in sending a donation of £10 10s. a few days ago, wrote :—

"Let me at the same time thank you, on behalf of my colleagues and myself, for the kind and valuable assistance you have rendered us on several occasions, in taking over sad cases which have come before us."

Commander K., R.N., who superintends an important mission in a garrison town in Hampshire, recently called to express his appreciation of the help rendered by the Homes in the rescue work carried on by his staff of workers.

Many visits have been made to the various Police Courts of the Metropolis, for it often happens that amidst all the crime and vice which daily find representatives in these Summary Courts of Justice, good Missionary work may be accomplished.

950 applications for admission were made by and on behalf of Young Women and Girls at the Central Home, as well as many at the branch Homes.

The services of a lady are secured to see all applicants at 200, Euston Road, to enter into the particulars of cases of Young Women and Girls, to arrange for admission into the Homes, and to conduct the correspondence arising out of this branch of the work.

Thousands of letters are written annually at the office and various Homes in the interest of young women, and very often result in restoring lost daughters to parents and friends.

OPEN-ALL-NIGHT REFUGE.

37, Manchester Street, W.C. Visited every morning by Mr. Thomas, to endeavour to arrange permanent help to all new-comers	21

Total number of inmates to maintain 240

The Institution, formed in 1857, was established on the following basis :—

1st. To seek to rescue Friendless and Fallen Young Women, to bring them under religious influences.

2nd. To establish Homes on the family principle in the various districts of the Metropolis.

The majority admitted to the Homes are Country Girls and Orphans.

RELIGIOUS AND OTHER SERVICES HELD IN THE HOMES. (From last Annual Report.)

Sunday Services	780	Temperance Meetings	221
Week-day Services	832	Educational and other Classes	1,092
Bible Classes	828	Total Annually	3,753

The good seed often lies buried and apparently lost, but only till the Holy Spirit quickens, then precious fruit is brought forth.

MEALS PROVIDED FOR INMATES OF THE HOMES.

Daily	960
Weekly	6,720
Annually	350,400

This does not include meals which have to be provided for Matrons and Assistants.
Applicants often show signs of actual hunger, and the Master says "Give ye them to eat."

Donations in aid of these ever recurring wants are most gratefully received at all times.

The inquiry is often made, How are all the Homes sustained?

Not by funds raised by collection at public anniversary dinners.
Not by funds raised by bazaars.
Not through the agency of travelling deputations holding public meetings in the provinces.
No paid collectors are employed to canvass for subscriptions.

But annually, by donations and subscriptions, and especially at Christmastide and New Year, the claims of the work and its special needs are made known. For 34 years God has so disposed the hearts of His servants that all needful wants have been granted, and so future supplies are anticipated.

Recently it was shown that 3,262 contributions brought the work of the seven Homes and Open-all-Night Refuge to a successful issue. Ladies and gentlemen who sympathised with the Sorrows of Friendless and Fallen Young Women and Girls contributed as under in the year:—

Donations of—		Donations of—
Five Shillings and under	968	Ten Pounds and Ten Guineas	37
Ten Shillings	476	Twenty Pounds and Twenty Guineas	8
Ten Shillings and Sixpence	84	Twenty-five Pounds	4

Christ at the Door.

Notes of an Address at Aberdeen,

By Rev. John McNeill.

"Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me" (Revelation iii. 20). I always think of this text along with that other familiar one (John iii. 16)—"For God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." In the one text we have the Father's love; and in the other equally sweet and gracious text we have the illustration, as it were, of how freely God's love was given; for lo! the Son has come all the way from glory, and has arrived at the very door to tell us how true John iii. 16 was. From the one text shines out the Divine grace of the Father, while from the other shines out the glorious, condescending, gentle grace of the Son.

Notice the true setting of the text. When the text was first uttered or penned, what was the time of day, so to speak? The actual earthly life of Jesus was as far away from man as, let us say, in the way of illustration, the actual time of Waterloo is distant from the present. Not only was Christ away, but the great generals of that Waterloo time of his earthly life and ministry—His Apostles—so far as we know, were all away except John, the oldest and the last of them. In other words, the times of walking by faith in a Saviour whom they had never seen, but only heard about second-hand, had come upon the Church. There was a want of first-handedness about the Gospel then; and that is what troubles many of us. I believe it was just to make us feel as near to the immediate presence of Jesus as though He were preaching to us by the Apostles themselves, that in these letters to the Churches He spoke in an immediately present tense and present sense of OBLITERATING DISTANCE AND TIME.

It was as though He opened the window of heaven right over our heads, and spoke straight down to us in every generation and said, "There are no intervening centuries betwixt you and Me. I am in heaven; I am risen to the right hand; but I am with you and know all about you—how you are thriving or how you are not thriving. I am as close to you as ever I was to the generation in which I actually lived and ministered."

We have to watch our rhetoric. We sometimes speak of Christ's words coming to us "across the centuries." Now, a word that comes to me across the centuries is apt to fall on my ear very faintly indeed; for every century is noisy enough with its own noise: too noisy to let in with any great force a word that comes looming through two or three centuries. The Lord is not speaking across the centuries. It makes no whit of difference; He says: "I will make the man who trusts Me nineteen hundred years after I actually lived—I will make his heart to dance as gladly as John's or Paul's or Peter's. And the man who rejects Me in the nineteenth century will crucify Me on the cross afresh, as much as the man who drove the nail or thrust the spear."

This letter was written to professing Christians. Laodicea was a busy commercial town. A Church had been formed, and very likely it was not composed of what are called poor or broken-down people, but of "the best people in the town." Very likely they built a building like themselves—the best building to hold the best people. Everything was just as good as it could be, in style and taste. When we read about their description of themselves, it might be a quotation from the Treasurer's report at the annual meeting of the congregation. They were rich; many cultured men belonged to the Church; they had an excellent choir, and the finest organ that could be built; the whole service was refined, cultured, and æsthetic; the best people in the city were taking seats every week, and there was scarcely a seat to be had; altogether there was QUITE A "BOOM" IN THE CHURCH.

Watch what you say about your Church, for the crucified Son of God is listening. I do not read that there was any fault found with the Laodiceans about doctrine. Some churches were blamed for heresy and others for loose living. Laodicea was not blamed for either of these; but it was blamed for the most damnable of all heresies—the peddling, little, pedantic soul that does not love the Christ of God supremely. That was its blight, and heresy, and curse. Can we put it past us? The letter is not addressed to wretched sinners, to howling blasphemers, but to as decent folk as ourselves. I think I see them. The minister is in his place; the men singers and the women singers are there. The congregation is comfortably settled down in church to begin their splendid routine of worship, when there was a knocking at the outside door of the church, and they were startled by a voice as of a man, and yet more than man—a voice as of one in whom anger is striving with tears, saying, "Stop the heartless sham. You are all in your places, but I am not in my place. I am thrust out to the outside, I who ought to be the centre and circumference of preaching and praying and singing. I stand at the outside knocking; stop the pitiful sham, and let me in again."

We need in Aberdeen and everywhere to get at the real context and the first meaning of the text; it is for professing Christians first of all. What was wrong with Laodicea was that Christ was not at the heart of the preaching, the praying, or the singing, or the giving, or the Sunday-school. The church was a mere place for going to loll about for an hour and a-half, and then to loll out again—a routine, a husk and shell, with the kernel gone; and the people loved to have it so. So Christ used sharp measures, and spoke sharply because He wanted to be in again.

Have we not the same trouble to-day? You have been going back of late—getting heavy and dull. Some time ago you used to be eager and delighted to go to church, and could not go often enough. The religious part of your life, so to speak, used to be the brightest; now it has got the other way about. You are easily kept back, and have joined the ignoble army of the murmurers—not the martyrs, but the martyr-makers, the murderers of ministers, the killers, the slayers, the dead-weights.

WHAT IS WRONG?

You are dying at the heart. Jesus Christ is not in your heart as He used to be in the days of your first love and first works; and you will never be right till you get back your first love. It is Christ Jesus you need. It is not more sermons you want, or more praying; it is simply, once for all, to do what you did at first—to open your heart, poor Laodicean backslider, and, as though a Zulu or a Hottentot hearing the Gospel for the first time, believe in Christ. Just as consumptives in London yonder are sent away back to their native air up here in Braemar or on Deeside, so for you whose souls are beginning to decay, I want to send you back to your native air—back to the Cross, back to the old simple faith of the Saviour who died for you.

How did Christ get so far out in Laodicea? There are different ways of sending Him away. Remember there is no friend we have, more sensitive than Jesus. Dull as we are we can easily detect if a certain friend who professed to love us has changed and grown cold, no matter what presents and honeyed words he showers upon us. There is no counterfeiting "the lowe of love." The Gospel is still preached in the old orthodox way; everything is right in form and name. But the throbbing heart of love is going out of preacher and singer and church work. Our blessed, sensitive Jesus is like a woman, like a loving mother, a loving wife, a loving lass or sweetheart, for detecting when the love is beginning to go down. And if that love goes down the Lord will never bother us. The Son of God thrusts Himself on none of us, but sadly drops tears as He goes.

HE WILL RISE AND LEAVE US.

Nothing can be a substitute or make up for the personal affection of a personal Saviour. We need not go into drink or lust, or become violent sinners, or heretics in doctrine. We may put Christ out with great politeness. We keep going to his Church as industriously as ever, and giving to missions as industriously as ever, but the Son of God has taken the hint and left.

We cannot explain the heavenly mystery by which Christ, after being cast out, comes and knocks at the door of the heart, again wanting admission. But here is the chance for the backslider. There is no wholesale way of curing backsliding, any more than of saving sinners. We must come back one by one. Christ will be glad to get into any heart, and especially a heart that was once opened to Him, and that has since gone astray.

In this text Christ illustrates what salvation is, and how it comes. There may have been some woman in Aberdeen to-day who was annoyed by a rapping at the door and a ringing of the bells all day. Another knock came and she went grumbling and shuffling to the door and opened it rather crossly. But all at once the crossness disappeared, and her face and countenance began to gleam and glow like the sun breaking over Ben Cruachan. What had happened? There at the door stood a long-forgotten and welcome friend. The woman felt rather ashamed when she saw whom she had grumbled at, and was slow to open the door for. She took her friend to the cosy chamber where she actually lived; not to the best parlour where she did not live, but used for shoving the minister into. In a little while the table was spread. I think I can see the two of them. It is not so much what they are eating and drinking by mouth; it is that they are eating and drinking, so to speak, each other—each other's experience; all that has happened since last they were together.

Jesus says salvation is like that. "I am your friend," He says; "you have forgotten me for a long time, and I have come to your door unexpectedly. There was no use of sending word. I have just arrived in my own time. Hear my voice; come to the door, open it, and I will come in and will sup with you and you with Me." Is this Jesus in your heart, where all your loves are, where all your hopes are; not in some outside show-department of life that only sees strangers and visitors, but where wife and husband and sweetheart are? The Lord wants to get there; to be counted among your heart friends. I can say without detriment to father or mother, and without depreciation of the beloved wife who has left my side, that my love for Christ surpasses that for all of them. I seem as if every day I know the Man I have never seen better than any friend I ever held fellowship with. "Whom having not seen we love"—that is the glory and triumph of the Gospel.

GOSPEL WORK IN PRAGUE.

Gospel work progresses in Bohemia. A second Evangelical Reformed congregation in Prague was inaugurated a short time ago, through its first minister, Mr. L. B. Kaspar, being publicly installed into office. Local obstacles made it necessary to establish the congregation in one of the suburbs of the city, namely, Vinohrady, a town of thirty-five thousand inhabitants, which has risen within the last twenty years, and is still rapidly increasing.

The congregation is the outcome of an earnest desire for the preaching of the pure Gospel, that has been awakened through various preparatory agencies. It is the smallest in all Bohemia; having begun with about thirty members and their families, it has now about two hundred and fifty adherents, including the children.

At the installation, deputies from Kradiste thanked Pastor Kaspar for all he had done for them during the many years of his ministry among them. It is to be hoped that Mr. Kaspar's influence in his new sphere will be in a high degree blessed of God. A correspondent writes to us: "One of the most pressing wants of the congregation is a more spacious building in which to hold its meetings. Bible-classes are held every Friday evening in the minister's house. But this room, although not large, is decidedly too small to accommodate those who assemble at divine worship in the hall of the Smetanka, a school-house belonging to the community of Vinohrady. The congregation will soon have to quit this hall, as it is wanted for educational purposes. The Roman Catholics are building a splendid church in the town. God grant that the Protestants may also erect a suitable, though humble place for the proclamation of the Gospel."

The Social Scheme of the Salvation Army.

II.—THE ELEVATORS AND THE LABOUR BUREAU.

BY PEARL FISHER.

The hungry and homeless poor find in the Food and Shelter depôts of the Salvation Army a certain amelioration of their pitiful lot; but it is in the Elevators, or workshops, that they come within reach of rescue. The former help them in their distress; the latter help them out of it. Here, indeed, lies the very core of the Social Scheme, which aims not so much at relieving as at raising. There are now in London three Elevators and one Home.

THE SPITALFIELDS ELEVATOR.

In Hanbury-street, Spitalfields, stands "Elevator No. 1," a block of old shops, converted and altered to suit their new purpose. The staff-captain in charge showed me over the workshops, explained the working arrangements, introduced several saved men, and generally did his best to afford a clear idea of the whole. In the store I saw piles of materials for use, and quantities of articles made on the premises. Amongst these I noticed fleets of pretty toy yachts—the handiwork of a poor fellow found sadly fallen—and likely to delight many a boy in many a home. Also there were quantities of wirework knick-knacks, produced by one who, formerly a schoolmaster, had plunged into the depths, and, saved by the Salvation Army, had offered to teach lads, without a trade, the art and craft of wire-working.

Passing through the store, we entered the carpentering shops, where a host of men—bearing, many of them, on their worn features the traces of a sinful life—were hard at work along the benches, turning out very creditable specimens. Carpentering and cabinet-making seem the staple industries at Hanbury-street. There are, however, many unskilled applicants (including clerks, who are very numerous, and, from an industrial point of view, may be regarded as unskilled). Such as these find their first opening in the firewood department, where some fifty to sixty men are at work, sawing, chopping, and tying. Some have fallen from good positions through drink; others have been all their lives numbered with the shiftless classes. Whatever they may have been an opportunity is here offered them of again getting their feet on the first rung of the social ladder.

There are, I find in conversation, one or two in the place as married men, going home at night; but the majority are here as single men, though doubtless many have wives somewhere. How the men enter these Elevators will be described further on, under the head of the Labour Bureau. A study of the case-book, and an interview with some of the men enabled me to understand the conditions from which they were rescued and something of the spiritual results.

TWO ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

One man formerly employed in a brickfield had, he said, fallen from professed Christianity into open sin and wretched want. He had been admitted to the Elevator, where he is now doing well, and he declares he has been "saved by grace, glory be to God." Another told me he had been long out of work, had come here in despair, had been helped to make his way, but best of all had "found salvation through Jesus. Ah, sir, it's a new man it's made of me." The men who spoke thus live, be it remembered, amongst those who hearing such testimony are quick to detect and denounce hypocrisy.

I find that in all the Salvation Army Elevators work is suspended daily at five minutes before twelve, when a short sharp Gospel meeting (in Salvation language "knee-drill") is held, before the men rush off to dinner.

The workshop system may be thus described. The men sent by the Labour Bureau, are at once admitted to Class 3, in which they must prove their worth and willingness to work. They receive at the outset tickets for food and shelter, and after a few weeks have, in addition, a small allowance, say a shilling, one-third of which is reserved for clothing. When after some little time a man becomes really useful, he is advanced to Class 2, receiving payment of from 1s. to 5s. per week, besides food and shelter.

Lastly, they rise—or the best of them rise—to Class 1, when they receive proper wages, and have separate beds at the Home. By this time, unless wanted as "sergeants" (virtually foremen), they are sent to regular employment (352 were found situations last year), or seek it for themselves. Besides, men who desire it and show themselves fit are drafted to the Farm Colony. Nearly three hundred were sent last year.

THE ST. LUKE'S ELEVATOR.

Another Elevator is in operation in Old-street, St. Luke's. This, known as Elevator No. III., is an old brewery in course of adaptation to better purposes. Pending the rebuilding, the galleries, floors, and sheds seem peopled with busy workers of many crafts. Here are blacksmiths at the forge, there wheelwrights and coach-builders; further on a clever sign-writer, whose deft designs may be read all over London on S.A. vans, though he is a "rescue." On the upper floors are carpenters, upholsterers, mattress-makers, wireworkers, tinsmiths, basket-makers, and brush-makers. Then come the kitchen and dining-room, and beyond the busy firewood sheds, with whizzing circular saws and every necessary appliance. Five to six hundred men will eventually be employed here.

Amid all these busy scenes I heard many interesting stories of rescue, evidencing real results amongst failures not a few.

THE BATTERSEA SALVAGE WHARF.

For Elevator No. II. I had to hie me to the "wilds of Battersea," where a wharf and some old buildings have been secured to serve the double purpose of workshops and the Salvage Brigade operations. At present old walls are being pulled down, foundations dug out, concrete laid, roads made, and new shops and stores erected wholly by the "submerged" men—the Army phrase for the men rescued by the social wing. Eventually there will be at Battersea, tailors, shoemakers, tinmen, carpenters, and other trades; meanwhile, through all the bustle of pulling down and building up, the salvage men are at work, and heaps of old rubbish and refuse are accumulating. Little has yet been done in the way of "sorting out," but as soon as possible many unskilled workers will set to this task.

THE LIGHTHOUSE.

So far the three Elevators, and now coming back to the City I must mention the Lighthouse in Quaker-street, E. This is the Factory Home. Here the men employed at Hanbury-street have their meals and sleep, while the employés in Old-street sleep here, but have their food at the Elevator. In the Lighthouse everything is clean and comfortable. There is accommodation for 350. The dormitories for Class 3 contain simple American cloth mattresses filled with seaweed (like those in the Shelters). Class 2 are better, while for Class 1 there are cubicles and separate beds. Baths, wash-ups, a fumigator, and every necessary appliance exist. As at the Ark, the men have separate lockers for personal effects. There is a good hall for meetings, and the officer in charge reports "right rousing times," and real work done for eternity.

The total number at present in the three Elevators is 322, and since the start 2080 men have been received in them, of whom only 258 can, by any stretch of ingenuity, be counted as failures, and this number includes seventy-five who had to leave for hospitals, &c., on account of illness. The remarkable fact is that out of two thousand men of this type, only ninety-eight have had to be "discharged for misconduct," the number I have named (258) being made up by another eighty-five who left dissatisfied with the tasks allotted.

THE LABOUR BUREAU.

Now how do these men come into the Elevators? Not through the Shelters directly, but from the Labour Bureau. In the Shelters men out of work make their cases known, and are sent to the Labour Bureau, but hundreds apply at this S.A. Labour Office who have never been in any Shelter. Here the merits of each case is gone into, situations are found for some, temporary employment for others as boardmen, cleaners, &c., while those deemed suitable are sent to the Elevators, carrying with them a form giving full details of their career and circumstances, and entitling them, at least, to a trial, if willing to work, in the shops or sheds. Mechanics are set to their own trade, "handy men," the unskilled, are sent into the firewood shed to begin with; but the sorest of all problems is what to do with the clerks. These are a vast army, the host of the unemployed increases; what can be made of them? If they enter the Elevators it must be to work, but what can they do? Hence many have to be sent away, but those seeming likely have a chance. I saw a few such in the workshops, but, alas! the majority were outside and unhelped.

Besides the branches I have described, there are others, as the well-known S.A. Match Factory and the S.A. Bakery; but these do not, strictly speaking, come within the range of the social work proper, though undoubtedly they afford employment to some of the workless. Like the S.A. establishment in the Clerkenwell-road, they are trading centres rather than distinctly social elevators. The three Elevators and the Home, with the Labour Bureau, described in this paper, form the circle of operation now going on in London, in connection with the Salvation Army Social Wing, for finding work for the workless and teaching those who never worked before how to win their bread by honest industry.

MR. STANLEY SMITH'S RETURN.

Christians all over the country will join heartily in welcoming Mr. Stanley P. Smith back to England. It seems but the other day that we stood watching him and his noble band of comrades depart, and yet nearly seven years have passed since then. He gave the address at the Strangers' Rest, Ratcliff-highway, last Friday evening, when representatives of many London missionary enterprises were present, Mr. J. E. Mathieson being in the chair.

Mr. Stanley Smith said that he was at first placed right in the middle of China, with no senior missionaries or experienced persons to guide him and made many mistakes, and met a great deal of discouragement. After dwelling on these, the speaker related how Mr. Shee, a Chinaman of good birth, had been converted and been greatly used in the establishment of opium refuges and in spreading the good news amongst his fellow-countrymen. The province where Mr. Smith worked was about the worst in China for opium smoking. There was more opium grown there than in all India. Indian opium indeed was principally eaten by the grandees at the coast but very little was seen inland. Nearly all the work at his station was done in connection with the opium refugees. Three hundred men and fifty women had passed through his refuge, but that did not mean either that all had become Christians, nor that they had all given up opium The Chinese were not longing either for the gospel, or for missionaries, but Christians had their Master's command and their marching orders. The country was open even more freely than in some parts of England. The last two months he was in China were very interesting. He visited a chain of stations all down the river, one with 150 members, another with sixty, ninety, seventy, and so on. Although the work was going on slowly it was God's work and that was their joy and satisfaction. It was theirs to sow, and in God's good time the harvest would come.

A NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION.

On Thursday last the old house in Aldersgate-street was teeming with young men in response to a kindly invitation from the President of the Young Men's Christian Association and Mrs. George Williams. To provide tea for six or seven hundred young men is no mean task. When this was happily accomplished, the guests adjourned to a meeting in the lecture-hall, which was crowded with young men only—a sight most pleasant to behold.

Mr. George Williams rose to congratulate his visitors and to wish them a truly happy New Year. He took for his text-word, "Heart's-ease." In a very brief, but very earnest address, he exhorted the young men to start out in the New Year with their hearts yielded to Christ.

Mr. Henry Varley, in place of Mr. Lane, absent through illness, commenced his address by telling how he himself was brought to decision for Christ in this same Association (in its Gresham-street building) in 1851, as the result of a tract and invitation given to him in Trafalgar-square, when an orphan lad of fourteen years of age. This led him to attend a meeting addressed by Baptist Noel, when he decided to serve the Lord. He spoke of sin, its awful dangers, and in its relation to permanence of character, of atonement, and of faith in Christ, and confession of his name through the power of the Holy Spirit.

At the close of the meeting, more than twenty young men rose in their places to signify that it was their service henceforth to follow Christ.

The Week of Prayer.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 5th.

PORTMAN ROOMS.

On this day the subject was The Church of Christ.—Praise for the presence of the Saviour with his Church everywhere; for the gift of the Holy Spirit to comfort, sustain, direct, quicken and inspire. Prayer for forgiveness of all failures, and sins in the churches: that the union of believers in Christ may be more fully apprehended. That all churches may be faithful to their Lord and his truth; that Christians may bear with each other's infirmities, and strive after the things which make for peace. That all ministers and teachers may be full of the Holy Ghost; that they may preach the Word with power; and that Ritualism, Formalism, and Rationalism may yield to the light of the Gospel. That Christian conferences may be governed by the Spirit of wisdom, love, and power. That the persecution of Christians in Russia and other lands may cease.

Mr. DONALD MATHESON, who presided, read Zeph. iii. 14, and remarked that had we been praying for the Church of Christ a hundred years ago we might have confined our thoughts to this island; but now our prayers must extend to every land under the sun, for there are members of the Church of Christ in China, Japan, Corea, India, Africa, and indeed everywhere, and all must be embraced in real prayer for the Church of Christ on earth.

After prayer by Revs. Gossett Tanner, D.D., and Donald Fraser, D.D., the address of the morning was given by Rev. PHILIP COLBORNE, who said: Our most important function now is prayer, and anything by way of address ought merely to come as a stimulant to the more vigorous exercise of this function of prayer for the Church. We long for more and more unity and catholicity, and we also pray that our Saviour's longing may be fulfilled, and that He may have the heathen for his inheritance. We rejoice that in these days He is giving fresh energy to his messengers in gathering out the people as never before. Within the past thirty years the advance in missionary effort has been very great. Then there were some thirty missionary societies in Europe, now there are at least eighty-four; and while this extension is going on, I think we at home are coming more and more to grasp his mind as to true fellowship and the unity of the Church. The idea of the Church is very simple.

ALL WHO ARE IN CHRIST

are in the Church, and all who are in the Church are in Christ. Christ is head over all things to his Church, and the Church is the body of believers united in Him, its great Head. That body is vitalised by Christ, and taught by the Holy Spirit his word, and led in his way. We must guard ourselves against a false idea of the comprehension of denominations being true unity. We must realise that, quite independently of denominational differences, all who are united to Christ by living faith are members of his Church, nor does this Church vitally depend on outward forms; a vital faith produces vital unity. We must be in Christ by faith, and this inwardness constitutes our fellowship. Membership of the Church of Christ begins by coming into Christ, and receiving from Him quickening, and living in Him.

Then in this connection remember Christ has said, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." You remember the first name borne by Christians was "the Way," as we find in Acts xix. 23. There is something beautiful about this. They were in the way, by coming to Him who is the Way. There communion commences. But being in the way we must make progress in it.

Nearer, my God, to Thee, Nearer to Thee.

Next He is the Truth; and He is full of truth, and perfect truth is in Him alone. It is impossible to attempt any unity which does not involve the learning of what Jesus Christ came to teach. We must enter into the fundamental doctrines, and grow into them firmly. Thus, as we receive truth from Him, we grow into Christ.

Moreover, He is our life; knowing the truth we want to live the life. The two are so interwoven, they cannot be separated. He who does the will knows the doctrine. Wherever Christ is thus known as the Way, the Truth, and the Life, there is true church unity; and apart from it there is none.

Thus we learn Christ's idea of unity. On the one hand, many seek to comprehend all the denominations in one; and on the other hand, there are those who would destroy them. I do not believe either are right. There is a distinction between the Church of Christ and the denominations—somewhat like the distinction between a man and his house. The house is not the man, although a certain dignity attaches to it by reason of the man who inhabits it. The denominations, as such, are not the Church, but the Church is in all the denominations. Everyone who is in Christ is a member of his Church, and for all such we pray at this time.

CENTENARY HALL.

The subject for Tuesday was "Thanksgiving for the presence of Christ in the Church, and for the gift of the Holy Ghost." Rev. G. W. OLIVER read part of Eph. iv. In his address, he said that Christians generally desire an increased realisation of the presence of their Lord, and strongly feel their constant present need of that presence. Our friends departed from this life are blessed with a sight of the Lord; but we, who walk by faith, have his presence in equal measure, the Saviour being still Immanuel, God with us. Oh, that all who are waiting for his manifested presence might distinctly recognise Him as a very present Friend, interested in everything that concerns his people's present and future state! There is comfort in the thought of Christ being for us; still more joy in the realisation of Christ with us; but Christ in the believer is the highest blessing of all; and the true Church of Christ consists simply in the unity of all who are indwelt by their Lord.

The next hour was occupied by further praise and prayer, in which several of those present briefly led, and some helpful words were spoken by Rev. H. G. THWAITES in connection with 1 John i. Both in his Gospel and his epistle, John seems to delight in the existence of Jesus "in the beginning." Between that blessed One as the Head of the Church and his members there subsists

A UNION COMPLETE AND INDISSOLUBLE.

Only those who, like John, have a personal knowledge of the Lord are fit to bear testimony concerning Him. Would that Christians might practically know more of his power to "save unto the uttermost all who came unto God by Him," an ability and willingness to save from evil dispositions, sin, and inconsistency in every shape. If there were more real fellowship with the triune God, there would be less despondency and unbelief on the part of his people, and, consequently, the lives of Christ's professed disciples would better commend Him to those who are out of the way. What a terrible thing is unbelief which, as John points out in his plain-spoken way, would make God a liar! Disciples deserve to lose the joy of the Lord, which is their strength, if they yield to worldliness and coldness of heart; and for such there can be no light and happiness until they prove again the efficacy of that blood which cleanses from all sin. Closeness of walk with God will make the year better and brighter than all the years which have gone before it.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6.

PORTMAN ROOMS.

On Wednesday Mr. GEORGE WILLIAMS presided, and, after the reading of Scripture, announced the subject for the day: Families and the Young.—Praise for the gracious promises made to the godly and their children; for the young people who are yielding themselves to the Lord, resisting the evils of the day, and serving Christ in his Church. Prayer that parents may be holy, devoted, wise, and true: training their children in Bible knowledge. That the love of Christ may be the light of every home, and the will of Christ its law; that the sons and daughters of Christian parents may be mercifully preserved from abounding iniquity. For Sunday and day schools; for associations of young men and young women; for all colleges, universities, and training institutions; and that the religious teachers of the rising generation may be valiant and faithful.

The Chairman then added a few words as to the importance of winning the young, rejoicing that now it was generally admitted that children might be converted and were worth striving for. He was thankful to know that the Sunday-school children at home were now supporting a missionary in India, on purpose to labour for the young. He rejoiced also in the progress of the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A., and in the fact that these associations were proving helpful to foreign missions by sending out labourers into the field.

Rev. ROBERT TAYLOR, of Norwood, having referred to the special subject for prayer, "Parents and Families," proceeded: It has occurred to me that possibly some, even of those who are Christians, miss somewhat of the sacredness and solemnity of the family relation. We are so familiar with it, we are apt to overlook that it is constituted by God Himself, and that its foundations lie deep in the nature He, as Creator, has given us. Furthermore, He has given in his word many wholesome rules for the guidance of those who hold this family relationship, while He has also given many great and precious promises of grace and blessing to the families that call upon Him. Connected with these promises we have the fact that He is the Father of all, and in Him every family in heaven and on earth is named. And all this is summed up and centered in the great act and words of Jesus when He took little children in his arms and blessed them, and said, "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

This sacredness and solemnity of the family relation is suggested to us by the fact that it is the best, the most expressive and profound symbol of the relation we hold, as believers, to God. He is our Father, and our knowledge of this family relation helps us to shape our conception of Him who is our Father. We recall the family life of early days, with its dependence, affection, and joy; we remember how father and mother were all to us; and these memories set Him forth as all to us. We know the fatherly and motherly relation of later years, with their fondness, tender love, and pity; and what a meaning these lend to

THE THOUGHT OF GOD AS OUR FATHER.

And going a step further we have in the family relation not only a symbol of the fatherhood of God, but also, I venture to suggest, a shadow of the deepest of all mysteries, the grandest of revealed truths as to God Himself, that of the blessed and Holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. But now a word or two of exhortation. If the relation of father, mother and child be a symbol and shadow of these verities, "what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" We pray that parents may instruct their children in Bible knowledge. One of my earliest recollections is of a godly old minister who, after expounding to the children the fifth commandment, turned to the parents and said, "Honour thy father and mother. Then you fathers and mothers must be honourable. If you would be honoured you must be worthy of honour." I would the reminder were laid to heart.

And in imparting Bible knowledge let me say it ought to be given in two ways—in stated and systematic instruction, and by casual, occasional teaching, as opportunity serves. Is it not strange how the highest of all knowledge is neglected? We are studiously careful as to mental knowledge, the laws of manner and habit, the training of hand and eye, heart and affections, and even conscience; yet often we are slack in giving the knowledge which has to do with God.

Instruction, like food, must be seasonable, solid, and nutritious; but it must also, like air, be pure. Foul air is no less dangerous than poisonous food. So let your home be pure and sweet; a spiritual ozone, in which the germs of unbelief and scepticism cannot live. Then the air may be pure and yet too low in temperature for health. And, similarily, there may be an East wind in the home which may wither up spiritual life. Let our home life be warm and throbbing with the love of God.

I find in a little volume giving a brief account of one who was early called home, a letter in which the young Christian girl says to her father, "I thank you for all your instruction; I thank you more for your example; but I thank you most of all for your love." God grant our homes may be such that our children will make this sweet acknowledgment.

CENTENARY HALL.

On Wednesday, Rev. C. H. KELLY opened the meeting with supplication on behalf of the sons and daughters of praying folk all the world over, praising God that He had enriched his Church very greatly in the early consecration to Himself of many now in Christian fellowship and ministry.

Mr. KELLY then read Matt. xviii. 1-14, and, after brief prayers from one and another, spoke some exceedingly weighty words showing that the question, "What manner of child shall this be?" is bound up with the true interests of nations, is of first importance to the church of God, vitally affects family life, and is of deepest moment with reference to the salvation of the young themselves. Only those who have faith in God and his Word, can look upon the world even with composure, much less hope; but, thank God, his truth is spreading as never before. There is very little hope to-day, as far as a large proportion of the adult population is concerned; but the work of the church among the young is a most encouraging field, for, if we can obtain but one holy generation, what a mighty change there will be in the whole of our land, and in our good influence upon the world!

Real family happiness, continued the speaker, does not depend upon wealth and its attendant circumstances, but upon character. It is that the devil has a mortgage upon young lives until about sixteen years of age. To act upon such a thought is like putting a newly-born child outside the front door. Surely they who can ask for bread may well be taught to ask for grace. Shall God hear the pleading of a vile reprobate and spurn a child's cry? God's solicitude for the well-being of the young is seen in some six hundred references between Genesis and Revelation, to childhood and youth, and how much comfort there is in the unmistakable teaching of the blessed Saviour on this subject. The speaker was old enough to remember cavalry in our streets at a time of social danger, but in the subsequent troubles of the cotton famine, no troops were drawn up, because the diffusion of Christian teaching had made the people patient, and had taught them to exercise faith in God. The present appalling ignorance among the young in regard to the letter of God's Word, is a loud call to Christian parents concerning Bible teaching for their children; for we should seek not only to make intelligent persons pious, but also to make pious ones intelligent. In the coming struggle as to belief and life, those who are now children will need all the spiritual armour that we, under God, can give them for the conflict. Mr. N. R. Hughman led in prayer for awakening of parents to their responsibilities, for a spirit of inquiry in Godless families, and for an increase of grace to isolated Christian households.

In undertaking the guidance of the meeting for

THE SECOND HOUR,

Rev. F. B. Meyer read Eph. iii. 14-21 (R.V.), remarking on verse 20, that what God is able to do, He is willing to do, and suggesting that some of those present might confess the sins of fathers and mothers in the upbringing of their children. After some brief and direct prayers,

Mr. Meyer based his address upon verse 15 of the chapter read. In this passage the Revised Version makes it plain that "every family in heaven and on earth is named from God," name being character. That is, every family is so constituted that from it men may learn to apprehend something of the nature of the eternal God and the attitude towards Him into which his love should lead us through regeneration. From experience of a mother's love, we pass into the successive stages of companionship, marriage, parentage; and each stage should give increasing insight into the character of Him who is love, that the transient may be conformed to the external, and that the human may be fashioned after the Divine.

In God's plan, strict obedience is always combined with blessing, a point to be remembered in the government of Christian homes. Those who are blessed with happy homes are not as careful as they might be concerning solitary ones, whose removal from village to city, and consequent sudden divorce from the softening and sweetening influences of home life, threatens to waste many young lives. An instance of rare unselfishness came under the speaker's notice, in a poor woman who spends the first part of every Sunday in cleaning and tidying the single room which she occupies, so that a number of young girls may come together for tea and subsequent attendance on the ministry of God's Word.

POWER TO MAKE HOME HEAVENLY

is found only in Christ, in whom God has concentrated all fulness, and who is ready to dwell in us by the power of the Holy Ghost, that love may reign in our homes. Home life is not to be improved in the power of human resolution, but only in the yielding of one's whole being to Christ, so that our distinctive relationships may be lived out in Christlike deeds and words. The only hope for the home is Christ, and the only hope for England is in homes where He dwells. A full life is only possible to the unselfish; and through the trials connected with home life we may conceive something of the loving patience and forbearance which God is constantly exercising toward his wayward children.

In a few closing words of prayer, Mr. Meyer asked that many a child who has resisted words about God, may be won to Him by consistent and unselfish parental lives.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 7.

PORTMAN ROOMS.

Mr. J. E. Mathieson, who presided on Thursday, read the following as the subject of prayer for the day:—Nations and the World.—Praise for the widely-opened doors for the entrance of the Gospel in many lands; for the active co-operation of Bible and Tract Societies; for the diffusion of the word of God in some three hundred languages; for the increasing dislike of war, and the growing desire for international goodwill. Prayer that the nations may be more and more influenced by truth and righteousness; that the Lord's Day may be more widely observed; that sovereigns, rulers and legislators may feel their responsibility to God and to their people; that our soldiers and sailors may become witnesses for Christ; that the designs of the Papacy may be frustrated; that unholy legislation may be swept away; that wars may cease; that slavery and the opium traffic may be put down, and that the kingdom of Christ may speedily come.

The Chairman then read portions from Rom. i. and xvi., calling special attention to the phrase "obedience to the faith among all nations," which occurs in these two chapters and nowhere else in the Bible. This expression suggests, he felt, the question how far has the Church been diligent in spreading the knowledge of the faith so that all nations might be obedient to it. Notwithstanding recent advances in missionary effort, it must be sorrowfully confessed that the Church as a whole has been negligent in this matter, and one great hindrance has been worldly conformity. Endeavours have been made to win the world by adopting its habits and maxims. Such is not God's way. He designs to have a separated people. This He had in old time in the Jews, and this He will have in his Church. In proportion as we fail in this matter of separateness, we are sure to fail in our mission to men.

After a season of prayer, in which Rev. W. Fuller Gooch, Mr. D. Matheson, and Rev. D. Fraser, D.D., took part, Rev. F. W. Macdonald read 1 Tim. ii. 1-8, and said: Perhaps it is safe for us to say that the privilege of intercession assigned to the Church by our Lord is immeasurably greater, more august and powerful than usually reckoned. Intercession has not merely a minor place among our Christian privileges, it is

THE MASTER-LAW OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

That kingdom is founded on mediation—one for all—the mediation of the Lord Jesus Christ in the supreme act of his death, the just for the unjust. And now, in another sense, the same law of mediation rules the administration of the kingdom. Coming into union with Christ, as we do by faith, we share his intercession and become mediators. "There is one mediator between God and man—the man Christ Jesus," but we are mediators in the sense of intercession. We might quote many passages on the duty and privilege of intercession for others, but these will be in your minds, and, summing them up, I maintain the whole spirit and genius of Christ's kingdom is mediatorial, in the sense of intercession, so far as we are concerned.

Now, in the passage I have read this privilege of intercession is urged and illustrated, but it is applied specially, and the application is to the very subject we have before us to-day; "For all men, for kings, and for all that are in authority." Whatever we in these democratic days may think, this law of authority and rule is woven into our being. And for those who exercise rule and authority we are called on specially to pray.

Enforcing this point, the speaker dwelt on the influence and power for good or evil exercised by rulers and leading men of all kinds. Seeing that those in high places could immensely affect, for weal or woe, the masses of men, we were called upon most emphatically indeed to pray that the God-given powers might be used for the glory of God and the well-being of mankind.

CENTENARY HALL.

Rev. E. A. Stuart was prevented by an accident from keeping his appointment for Thursday's first meeting, his place being taken by Rev. A. P. Cox, of Paddington. The subject for the day embraced many branches, including praise to God for entrance of the Gospel into many lands, for the diffusion of God's Word through numerous translations, and for a growing desire towards international goodwill; also prayer for righteous government in the earth, for a more general observance of the Lord's Day, for the frustration of Papal designs, and for the annihilation of unholy legislation, slavery, and the opium iniquity. After prayer,

Rev. A. P. Cox read Psa. cvii. 1—16. His address recognised the widening circle of topics for prayer day after day. The fact that Christians were praying for a world which God loves (John iii. 16) should make them hopeful. Holding a unique position among the great nations of the earth, it must be ours to show them that we are not selfish, ostentatious and arrogant. Moreover, in ruling humbler nations, we must exercise care of their true interests; and as a mother nation, we should be an example to our colonies and dependencies of that righteousness which exalteth a nation. A Divine patriotism should influence all who seek to serve Christ. In Paul's readiness to preach the Gospel at Rome, he recognised nationality; but he clearly distinguishes between Jewish, Roman, and Christian views of Christ. The intellectual world cannot grasp the simplicity of that Gospel which, nevertheless, is the power of God. Power is a word which seems to characterise the religion of the Apostle, and which must mark our faith, too, if the latter is to be of any use.

POWER BELONGS TO THE HOLY GHOST.

God Himself, not a mere influence, and He works in all who receive Him. Thoughts of God's power and love fill us with hope, despite the apparent overbearing strength of the multiform opposition with which Christ's servants have to contend.

One of the closing prayers definitely named the Czar of Russia, and the oppression which reigns in that land; while another petition asked that the spirit of prayer among God's people may mark the whole year.

A very strong anti-opium feeling ran through the second meeting. Mr. Leite Rozas presided, and referred to the two veils of 2 Cor. iii. 13, 14 and iv. 3, 4, which only Divine power can remove. After a prayer, contrasting the iniquitous distinction which is made between Burmah and China in regard to opium,

Mr. Cheok Hong Cheong remarked that the highest form of Christian life is found in seeking the salvation of the lost. The vast host still sitting in darkness, praying for help which never comes, should stir Christian hearts to pity and activity. Then this valiant champion of the right once more lifted up his voice on behalf of humane and godly government, recapitulating, in measured and clear accents, the terrible indictment recorded against England in the oft-told and well-known tale of our Chinese opium wars, and the evil which our Government has fomented for the sake of gain.

THE PITEOUS TALE OF CHINA'S WRONGS

was supplemented by an apt quotation of God's declaration that righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people. While missionaries seek to advance the kingdom of God, the Government, for which every elector is responsible, is largely advancing the rule of the devil. Many Chinamen reject with scorn a Gospel which they associate with men who are responsible for the poisoning and murdering of their countrymen, for gain. The only resources of those who lament the evil, are strenuous effort to awaken Christian conscience in England, in order to persistent pressure upon Government, and the engagement by unwearied prayer of the arm of Omnipotence, the only power able to overcome an enemy mightier far than those who battle for God.

The meeting closed with an earnest cry to God that He would use his Chinese servant, throughout his English travels, in arousing the Church of God to so lay hold upon Divine power that English rulers may be compelled to make an end of China's bane and England's disgrace.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 8th.

PORTMAN ROOMS.

Sir C. U. Aitchison, K.C.S.I., presided and read the subject for the day:—Missions to Mohammedans and Heathen.—Praise for the devotedness of men and women in the Foreign Mission-field, and for the triumphs of the cross achieved through their instrumentality; for the increasing number of young Christians who are giving themselves to the work among the heathen. Prayer for a more abundant outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and for a still larger supply of labourers in the great harvest field; that Missionaries may be preserved from the danger of travel, fever, and the hostility of the natives; that fresh doors may be opened for the Gospel; and that Mohammedanism, and all false religions, may give place to the saving knowledge of Christ.

Psalm lxvii. and Eph. vi. 10 20 having been read by the Chairman, Revs. John Fordyce and Claude Steel, and Mr. Oscar Owers engaged in prayer.

Rev. BARING-GOULD (in the absence of Rev. E. A. Stuart, through the accident elsewhere referred to) gave an address based on Acts. xxviii. 28, "The salvation of God is sent unto the Gentiles, and they will hear it." These, he said, are PREGNANT, PROPHETIC, AND HEART-STIRRING WORDS.

Salvation is of God. It emanates from God the Father, has been effected by the work of God the Son, and is applied by God the Holy Ghost. It is a salvation worthy of the Triune God. Further, these words—implying the sending of salvation to the Gentiles—are in perfect harmony with the Master's command, "Go ye and preach the Gospel to every creature."

Moreover, not only is it to be sent to the Gentiles, but it is distinctly stated that they will hear it. The Jews have forgotten it for a time, though there is an elect remnant, and though we look for a glorious future of repentance and restoration, but still the Gentiles will hear it. Here is the promise—the Mohammedans, the followers of Confucius and of Buddha, the Hindoos, and the poor Africans for whom we pray this day—they will hear it.

But the question arises, what has the Church of God been doing to carry it to them? Just a hundred years ago, a bishop of the Church of England declared the command "Go ye" had no reference to the Church of the present day; the Church of Scotland declared the idea of missions to the heathen to be highly preposterous; while a senator in America declared they had no religion to spare to send to the heathen; and so late as 1819 a Sepoy in India was court-martialled and cashiered for no crime, save that he had become a Christian. When William Carey entered on his great enterprise there were no missionaries, no trained agents, no converts among the heathen, and the Bible had not been translated at all into many languages.

Now at the close of a century, we see 77,000,000 of nominal Protestants grown into 177,000,000, and we see the

with the possible exception of Tibet, where two Moravian sisters are nobly holding their ground. But while looking on these things, we rejoice that the Church of God has, to some extent, aroused to her duty, we have still to confess that but little is done, and that some 850,000,000 of the human family know nothing of Jesus Christ. The army of English and American missionaries numbers but seven thousand, just about one to every 350,000, while, as Dr. Pierson has computed, for every quarter of a million of income professing Christians contribute only one shilling annually to the missionary movement. God has laid on England peculiar responsibility in this matter by reason of her vast empire, but how little, after all, is she doing.

What, then, is wanted that we may rise to the level of our opportunities? Just the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, that we may realise our obligation. We recognise the sin of unbelief, but fail to recognise the sin of inaction. I verily believe that if one-third of the ministers in this land, and the very cream of the Sunday-school teachers and Christian workers were to go forth to the heathen, it would be like life from the dead to the churches at home. We need the power of the Holy Ghost to teach us that forgotten prayer: "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He may thrust forth labourers into his harvest."

CENTENARY HALL.

In the brief opening prayer there was affectionate mention of labourers in distant lands and their converts; and hope was expressed that there would be practical gratitude on the part of God's Church in more use of grace already bestowed.

Rev. E. E. JENKINS, LL.D., read Rom. x. 4-21. Introducing himself as a very old missionary labourer, whose day is far spent, he spoke in grateful and sanguine terms concerning his vivid recollection of events in heathen lands, when forty-five years ago, he left England for the East, as contrasted with the rapid Godward progress which has been made since that time. As a believer in the Scriptures, he was prepared to maintain what would be thoughtlessly ridiculed by some—namely, that there is great progress Christward among the heathen, particularly in India, where and for the former to do that is for them to ultimately disappear. He asked, which faith will survive if the faith of Christ does not? India's youth is forsaking the ancient temples. The Brahminical priesthood, though it may long be sustained by endowments, is no longer regarded as the fountain of authority and learning, or the guide and administrator of social life. The forces of India are in Christ's hands, and tending to the fulfilment of his gracious purposes. Consider, for instance, the tremendous revolution in public opinion concerning the education of women. In British India particularly, and also in some of the protectorates, there is scarcely a town without a school for girls, maintained by the people themselves. A review of the whole missionary world showed nothing of hopeless, as distinct from temporary failure. After reference to personal experience among Mohammedans, the speaker stated that in the N.W. the Church Missionary Society now has eight Mohammedan missionaries labouring in their own country, and that Mohammedanism is beginning to break up from internal causes. Its propaganda is active, to some extent; but in Java and Sumatra are found Christian missionaries, with more schools and more converts, the latter drawn from Mohammedans themselves.

As to China, attacks upon mission stations may justly be regarded as but a blind to cover a movement for changing the Manchurian dynasty; and past persecutions have really strengthened, if they have thinned, native churches.

Some of the closing prayers asked for revived hope at home concerning foreign missions, and for wisdom, patience, and hope in every labourer for Christ in distant parts of the earth.

Rev. JOHN WALTON, M.A., opened the second meeting, and, in prayer, powerfully impressed upon the minds of his hearers solemn thoughts concerning a whole city to its varied needs spread out before the eyes of God. Then came praise for the Divine hand laid upon so many young men, and prayer for communication as well as reception of blessing on the part of believers. Another earnest petition asked that workers abroad may know, by the power which should come upon them, that their brethren at home have spent a season of special supplication. After Mr. WALTON had read Psalm ii., which, he said, covered the whole missionary ground,

Mr. J. A. WRAY, an agent of the Church Missionary Society in the Taita country, quoted John iv. 34, 35 as the words of the referring also to his blessed example of saving souls, as seen in the incident of the Samaritan woman. The days when it cost a white man his life to set foot in Japan, China and India had long passed away. Christians are not taught to pray for open doors, but for power of utterance, and for more labourers. Should we be slow to follow him who has gone before us in blessed service to mankind? The latest open door is East and Central Africa, where the speaker had lived for eight years, and which is truly a dark continent spiritually, as sufficiently evidenced by the speaker's graphically recited details of abounding cruelty and superstition, the life of the missionary being jeopardised by the latter. And, oh! the heart-pain which comes upon the Gospel-bearer as he listens to the words of some poor sick heathen, "Why did you not bring me the good news before?" Our Lord finished the work which was given Him to do, leaving us an example that we should follow in his steps.

In the evening a meeting for choral praise was held, in which some two hundred voices, drawn from various evangelistic choirs, took part.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 9.

THE PORTMAN ROOMS.

Sir WILLIAM WILLIS presided on the last day of the week, and having read Isa. xlix., announced the subject for the day: Missions to the Jews and Home Evangelisation. Praise for the large success of mission work, and the increase of mission churches and rooms; for the deepening resolve among the various Churches to seek and to save the lost; for the zeal and devotion of City missionaries and evangelists; for enlarged interest shown in missions to the Jews, and for special blessing attending them. Prayer for all Christian workers; that hospitals, refuges, reformatories, and all rescue agencies may be conducted with wisdom, skill, and power; that God would mercifully interpose to deliver the Jews in Russia from persecution, and that they may be led to accept the Messiah.

Prayer having been presented by Mr. J. L. Stanley, Rev. Newman Hall, and Mr. D. Matheson, Rev. F. B. MEYER gave an exposition of the three parables in Luke xv., which seemed from one point of view to have some bearing on the topics for prayer. The parable of the lost sheep may be taken as illustrative of our Lord's endeavour to bring back the lost sheep of the house of Israel to the fold. The parable of the lost coin suggests the Church (figured as a woman) seeking to recover those who have rolled away. The parable of the lost son may set forth the reclaiming of backsliders, but in a secondary sense it may indicate the wandering away of Gentiles who have had the opportunity of salvation. Looking at the first parable in this way, we have our Lord's longing over the lost sheep of Israel, whom He goes out to seek till He find. Through all the persecutions and trials and sorrows of the ages, our Saviour has been seeking Israel, and when He finds, as He will fully at last, He will call us, his friends, to rejoice with Him over the lost ones found.

Having recalled briefly God's marvellous dealings in the call and care of Israel in early times, the speaker went on to speak of present movements, such as that led by Rabinowitz, the Hebrew New Testament distribution, and other indications of a near approach of the glorious end.

The second parable has a close application to Home Mission work. Notice how diligently the woman seeks, lighting the lamp, sweeping the room, searching; and does it not seem that in these latter days the Church is acting in something of this spirit in searching after the lost ones in slum and alley? If these be the age of Foreign Missions, it is also the age of Home Missions.

But lastly, we have the Father's love, the Father waiting to receive the backslider. Mark: there is no encouragement given here to the false notion of universal fatherhood and the final recovery of all men. The lost one here has been a son—has been in the Father's house. He is a wanderer. One sometimes wonders if we Gentiles are not in this sense younger sons. Consider our Sabbath desecration, our sins of impurity, drunkenness, and gambling. Let us pray that God, the Holy Ghost, would touch our hearts and turn us back to God, who waits to be gracious.

CENTENARY HALL.

Much was crowded into the single brief hour set apart on Saturday, three or four well-known servants of Christ taking part. Rev. Dr. PIERSON, however, was not well enough to come to the meeting. Rev. W. HASLAM led in praise that so many workers are engaged in telling God's good news, and in prayer for enlarged expectations during this year, on the part of Christians. Mr. J. E. MATHIESON read Isa. lxii. and connected with it Peter's exhortation on the day of Pentecost, "Repent and be converted every one of you," followed by Paul's prophecy that "all Israel should be saved." Eastern nations, embracing the greater part of the population of the earth—the Jews, when converted, will present God's truth to other peoples, with an effect which is not possible to us—Gentiles.

Rev. JOHN WILKINSON, of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews, desired to be brief, in view of the danger that overmuch speaking might curtail prayer. After forty years' experience and work among Jews he rejoiced that their minds were open to the reception of Christian truth as never before. Russia's aim in her persecutions was to Russianise the Jew and absorb him in the Greek Church; but in God's unalterable purpose his people are for ever separate from the nations, and Pharaoh and others tried in vain to annihilate Israel. Fugitives, who are cared for by agents of the Mission at Liverpool and Tilbury, gratefully appreciate this Christian kindness. The last five years have seen the greatest which has taken place for centuries; and this is clearly traceable to the distribution among them of the New Testament and portions thereof, by hundreds and thousands of copies. God's hand was plainly seen in the unusual Christian liberality with which funds were speedily subscribed for the work of the Mildmay Mission in this direction; while the police authorities of Russia, the local governors, the censors, and even the Bishops of the Greek Church seem to have been divinely disposed to favour the work of distribution. This widespread use of God's living Word is already bearing fruit. One instance was the formation among a number of young Jews, of a club for Bible examination. Their meetings were spitefully and secretly denounced as Nihilistic. The police disproved this for themselves, but would not allow the meetings to continue, so that the young men were compelled, through the hold which God's Word had obtained upon them, to publicly declare themselves believers in Christ. In another case a Jewish boy, who had learned to love Christ through reading the simple Scripture record, was persecuted almost unto death by his father; but the lad's testimony for his Saviour resulted in the conversion of father, mother, and six other children. Through persecutions the family had to remove to another town where, finding that Lutherans and other Christians had died out, they held in their own house; and now, of fifty Jewish families in that place, most are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ If we can but bring Christian influence to bear effectively on the Jew, we have in all lands a people speaking all languages who can work mightily for Christ and hasten the time when God's Church shall be completed in readiness for his return to reign before his ancients gloriously.

After praise and prayer, Rev. W. Haslam, on the suggestion of the Chairman, devoted five minutes to exhortation, based upon Psa. lxvii. The knowledge of the Lord, said he, cannot cover the earth until the Lord comes and his ancient people are gathered unto Him. If we really desire that consummation, we should yield ourselves in full consecration to our Lord, for his service.

Mr. Wilkinson asked prayer for six hundred Jewish men, women, and children, who, during the two preceding nights, had listened to the Gospel as attentively as any Gentile congregation. Further prayer was preceded by a reminder concerning the late Bishop Crowther's words at one of last year's Week of Prayer meetings, "Remember the prayer of faith."

Mr. Mathieson closed with a few words of petition that holy expectation in connection with the prayers of the week might begin to be realised in a great ingathering of souls on the morrow, Sunday.

Throughout the week, evening prayer-meetings for young men were held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Whittington-avenue.

"A LITTLE WHILE & YE SHALL SEE ME."

John xvi. 16.

A little while, dear Master,
And thou wilt come again.
Well may that sweet assurance
My waiting soul sustain;
For, on thy word of promise,
So full of tender grace,
Thy truth, in golden letters,
My eye of faith can trace.

What though my sky be clouded,
What though I am alone,
The light of thy dear presence
Upon my heart has shone;
Sure pledge that I shall ever
Behold thy loving smile,
When past are all life's shadows
With life's sad little while.

THE BIBLE.—No other book is such a mirror, both of man and of God. Here we see our own countenance and are humbled. Here we see the countenance of God and are comforted. Here we behold the human heart, with its unbelief, its selfish and casual thoughts, its tendency to hypocrisy, to seek rest in mere shadows. In reading Scripture we feel in the presence of Him, unto whose eyes all things are naked and open.—Adolph Saphir.

WHITEHAVEN SAILORS' REST.—The annual social gathering of seamen and fishermen was held on New Year's Day, and proved in every way a great success. After tea, the Gospel hall, accommodating about two hundred, was packed to its utmost extent, and a most interesting meeting was held. A number of woollen helmets, mittens, gloves and mufflers were distributed, and total abstinence pledges taken. The "Rest" is a branch of The Seamen's Christian Friend Society.

LIBERALITY IN GIVING.

The early Christians adopted for a time a sort of community system. "All that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need." Acts ii. 44, 45. This, however, was only a temporary expedient; for we find Paul giving directions to the Church at Corinth in regard to giving on the principle of voluntary and systematic beneficence. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." 1 Cor. xvi. 2. "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity." 2 Cor. ix. 7.

In his charge to his "son Timothy," also, the same Apostle defines the duty of the rich to be, not to put their wealth into a common stock, but to be "rich in good works, willing to communicate, ready to distribute" (1 Tim. vi. 18), implying that the control of their property remained in their own hands. But this is noteworthy in the practice of the Primitive Church, whether it adopted the community plan as a temporary expedient to meet an emergency, or acted on the broader principle of voluntary and proportionate giving. It was liberal in its gifts, both in the support of its own poor, and in the spread of the Gospel in "the regions beyond," to an extent that is seldom equalled at the present day, unless it be in some of the mission churches gathered from among the heathen. "For to their power"—such is the Apostle's testimony in the case of the churches of Macedonia—"yea, and beyond their power, they were willing of themselves;" "in a great trial of affliction, the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality" (2 Cor. viii. 2, 3). Is it that love has grown faint, and faith has become dim, that we see so little of the primitive spirit of giving in these latter days?

Certain it is that in proportion as the primitive spirit of piety is enjoyed, in that proportion will the Lord's people be munificent, and, as the world looks at such things, even prodigal, in their gifts to his cause. The question will be, not how little will it do to give, but how much can be given to advance human salvation and to "hasten the day of God" (2 Pet. iii. 12, marg.). A large increase of spirituality will result in a large increase in giving. "For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver; and for wood, brass, and for stones, iron" (Isa. lx. 17), is the language which the Prophet puts into the mouth of God's people, when they shall be "all righteous," and when their walls shall be called "Salvation," and their gates "Praise." The more common and less costly gifts will be superseded by those which demand greater sacrifice. In a degenerate age like that which succeeded the age of Solomon, brass will replace gold in the temple of the Lord. Our piety and consecration will be the measure of our gifts. When Christians are "filled with the Spirit," their hearts will be enlarged, and the treasury of the Lord's house will be full. There will no longer be a complaint because there are so "many calls." Instead of making excuses for not giving, Christians will seek opportunities thus to show their devotion and love to their Master. Instead of waiting to be solicited, and giving, if at all, with reluctance, they will offer willingly and of their own proper good, for their affection to the house of their God.

With the increasing demands of the mission work at home and abroad, as the age draws near the close, with the ripening fields awaiting the reaper's sickle, with the open doors on every hand, what the Church needs to-day is to hear and heed the Lord's call to a large-hearted liberality. Let the gold and silver be consecrated to Christ, let the people of God give according to their ability, accompanying their gifts with earnest, believing prayer, and the close of this century will witness a wonderful revolution on earth; it will be marked by such onward and triumphant movements of the Gospel, alike in civilised lands and in "realms of pagan darkness," as the world has never seen. Christ would quickly be preached "to every creature," and "the end" would come. Moreover, great voices would be heard in heaven, saying, "Now is come salvation and strength, and the Kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ (Rev. xii. 10.)

CITY MISSION INCIDENTS.

The following stories of City mission work in West London will be read with deep interest:—

STABBED.

A missionary says:—A poor man whom I had warned again and again of the inevitable consequences of a drunken, dissipated life, only two days after my last exhortation was, when in a state of intoxication, stabbed in a public-house, and his life was almost despaired of. He was, however, taken to St. Mary's Hospital, and there, by skilful treatment, recovered. During his stay in hospital I visited him; he remembered well my warnings, and often said, "Oh, that I had taken your advice." He became much interested in my visits, and appeared to be under deep spiritual conviction. When he came out of hospital he signed the pledge, and determined, God helping him, to lead a different life. He has since removed from the neighbourhood, but, thank God, he is still an abstainer and a reformed man.

A HOUSEBREAKER LIFTED.

Another missionary writes of a man who, for years past, had been a terror to the neighbourhood on account of his drunken propensities:—For weeks together he has not been sober, and has a great number of times undergone sentences of imprisonment. On one occasion he was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude for housebreaking. I have on many occasions taken him home when intoxicated, and called the next morning, earnestly showing him the end to which he was fast hastening. Once, while a colporteur was holding a Gospel service, I happened to be passing and heard him using most abusive language and threats. I immediately went and took his arm, and led him to his home and laid him down, to which he calmly submitted; in fact, anything I did to him, whether drunk or sober, he always took in a kindly manner. By thus showing an interest in him I gained his confidence, and after repeated entreaties I prevailed upon him to sign the pledge. He now became anxious to get employment, and to obtain this for him I explained the case to a lady, who sent a donation of £5 to the Discharged Prisoners' Aid Society. Just after which I went and saw the secretary, who found him employment which lasted for a month. From that time to the present he has remained a staunch abstainer, and has attended all the services, both week-day and Sunday, at a mission church. The first Sunday in the New Year, at the close of the evening service, he stayed to the prayer-meeting, when I had the privilege of addressing a few words of exhortation to those who remained, during which time he rose from his seat and went into the vestry, where he professed to accept Christ as his Saviour. Since then the great change in his life is clearly seen in his face; instead of the dissipated, sottish appearance which he formerly had, he now conveys to one's mind that of a contented, happy man.

A GAMBLER'S "PRAYER-BOOK."

A man named D——, whom I (says a missionary) have regularly visited, and often prayed for, has decided for the Lord Jesus. Formerly he was a gambler and a frequenter of public-houses. When talking with me one day he said, "I never go the public-house without my 'prayer-book,'" meaning a pack of cards. Although he received my visits somewhat cordially, he was very obstinate, and yet, at the same time, open-minded. I spoke very pointedly to him, and asked what advantage such a life as he was leading would be to him when he came to die. My continued visits and prayers told upon this man so much that, in the course of time, his terrible condition before God dawned upon him. He became wearisome, and sought pleasure elsewhere, but gained no comfort. At last he was induced to attend a Mission Gospel Meeting, at which he heard an address from the words "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" The remarks made at that service were applied to his heart so forcibly by the Holy Ghost that the conviction of sin which had so long troubled him now led to repentance and conversion. From that time he became a changed man, the evidence of which is seen by the earnest manner in which he makes use of every opportunity to speak for Christ. In looking back upon the past unhappiness, as compared with the joy of the present, he is often heard to remark: "If I had continued at my old game, I should have been a dead man, whereas now I have got eternal life."

For the Young.

YOUNG HELPERS' LEAGUE.

No doubt our young readers have heard that a league has been formed by Dr. Barnardo specially for them. Many, indeed, are already members, and are hard at work trying to enlist the aid of their companions and friends. The public inauguration of the scheme was held at Dr. Barnardo's Homes, Stepney-causeway, on Friday afternoon, when a large number of young people, with their friends, were present.

Lord Kinnaird occupied the chair, and in a few words recommended the motto of the League, "Bear Ye One Another's Burdens," to every child all over the world. He drew a touching picture of the great straits that poor suffering children must have passed through during the cold weather.

Dr. Barnardo said that the League had only been started four weeks, and already there were 3019 members. Applications had come not only from the United Kingdom, but from Germany, France, Switzerland, Turkey, Gibraltar, and even from Queensland and Australia. Not one of the children in his large audience knew what it was to be without friends and home, without warm clothing and shelter in these cold nights, but he and his helpers were finding poor little children, chiefly girls, walking the weary streets at night without any of these comforts. They had opened free lodging-houses for these poor little things, where there was a good mattress and a warm rug for their use. In the morning some of them got the chance of coming into the Homes, and all received a cup of coffee and a bun. Dr. Barnardo here gave a practical illustration of his remarks by drawing aside a curtain and exposing to view half-a-dozen bunks or beds, each tenanted by a boy or girl all ragged and dirty, who had been occupants of the shelter the night before. In the Homes, he continued, they turned the waste material of the streets by God's blessing into useful men and women, each with a trade or useful occupation at their backs, and who would thus be able to hew their way through all the difficulties of life. The number of children under his care that day was 4300. Last year they had 6866 applications for admission to the homes, and of that number they admitted 1717 fresh cases.

Mrs. Evered Poole, the chief warden of the League, said that their short title was "Y. H. L.," and she wished their Y-oung H-earts linked together in L-ove, and Y-oung H-ands linked together for L-abour. Love to Jesus was their starting-point, and hands and hearts must be laid at his feet. By means of a few touching stories she urged the children for Christ's sake to come to the help of the poor waifs who were being rescued bay by day at these Homes.

Rev. Prebendary G. Calthrop pointed out the great help the children would be able to render to the excellent Homes of Dr. Barnardo.

At the close a large number of children enrolled their names.

The president of the League is H.R.H. Princess Mary, Duchess of Teck, and the general secretary, to whom all applications for membership should be made, is Miss Rachel Norris, 18, Stepney-causeway, London, E.

SPECIAL NEW YEAR SERVICES AT LEYTONSTONE.

During the first week of the year very impressive and useful services were conducted at Leytonstone by Mr. H. Hutchinson, Secretary of the Children's Special Service Mission. They were held each afternoon in the Congregational Lecture Hall; but all the Nonconformist congregations in the town heartily united in them. A correspondent writes:—"Mr. Hutchinson's addresses seemed to gain increasing power over the young people every afternoon, and many declared themselves on the Lord's side. Mr. Hutchinson's ministry seemed to combine all the features that could win acceptance; while the earnest prayers of the congregations have, we believe, been answered in the power from on high, which has attended the visit of our gifted brother."

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., Jan. 17, Joshua ix. 16-27; Mon., Jan. 18, x. 1-15; Tues., Jan. 19, xiv. 1-15; Wed., Jan. 20, xx. 1-9; Thurs., Jan. 21, xxiii. 1-16; Fri., Jan. 22, xxiv. 1-15; Sat., Jan. 23, xxiv. 16-33

CHRIST'S SUNSHINE IN THE HEART.

When we want light in our rooms, we unbar the shutters and let in the sunshine; dark rooms are unwholesome. In like manner, every Christian who wants to be happy—and happy also under all circumstances—should keep his heart-windows wide open towards heaven. Let the warm rays of Christ's countenance shine in! It will scatter the chilling mists of doubt; it will turn tears into rainbows.

One of the happiest Christians that I know is happy on a very small income, and in spite of some very sharp trials. The secret of happiness is not in the size of one's house, or in the number of one's butterfly friends; the fountain of peace and joy is in the heart. As long as that keeps sweet and pure and satisfied with God's will, there is not much danger of acid words from the lips or of scowling clouds on the brow. Some Christians excuse their morose temper or their gloomy despondencies by the plea of poor health, whereas much of their dyspepsias or other ailments may be the result of sheer worry and peevishness. The medicine they need cannot be got from the doctor or the drug-store. A large draught of the Bible taken every morning, a throwing open of the hearts, windows to the promises of the Master, a few words of honest prayer, a deed or two of kindness to the next person you meet, will do more to brighten your countenance and help your digestion than all the drugs of the doctors. If you want to get your aches and your trials out of sight, hide them under your mercies.

The glory of Jesus Christ as the Great Physician and Health-bringer is that He deals with the soul, and with the body through the soul. The real Marah that embitters life is commonly a sour, selfish, unbelieving, unsanctified heart. There's the seat of the disease. Discontent and despondency gnaw out the core of the faith, and starve every grace. They never remove one sorrow and they kill a hundred joys. They disgrace our religion, disgust the world, and displease and dishonour the Christ we pretend to serve. Even when we are on a cross of providential trials, discontent may mingle a cup of vinegar and gall to make the suffering more bitter. On the other hand, a cross may be the means of lifting a true, brave, Christ-loving soul up higher, into the sweet sunshine of his countenance.

Bear in mind that your happiness or your misery is very much of your own making. You cannot create spiritual sunlight any more than you can create the morning star; but you can put your soul where Christ is shining. Keep a clear conscience. Keep a good stock of God's promises within reach. Keep a nightingale of hope in your soul that can sing away the dark hours when they do come. Keep a good, robust faith that can draw honey out of rocks and oil out of the flinty rock. Never spend a day without trying to do somebody good; and then, keeping step with your Master, march on towards heaven, over any road, however rough, and against any head-winds that blow. It will be all sunshine when we get up there.—Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D.

LITTLE THINGS.

A look, a word, and a smile,
They help through many a mile
Of toil, trouble, and tears
When the heart is full of fears
And the way is gloomy.

Be ever soft in thy speech,
You know not how far words reach;
And thy glance be kind and glad,
To aid the tired and sad
When the load is heavy. H. S.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. E. Arrowsmith and Mr. W. H. Roberts, Bedford, to Jan 18; Mr. H. Hutchinson, Wesleyan School, Crouch-end, Jan. 15 to 23; Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, Lyndhurst-road Church, Hampstead, to Jan. 15; Presbyterian Church, Wandsworth, Jan. 24 to 29; Mr. Josiah Spiers, Sevenoaks, Jan. 22 to Feby. 8; Mr. Livesey Carrott, Athenæum, Camden-road, every Sunday at 3 p.m.; Mr. Geo. Goodman, Markham-square Congregational Church, Chelsea, Jan. 17 to 23.

JEWISH CHILDREN OF EAST LONDON.—On Friday evening about three hundred Jewish children sat down to tea in Zion Chapel, Whitechapel-road, being the guests of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews. An interesting meeting was afterwards held, conducted by Mr. S. Wilkinson. Several hymns were sung by the children belonging to the Mission night-school; earnest addresses were given by Mrs. Rocha, Mr. Wilkinson, and Mr. Samuel Field. Several girls recited from memory passages from the Old and New Testaments.

THE HOME OF INDUSTRY.

As usual, our freshly-rescued orphan family had special care on Christmas Day. To them everything was full of pleasure, a tree laden with gifts, &c. We, who had seen such sights for twenty-one years, looked on with delight, as rough, boisterous boys softened under the personal kindnesses of family life; and we looked forward to the still greater changes, should the children be spared to be transplanted to Canada in the spring.

On New Year's Day our one hundred aged widows of over 70 years were lovingly waited upon by a bright band of lady workers at the usual hot dinner. Warm garments were given to each, with a pretty cretone bag, containing a packet of tea, a pound of Canadian cheese, a yearly text-roll, and a sixpence; all these kind gifts came from readers of The Christian.

Words fail us in expressing the thanks of the recipients to all who have aided us by prayer, kind thoughts, garments, or means for supplies, to give a happy time to the aged or the young we tender our united and grateful thanks.

MISSION TO THE GONDS.

In the forests and hilly districts of the central provinces of India lives an aboriginal tribe called the Gonds. Only two hundred years ago, they were the ruling race in these parts, and the remains of several fine fortresses, as well as many traditions, still bear witness to their former power. Compared with the Hindus, they are very simple-minded and honest, making faithful and hardworking servants, though, as a rule, they prefer to be free. Like the other aboriginal tribes of India, they appear always to have been addicted to strong drink, and this is partly the cause of their great poverty.

The religion of the Gonds is demon-worship; but during the last century they have begun to adopt some of the Hindu deities, and are present in considerable numbers at the mêlas, or religious fairs, which are held at intervals at the numerous shrines and holy places of the Hindus.

Attempts to establish mission-stations among the Gonds have from time to time been made, but until lately without success, owing to the unhealthiness of the localities they inhabit. Two missionaries, who tried to live amongst them in their rude huts, soon died from fever; while others, who were sent originally to them, have settled among the Hindus instead. Europeans find it impossible to live in these feverish jungles without well built, elevated houses; and this want has hitherto prevented the existence of a purely Gond Mission.

During the past three years, however, two stations have been established—one at Nimpani, in the Betul district, by Rev. K. A. Iwar, of the Swedish Evangelical Missionary Society; and one at Bordhai, in another part of the same district, by myself. I shall be glad to report from time to time of God's work among the Gonds here; but as free Missions are in a special way dependent on Christian support, I would earnestly request such, as well as prayers in my behalf, from kind friends who feel an interest in these poor fellow-creatures.—Yours in Christ,

F. G. E.

VISITORS TO SPAIN.—A correspondent writes: "I see that one of Messrs. Cook's personally-conducted parties for Spain, starting on the 13th, is to pass by Figueras, but the announcement does not state whether it is to stop over at that quaint little town, with its beautiful view of the Pyrennees. Should any Christians interested in missionary work be among the party, I am sure it would repay them to stop and hear from Señor and Madame Lopez Rodriguez something of the deeply noble work they are doing."

MISS ADELAIDE ROSS, who has been working for some time in furthering the emigration of young women, writes: At the present moment the Association for Protected Emigration for Women has had offered to it fifty free passages for single women in a vessel which will sail early in February. A correspondent in Perth (Western Australia) says: Strong country girls are the most suitable; we have many applications from up-country stations. There are no hardships to fear in this colony; all the stations are comfortable homes, but the work is hard. Any one wishing for more detailed information can apply to the Hon. Secretary of the Women's Emigration Association, Ivy-corner, Winchester.

THIRTY-FOUR THOUSAND WAIFS.

Dr. Barnardo's Waif Supper has long been familiar to most people as an annual institution, but it probably surprised many of the audience who gathered at the Edinburgh Castle, Rhodeswell-road, E., last Wednesday evening, the 6th inst., to witness the renewed ceremony, to learn that this was the seventeenth time in succession on which two thousand children had been assembled on a similar occasion. Thirty-four thousand waifs! Even though this vast total is spread over such a period of years, its significance must impress all whose heads, and above all whose hearts, are concerned with those social questions which are ever asking answer from citizen and Christian alike. After his twenty-six years' experience of the East-end, Dr. Barnardo could hardly at Wednesday's meeting point to more than one or two minor details in which his assembled guests were better than any of their predecessors. More amenable to discipline certainly; better acquainted with the rudiments of knowledge; but as for the rest—they come from homes as squalid, they are themselves as hard pushed in life's battle, they are every whit as needy of help as the first roomful of the like class that the old Edinburgh Castle ever witnessed. But the Doctor is no pessimist; he knows the possibilities of his "raw material" of unformed childhood, and it is a message of hope and good cheer that at the close of the plentiful meal he preaches to the youngsters.

The average age of the crowd, who after an hour's eager waiting, with their precious tickets in hand, tumbled into the spacious Castle Hall, might be from twelve to fourteen. A few there were of sixteen and over, many more of ten and under; but there was hardly one that did not bear in face, in clothes, in manner, the marks of struggle and privation. About four hundred of the guests were girls—poor, tattered and torn little people, on whose weaker frames the burden had been heavier than on their sturdier brothers. Dr. Barnardo's supper tickets had been well distributed, alike as to careful selection and as to width of area. Some guests came from Notting-hill, some from Holloway; Lambeth sent a contingent from the "Newcut," the purlieus of Drury-lane were represented, so was Westminster, and, of course, the teeming East-end had turned out its juvenile "dossers" and street waifs by the score and by the hundred. Many were barefoot, though the night was freezing, and rags were decidedly in the ascendant in the matter of clothing.

The supper consisted of an ample supply of tea served piping hot from the urns by the ready stewards amidst uproarious shouts from the excited and crowded benches. Bread-and-butter and cake were handed to each guest in paper bags, and when, after grace had been reverently sung, the bugle gave the signal, the meal progressed with the utmost rapidity and with every sign of hearty appreciation. Eating and drinking, however, are but the prelude to a long and busy evening. A capital entertainment, in which a clever conjurer played a prominent part, was rapturously received by the guests, and then Dr. Barnardo warily spread his nets for the untamed wildlings before him. His own ruddy-faced, white-uniformed Home boys formed a capital object-lesson, and the appeal that to every destitute boy and girl these Institutions offered an open door found its way to many a heart. A story of a bygone rescue that had made a mark in the world was listened to with rapt attention, and after a little pithy Gospel address by Rev. Percy Chapman, the work of gathering in the applicants began. When we left at a late hour volunteers were still telling their stories, and cases by the dozen were in the first stage of investigation. All the prima facie eligibles would be admitted to the Homes at once, and after a round of training they would ultimately find their way out into the world again as sturdy emigrants or steady and reliable workers at home. The bulk of the throng slowly dispersed after a parting cheer by way of vote of thanks, but each little mite was gladdened by a bright new sixpence to "pay for a doss," as Dr. Barnardo put it. A crowd of almost equal extent waited for the guests outside the Castle gates, and it seemed that with a wider invitation four thousand, instead of two, might have been gathered to this unique festival from among London's pitiably poor. At all events, the occasion was one to set Christians a-thinking, and to nerve the efforts of those who, in their Master's name, are preaching so practically down in the East-end the Gospel that has hope for the present life as well as for that which is to come.

Dr. Barnardo, we learn, has 4300 rescued boys and girls inside those multiform Homes of his, and no fewer than 1717 new cases were admitted during 1891. There is surely abundant need for such as he.

When I shall Wake.

"I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with Thy likeness."—Psa. xvii. 15.

Horatius Bonar, D.D. Geo. C. Stebbins.

JEWISH MISSION WORK IN LONDON.

There is no city in the world where so many organisations are at work among the Jewish population as in London. But in spite of this fact, when one surveys the miles of Jewish streets in the East-end of the city, when one observes the thousands of Israelitish faces, it seems as if comparatively little were done, after all, to reach these masses with the truths of the Gospel. However, when one contrasts what is done now with the effort of a few years ago, one cannot but feel that there is much ground for encouragement. Nothing indicates this better than the diminished prejudice of Jews against entering a public mission service.

With the object of forming some idea as to this, a return was obtained of the attendance of Jews at the various open mission meetings held on Saturday, December 19. This, of course, represents in no sense the scope of the various missionary organisations under whose auspices the meetings are conducted. Some, indeed, do not hold a meeting on the Saturday.

The return is as follows:—

Mission Hall, Finsbury-square	67
,, Commercial-road	61
,, Bishopsgate ...	54
,, Spitalfields ...	52
Sion Chapel	45
Mission Hall, Wellclose-square	40
Presbyterian Mission Hall ...	35
Great Assembly Hall	26
Mission House, Spitalfields ...	24
,, Goulston-street ...	14
Mission Room, Leman-street ...	12
Home of Industry	8
Total attendance of Jews ...	438

In only one of the above-mentioned meetings is any relief given at the time. The meetings are in each case quite open to any Jew, and there are generally a sprinkling of fresh faces at each meeting. We can safely deduce from the above total, and facts that about ½ per cent. of the Jewish population of London are more or less regular attendants at Christian mission meetings; and when we consider that the number as stated above is composed principally of men, and is quite exclusive of all special meetings, such as medical missions, sewing-classes, night schools, tea-meetings, &c., it will be seen that there is much reason for encouragement.

Truly the Lord's Spirit, which is working with Israel in all parts of the world, is present, too, in London. God grant that we may see great things in the near future, whether it be by means of the missionary operations now carried on or by the Holy Spirit awakening a Rabinowitch in the million-peopled city.

RESCUE WORK AT SWANSEA.—Last year fifty three girls were dealt with at the Shelter, Cwmdonkin-park, Swansea, most of whom were comfortably placed in situations, other Homes, or emigrated. Correspondence is kept up with a large number of former inmates. The fourth annual report says:—"The girls come to us generally in such a filthy state that we are compelled to clothe them from head to foot; we should therefore feel deeply thankful for any left-off garments, especially dresses, jackets, hats, boots." One of the great sources of encouragement is furnished in the striking change which the inmates undergo, in many cases spiritual as well as physical. The committee announce their purpose to engage a visitor to the police-cells and workhouses, who will offer, where needed, a friendly hand and a fresh start in life. A Mother's Union is also to be formed. Communications may be addressed to Mrs. Ebenezer Davies, Hon. Secretary, Brunswick House, Swansea.

REV. CHARLES BULLOCK, B.D.,

Founder of the Robin Dinners for Poor Children.

WE give this week a portrait of Rev. Charles Bullock, B.D., so widely known as the editor of Home Words, and the founder of "Robin Dinners." Few men have worked with greater enthusiasm and devotion in the field of pure literature than Mr. Bullock. He has not been content to stand by and lament the widespread circulation of unhealthy and pestilential papers. He has boldly given battle to the evil; millions of his booklets and magazines have gone forth to counteract the evil, and it is impossible to form any estimate of the good which has thus been accomplished. There can hardly be a parish in the kingdom into which the Home Words publications have not gained an entrance.

Mr. Bullock was ordained in 1855 by Dr. Musgrave, Archbishop of York, to the curacy of Rotherham. From this post he removed to Ripley, near Harrogate, and later on he held the sole charge of a new church and district at Luton. In 1859 he became curate of St. Nicholas', Worcester, where he had the great joy and privilege of working with the revered Canon Havergal. It was his further privilege to form a lasting friendship with "F. R. H.," many of whose poems first appeared in The Fireside. She often called him her "literary father," and her first volume, "The Ministry of Song," was published at his urgent request. On the retirement of Canon Havergal, in 1860, to a country charge, Bishop Pepys appointed Mr. Bullock to be his successor. Fourteen years he worked with great energy in Worcester, and during his ministry the fine old church was thoroughly restored.

In the midst of his work at Worcester Mr. Bullock found time, in 1864 (when such magazines were few and far between), to start The Fireside Magazine. In 1871 he commenced Home Words, which has been localised in parishes all over the country. Its principles are known to be distinctly Evangelical, and it affords no slight ground of confidence in the faithfulness of a very large section of the Clergy to Reformation truth to know that such a magazine is read by a very large proportion of the population. A year later Mr. Bullock started a third magazine, entitled The Day of Days, which also commands a wide circle of readers. Those who are interested in the preservation of Sunday as the Day of Rest will read with pleasure the editor's recent proposal to form "The 'Hold Fast by your Sunday' Society." The objects aimed at are simple, but, for this very reason, if generally adopted, would be most effective. They are as follow:—I. To commend the Lord's Day to others as one of God's best gifts to man—a day of rest, and peace and joy, and holy hope. II. In the matter of Sunday Rest, to make it our aim to "do to others as we would have others do to us." III. As far as we possibly can, to abstain from employing postmen, cabmen, omnibus-drivers, and others, on Sunday. IV. To lessen household work as much as we can, so as to give domestic servants more frequent opportunities of Divine worship. Especially to remember this during our annual holidays. V. To interest the young on Sunday by supplying in the home attractive reading, music, and curiosities illustrating God's Word and works. VI. To show social kindness, when able, to young men and young women away from home in our large towns—"strangers within our gates." VII. To promote the circulation of attractive books and magazines generally in the homes of the people, amongst our policemen, postmen, cabmen, and others, and also in our hospitals, infirmaries, orphanages, unions, and—where perhaps most needed—our prisons. VIII. To try and make Sunday everywhere a happy day to all.

In 1878 Mr. Bullock, with great regret, felt constrained by increasing literary engagements to resign his charge at Worcester, and moved to London, in order to devote himself more entirely to this work. In 1876 he founded a penny illustrated Church of England newspaper, under the attractive title of Hand and Heart. It speedily attained a large circulation, and received a cordial welcome throughout the country. A further step was taken several years since to establish a weekly journal for general readers, entitled The News, which is doing to-day a most important work. But Mr. Bullock has not been satisfied with the enormous work connected with the editorship of four monthly magazines and a weekly newspaper. He has written a large number of books. "The Way Home; or, the Gospel in the Parable"—his first work—passed through many editions, and has reached a circulation of 70,000 copies. Among other volumes we may mention "England's Royal Home," "Words of Ministry; or, Sunday Readings in the Home," "The Best Wish," "The Parent's Gift: a Help to Early Prayer and Praise," "Heart Cheer for Home Sorrow," "The Sunday-School Gift," "The Old Gospel ever New," "The Queen's Resolve," "The Crown of the Road," "Faith's Rock of Rest," "Life of Sir James Simpson," "How They Lived in the Olden Time," "The Sisters; Reminiscences of F. R. Havergal and M. V. G. Havergal," "An Hour with George Herbert," and "The Strangest Thing in the World: a Reply to Professor Drummond."

Mr. Bullock is a warm friend of Sunday-schools and well utilised the Press, in the centenary year, "Can Nothing be Done?" and "What do we Owe Him?"—two small volumes dealing with the story of the Gloucester philanthropist—ran through several editions, the latter rapidly reaching a circulation of 50,000 copies, and no memorial of Raikes seemed to be more welcome than these attractive books. Mr. Bullock is a staunch total abstainer, and nearly thirty years ago he contributed to The Church of England Temperance Magazine his personal experience of total abstinence. He has preached for the C.E.T.S., and by means of his publications has brought definite temperance teaching before millions of people. Three "Temperance Talks," in Bath Abbey and other churches in that city, have just been published, as a companion volume to the widely-known "Temperance Witness-box."

A record of Mr. Bullock's work would be seriously incomplete without mention of the "Robin Dinners," of which he is the founder. The present season of the year impresses us with his conspicuous usefulness in connection with this popular work of charity. For many years his cheery appeals have gone forth every Christmas. Thousands of kindly hearts have been touched, and the result has been seen in quite a shower of Postal Orders and stamps—to the amount, in recent years, of nearly £1,000. The first year only two or three hundred hungry "Robins" were entertained, but now about 40,000 are invited, and those who witness their enjoyment of the solid feast and the pleasant entertainments provided in various centres will never forget the sight. The movement has also spread to the provinces. In Norwich one year 7,000 "Robins" had a happy evening. The "Robin Dinners" thus promise to become a national institution. Mr. Bullock is a most skilful beggar. During the lamentable famine in India in 1877, he made an appeal to his readers, which resulted in the addition of nearly £350 to the Mansion House Fund; and later on, upon the death of Frances Ridley Havergal, he suggested to his readers a special Church Missionary Havergal Memorial Fund, and more than £2,000 was thus contributed.

Two or three years ago Mr. Bullock removed to Bournemouth, but the heavy and pressing work which he has in hand leaves but little leisure for the enjoyment of the healthful breezes and delightful surroundings of that well-known resort. During his brief holiday last year in Switzerland, taking chaplaincies, he accomplished more work than most men would care to attempt under ordinary circumstances.

We have left ourselves no space to speak of Mr. Bullock's characteristics as an author, but this is the less to be regretted, as we are sure his writings are known to most of our readers. "Life in the Home" is the topic with which his pen is most frequently exercised; and in dealing with religious questions, his one aim seems to be to dwell on the essential verities of Gospel truth. He urges all to plant their feet on the rock of Divine, and, therefore, absolute truth, instead of the shifting sandbanks of human opinion about religion, as it is represented in our day of presumptuous speculation by what are not inaptly termed "schools of thought"—mere human thought.

OUR LIFE VOICE.

"Let the redeemed of the Lord say so."—Psalm cvii.1,2

What infinite grace that, amid the unresting anthem of the cherubim, God should desire to hear our feeble praises! The song of heaven is one unbroken harmony; there is no discordant note in all the music of its worship. But it is not enough. God wants to hear the voices of his redeemed ones. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so." He claims the sacrifice of praise from his ransomed people, dearer far than angels, being bought with the most precious thing God had to give. He wants us to gladden the heart that was sore wounded for us. He has given us lips to praise Him, but does He mean our lips alone to "say so"? Ah, not so.

He of whom it is written that there was none greater born of women was but a voice. Not his words, when he spoke by Divine revealing, "Behold the Lamb of God"; not his witness-bearing to the Pharisees for God's beloved Son; not his single-handed preaching in the wilderness of Judea; but himself was the voice. His raiment of camel's hair; his meat of locusts and wild honey; his pilgrim ways that rebuked the ungodly nation—it was all a voice, in which not one note jarred on the listening ear of Jehovah, or marred the unbroken testimony of his devoted life.

How far is it so with us, who should know far better the awful burden of a world's guilt under which God's Holy One agonised and groaned—the deeper anguish of the forsaking, when his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground? It was but a little thing to Him who so loved us, to leave the glory of heaven for his chosen flock; but He forfeited for us the loving-kindness that is better than life, while He took the sinner's curse and doom to give to us his place of highest blessing.

Shall we wholly praise Him in our brief life-song, or shall heavenly words and worldly ways make discord in the voice of our testimony, while God waits to hear? Our dress, our houses, our conversation, speak more loudly than words in the ear of an unsaved world. Do we count these little things? Then we are out of God's reckoning, for nothing is little with Him that touches his glory, and nothing is little that concerns our smallest good.

Let us remember that not the lips only of the cleansed and consecrated one were touched by the blood and the oil, but his ear, his hand, his foot. (Lev. viii. 23.) The whole being was for God. Did we count that what we had was our own, to give a part to God? Nay, but it is all his, bought with the price of blood. It is written of these consecrated ones that God Himself was their inheritance. God gave Himself to them—they gave themselves to God. This, and nothing less, is consecration. It is not a question of what we give to Him of that which is all his own, but of how much we keep back of what was never ours. Christ kept nothing back when He gave Himself for us. He gave Himself in the fulness of his infinite perfection for our sin—in the glory of his resurrection triumph to be our portion.

Shall we so give ourselves to Christ, in all our helplessness and need, or shall we still desire to keep something back for our own selfish joy, in which He cannot share, to be a note of discord now and at the judgment-seat in the voice He stoops to hear? God help us in the little while that remains—how little we know not—to be each one in our life, a voice of unbroken harmony for Christ. A.E.W.

AMONGST TIBETAN WOMEN.

Mrs. W. Fyfe Laughton writes from the distant C. I. M. Station, Liung-Cheo-fu, Kan-suh Province:—

Some time ago I accompanied my husband on a journey to a little town called Lusa, some fifty Chinese miles, or sixteen English, from our station Si-ning. When we started the snow was falling fast. Our purpose was to be present at the Tibetan festival held among the temples on the hill. On the way going there were droves of camels and buffaloes, also many Tibetans hastening along to be in time for the feast, and two Tibetan women, looking rather clumsy in their great skin gowns, the fur turned to the inside, large fur hat, and long leather boots. They look rough in comparison with the Chinese women, but I like their manner better than the Chinese. The latter, however, are cleaner in their food than the Tibetans, as we saw during the few days we were amongst them. Coming down the hill one morning, we saw a Tibetan woman preparing some food. A man stood by cutting up half of a sheep, and she was busy putting the meat into the pot, which was on a fire kindled among the snow. The Tibetans almost live on meat, without either bread or vegetables.

I went into a room two doors from ours—occupied by two Tibetan women. One of them understood Chinese very much better than the other; so I had a nice talk with them of the only true God. I gave them each a little text-card (John iii. 16), in Tibetan; they seemed to think it so sacred, taking it with both hands, gently raising it, touched their forehead with them (as they usually do with all sacred books). One of them was spinning grey wool all the time I was talking to them of Jesus and his love. Soon after a priest came to see us, sat down, and had a very friendly chat. My husband preached Jesus to him; he had a brass casket round his neck, which he opened, and gave us (as a most precious thing) a little image of Buddha, telling us to put it in clean paper. It was made of wax, or something like it. Poor, deluded creature! Among his many charms were a few little rags of cloth, red and white, which he said were the fragments of Buddha's clothes.

One afternoon we went out surveying, and we had to take our cart part of the way, because the melted snow hindered us from walking. However, we walked up the hill a little way, and got a fine view of the temples all around. I believe that during the summer months the hill is covered with long grass. We passed crowds of Lamas and Tibetan women dressed in holiday attire. Many tents were spread out among the snow, and Tibetans feasting on mutton all around us. One day when out, we saw a sad sight, women and men prostrating themselves their full length all along the ground, and they were no sooner up than they were down again, this going on for some miles all around the temples. Alas! they know no better. Is it not time for the Christian Church to arise and shine, sending forth labourers to these far-off corners of the earth? Souls, immortal souls, are passing daily down to an undone eternity! Who will come to the help of Tibet? May the Lord send out those who should come.

We got into one temple by permission of one of the Lamas, but they did not let us inside. Even those who came to worship stood outside. At the entrance a cloth was nailed across the door. I raised the cloth to look in, but in case of offending I let it down again. All that could be seen inside was lighted incense burning before a huge idol. They are not usually very pretty to look at. Alongside one of the porches were a lot of small cups made of brass full of wine-and-water. What a high and lovely calling is, indeed, ours, who are chosen by God for work amongst the heathen. The more we come in contact with these people the more we love them.

We saw another sad sight one day when, in a temple, a man made his appearance with a very business air about him. He walked up to the image of the dragon in front of him, which, of course, was made of iron, and fire coming out of its mouth. He knelt down, and, muttering something, marched round and round, and again knelt and worshipped it. He rose, and quite loud he cried out, "Oh, you great God—if you are a God—send down happiness;" then he pretended to throw something in the idol's face, and walked away with as business an air as he came, seemingly quite satisfied with himself.

We saw a house on the hill which they say is the living Buddha's residence. My husband went into a temple the other day and saw the living Buddha sitting with his ministers on each side of him, also men dressed in skins dancing in front of him. Outside of this temple were heaps of boots and shoes. The place evidently was to them holy ground.

Oh, soon may the heathen, of every tribe and nation,
Fulfil thy blessed word, and cast their idols all away.
Oh, shine upon them from above,
And show thyself the God of love,
Teach the poor Tibetans to come unto Thee.

MISSIONARIES FOR THE SOUDAN.

Several Christian young men have come forward to join the Mission of Mr. Hermann G. Harris in the Central Soudan Mission. On Thursday last three—named Edward G. Crook, Thomas Holt, and David Loynd—sailed for North Africa. They all came from Bolton, in Lancashire, and at Tripoli will be met by their fellow-townsman, Mr. Edward White, who went out about a year ago, and is now able to read the Scriptures in Arabic to the people. The recruits will pass same time in Tripoli studying the language.

At a farewell meeting in Bolton, on Monday week, much interest in the Mission was evinced. Mr. Harris described the immense Soudan territory, and dwelt upon its great spiritual destitution. A Christian gentleman has promised to put a steamer on Lake Tchad, when a Mission station has been established in that part of the interior. The out-going missionaries made interesting statements, which showed that in every case they had been engaged in Gospel work at home. Words of encouragement were spoken by Revs. J. Johnston and J. H. Gibson, and the three devoted ambassadors of the Cross were earnestly commended to the grace of God. Another recruit will, it is hoped, accompany Mr. Harris on his return in a week or two. In the meantime, Mr. Harris's address is Belmont, Weston-super-Mare.

VILLAGE LIBRARY.—Would any of your readers assist in the formation of a village library by the presentation of suitable books? Those who have had experience in the management of such a library would greatly aid by sending copies of rules or any other papers. C. W. Barclay.

THE CONVALESCENT HOME FOR CITY YOUNG WOMEN, Tuttlebee-lane, Buckhurst-hill, has received more than 1500 inmates since it was opened nine years ago. The report for the past year thankfully records the fact that no one has had to be refused through lack of funds. Next to this is the grateful acknowledgments received from inmates who have found renewal of soul as well as body during a visit. There is no fixed charge, but if girls are too poor to pay, or their friends too poor to pay for them, they are taken free. A new Home has just been acquired, the address being 1, Albert-villas, Whitehall-road, Woodford Wells. Any sort of gifts appear to be welcome, boots and shoes particularly so, also books. Communications may be made to Miss Helen Reynolds, Epping New-road, Buckhurst-hill.

The Revival in Scotland.

(BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

A WEEK'S WORK IN ABERDEEN.

AN EVANGELISTIC QUARTETTE.

It is necessary to change the heading of these reports, since the chief human agents in the work have become multiplied by two. Mr. McNeill's accession was chronicled last week; a fourth worker is now in the field in the person of Mr. J. H. Burke, an American Gospel singer whom Messrs. Moody and Sankey sent for to assist. He reached the north of Scotland towards the end of the week—in time to be introduced by Mr. Sankey to Aberdeen audiences, and to show that he has distinct gifts in proclaiming the Gospel through tuneful and artistic song. He has a rich and finely cultured tenor voice, and sings with great expression. For the present he will accompany Mr. McNeill.

In attempting to chronicle within a brief compass the past week's work in Aberdeen, one's greatest difficulty is the EMBARRASSMENT OF RICHES.

The whole of this issue might not unprofitably be occupied with a record of the sayings and doings of the week. Perhaps the first thing to be noted is the firm hold that the old Gospel has on the minds and hearts of these shrewd, hard-headed Aberdonians. Towards the end of the week Mr. Moody said he had been told when he arrived in this country, that he would find "a new Scotland"; such had not been his experience. Certainly the aspect of Aberdeen during these past days gives no colour to the assumption that the Gospel which Mr. Moody preached in bygone days has been shorn of its power to attract. Weather is supposed to affect the attendance at religious meetings, even in church-going Scotland. The weather of the past week has been as wild and wintry in the north of Scotland as the most ardent Esquimaux might desire. Yet, day after day, and twice a day, the frostbound and wind-swept streets of the city have been thronged with men and women flocking to church or hall simply to hear the old, old story of Jesus and his love rung out in clarion notes either in sermon or in song. That is a phenomenon which modern philosophers, advanced theologians, and higher critics may be left to explain to their own satisfaction—or otherwise.

One cannot but feel that it has been a day of gracious visitation for "Aberdeen and twal' mile roun'," as the proverbial phrase goes. How far Aberdeen will know and will profit by this visitation it is not within the province of any human observer to say. There is this hopeful element in the case—hopeful, at any rate, in Mr. Moody's view. He sometimes remarks, as the result of long experience, that when God is working with saving power in the hearts of the people the devil is busy propagating lies. Last week there was served up in the Scotch Press an ample dish of canards, baseless rumours—"the chatter of irresponsible frivolity"—and ignorant, uncharitable criticism. So one may confidently believe that God has been doing great things in setting free for his service many hitherto bound by the chains of sin or held back by prejudice and indifference. Mr. Moody's unfailing answer to all "the chatter" referred to is—

Then shall my heart keep singing.

With two preachers of such originality and force as Mr. Moody and Mr. McNeill addressing great audiences pari passu, there is great temptation to enter on COMPARISONS AT ONCE UNFAIR AND ODIOUS.

God does not repeat himself, and the speaking gifts with which He has endowed both these servants are distinctly apart, though equally effective for the one supreme end of rousing sinful men and women out of their sleep of indifference and slothful Christians out of their beds of ease and selfish unconcern. Mr. Moody almost glories in the fact that he cares little for what is known as "systematic theology." He leaves that branch of human thought (or speculation) to specialists. He loves to declare the sovereign love of the Father for a lost world; to lift up in the most comprehensive terms a living and ascended Christ—once the Sin Bearer of the whole race, and now the Saviour of all who will come to Him for pardon, peace, and power. He exalts the Holy Spirit as the present Witnesser of Christ, and the effectual, ever-willing agent of salvation. Such is his simple but sufficient creed, as it comes out in his public teaching; and he severely fights shy, as a rule, of controversial doctrine.

Last week, however, he gave one afternoon his Bible reading on "The Blood," showing from the cumulative teaching of Jewish type and symbol and ritual, how God was preparing the world for the advent of Him who by the one sacrifice on Calvary made full atonement for the sins of Adam's race, and in whom God was reconciling the world to Himself. Though he does not often touch on disputed doctrines, Mr. Moody has no sort of sympathy with any so-called Gospel that minimises or leaves out of view the Cross of Christ and all that it signifies. There have been many expressions of pleasure and gratitude, on the part of ministers and others, at the evangelist's restatement of his staunch, unfaltering belief in these foundation truths of justification by atonement and sanctification by the gracious working of the Holy Ghost. And Mr. Sankey, who has the best possible right to speak on the point, affirms that his fellow-worker never preaches on "The Blood" without seeing many seals to that ministry of reconciliation.

MR. M'NEILL'S ADDRESSES

during the past week have been the theme of much admiring comment. Indiscriminate eulogy of his utterances would be neither good for the gifted preacher himself nor glorifying to God. With the fine gold of his fearless and powerful speech there is an admixture of alloy that time and experience may be trusted to purge. But the fact remains that Mr. McNeill, by consent of unprejudiced judges, is one of the few great preachers of this time. Mr. Moody is not addicted to gush, and he is unstinted in his words of praise with respect to the discourses of his young fellow evangelist. It has really been a noteworthy sight to see day after day the large and growing group of ministers who have attended the Belmont-street Congregational Chapel and the Free West Church afternoon and evening, and have listened with a dazed and wondering eagerness to the glowing periods of Mr. McNeill. In his hands the pages of the good old Book have become luminous with new beauty and pregnant with meanings and lessons undreamt of before. His forte lies in translating the sacred narratives and writings into the vernacular of to-day. And no subject seems to come amiss to him. He is equally effective in closely-knit argument and in popular appeal, while throughout his discourses there runs a vein of subtle sarcasm or of flashing and unstrained wit, that does more execution in paving the way for the serious aspects of truth than tons of lumberous logic could accomplish. More need not be said with respect to the peculiar qualities of Mr. McNeill's preaching, as these pages will contain from week to week condensed notes of his rousing and sparkling addresses. Of course, they suffer much from condensation—even when reported fully, the expressive play of feature, the intonations of a rich and plastic voice, and the inimitable gestures are lacking. Mr. McNeill has great power in putting his hearers into a corner, and shutting them up, so to speak, to an immediate acceptance of the truth. If he becomes as great an adept in the work of the after-meeting, he will prove a mighty evangelising instrument in the hand of God. During the past week he entered heartily into the work of the inquiry-room, not only at his own meetings, but at those held by Mr. Moody.

THESE AFTER-MEETINGS

are, of course, the crux of evangelistic work, and it is a matter greatly to be deplored that many Scottish ministers, speaking generally, do not seem to be at home in personal dealing with anxious souls. It will need a thorough and radical upheaval in methods of college training before a better state of things prevails; and the man or men who will bring about this ecclesiastical earthquake will be far greater benefactors to the race than if they were to discover the long-sought-for "philosopher's stone." Much reaping work has been done in Aberdeen, both afternoon and evening, but much more might have been done if adequate arrangements had been made for inquiry-room accommodation, and for furnishing an army of trained workers of both sexes. Some of the cases of soul-concern and soul-decision met with have been intensely interesting, but there is no space for details.

A VISIT TO HADDO HOUSE

was one of the interesting items of the week. It was not in the original programme, but Lord and Lady Aberdeen were so importunate in their entreaties to Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey to help in the public opening of a new hall, erected close to the family mansion, that they at last consented. The only condition exacted was that the Aberdeen meetings should not be interfered with, and, through the generous arrangements of the Earl and Countess, this was carried out. The evangelists left Aberdeen by special train after the close of the Music-hall meeting on Wednesday evening, and were driven from Udny Station to Haddo House, where they rested for the night. The snow drifts had blocked up the country roads, but Lord Aberdeen was equal to the emergency; he had a gang of his men out with the snow plough at three o'clock on Thursday morning, and before dawn the principal roads for many miles around were passable, either for foot or vehicle traffic. Thursday was a glorious day overhead, though bitterly cold, and soon after eleven o'clock a large company had come from far and near to be present at the inauguration of the beautiful hall which his lordship has erected under the shadow of his own residence for the holding of religious, social, and other meetings among his tenantry. A contingent of the Aberdeen choir went out to help in the song, and were hospitably entertained by Lord and Lady Aberdeen. The Earl introduced the speaking by one of his hearty and neatly-expressed speeches. Mr. Moody preached the Gospel with great unction and charm of manner, and Mr. Sankey made the rafters ring with his melodious song. The evangelists returned to town by carriage and special train, just in time to be at the opening of the three o'clock meeting in the South Parish Church. They will retain very happy memories of this flying visit. On the previous Sunday evening Lord Aberdeen had given an interesting detailed account, at a meeting in his private chapel, of the leading facts in Mr. Moody's career, and of the work of his schools at Northfield and Chicago.

MR. M'NEILL AND ABERDEEN STUDENTS.]

The students in Aberdeen University got a taste of Mr. McNeill's peculiar qualities as a speaker on Saturday forenoon, when some 450 of them, drawn from all the "faculties," assembled to hear him in the Natural History classroom of Marischal College. Professor Cowan presided, and in a few graceful, laudatory sentences introduced the preacher-visitor. Before Mr. McNeill entered the room the students were frisky enough after their kind, but all fears of any unseemly ebullition of youthful spirits soon vanished when he rose to address them. His text was, "The beginning of miracles" at Cana of Galilee, and he swayed them at will with apparent ease. Humour, argument, pathos, and direct Gospel appeal were blended throughout with sacred skill. He showed that though this was the beginning of miracles with Christ, no man can say where the Lord's miracles are to end. Every single conversion is a miracle as wondrous as the turning of water into wine. His exposition of the phrase "the wine failed" (R.V.) was wonderfully fine and telling. He pointed out how all through human life the wine of health, of intellect, of moral conduct, of social happiness, fails; and how Christ alone can make up for the failure. He closed with an eloquently-expressed and profound passage from one of Browning's poems, and the crowd of clever young Aberdonians dispersed in a much more subdued frame of mind than they had assembled an hour before.

SABBATH IN MONTROSE.

On Saturday evening Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey bade farewell to the Granite City, and after an hour's run found themselves in Montrose. The snow was falling thickly, but on this coast-line there has been no blocking of roads and railways such as the evangelists would experience, if they were still in the far north. Ross-shire, Sutherland, and Caithness are now having such a wintry visitation, that one feels deeply thankful for the favourable weather that prevailed when Mr. Moody and his helpers were in these parts of the country.

Looking at the day as a whole, the engagements of Sabbath last in Montrose were marked by exceptional promise and potency as to their outcome. The simple enumeration of the meetings held will show what a busy day it was for the two evangelists. At 9.30 in the morning they were driven a mile and a-half to the fishing quarter at Ferryden, where the first meeting was held. Mr. Moody preached on the compassion of Christ, one of the most heart-moving and effective in his large repertoire of sermons. He had to hurry off to preach at St. George's Free Church at eleven, and left Mr. W. Robertson, of Edinburgh (who has rejoined the party), to follow up with a second meeting. Mr. Sankey sang his now famous solo "Throw out the Life Line," and the sea-faring audience very speedily picked up the swinging chorus. Mr. Moody's third address was given in the afternoon at St. John's Free Church, which was crammed. He spoke on "Assurance." At an after meeting in the Evangelical Union Chapel the net was cast, and some, at any rate, were brought to land.

In the evening an immense concourse of about three thousand people were squeezed into the parish church, and listened with rapt and awed attention to a discourse on "Sowing and Reaping." At the same hour an overflow was held in St. George's Free Church. It was addressed by the pastor, Mr. Forgan, Mr. Robertson, and Mr. Sankey, who had repaired thither after singing two solos in the parish church. The combined after-meeting held in the Congregational Church was very large, and, humanly speaking, most fruitful, as large numbers responded to Mr. Moody's heart-stirring appeals for the indication of spiritual concern, and the hour was late before the last of the inquirers left the lecture-hall behind, into which they were drafted from the chapel. The spirit of decision was blessedly apparent and highly encouraging as the outcome of one day's work.

REV. JOHN M'NEILL,

according to the reports in the Aberdeen papers on Monday, also had a busy time there on the previous day. He preached three times to great crowds, the evening meeting in the Music Hall being crowded out long before the hour fixed for the service. The three subjects were: Doubting Thomas, the Choice of David as King, and Zaccheus. As may be imagined, these old-world narratives found a powerful modern setting at the hands of the preacher, and were made to illustrate in a marvellously graphic way the Divine dealings in grace alike with saint and sinner.

LAS PALMAS, GRAND CANARY.

Colonel Morton writes from Mildmay Conference Hall:—My wife, in a letter from Hotel Sta. Catalina, Las Palmas, says:—"I went down to see Mr. Searle's Sailors' Rest on December 19. Mrs. Searle is full of zeal about the house and the arrangements—they certainly have done wonders, and the place promises very well, all in a small way. I do wish they could get funds; they want a sum of £200 or £300 to start the next house. Four ships of the Training Squadron came in three weeks ago, and they got up a tea for a hundred men."

I may supplement this account by quoting a few extracts of Mr. Searle's letter, dated December 16, to Mr. J. E. Mathieson: "There would have been more than a hundred bluejackets at the tea, but only special leave was given. We had a present of violets and foliage from Colonel Craig, director of the Catalina Hotel Company, and some ladies came and decorated the room, which looked almost like a Mildmay room. The men were highly pleased, and we closed with a testimony meeting, at which the Christian sailors spoke and testified for the Master in a very blessed manner.

"We had a great difficulty to close; every one wanted to stay all night. All our sleeping accommodation was utilised to the utmost, forms, beds, couches, and even boards, being occupied. At a similar meeting, a second night, some Spaniards were present; they also enjoyed the meeting, and will come again as soon as we can get some new lantern-slides. We have two Bibles shown open in one of the windows. You would be cheered to see how many stop to read." Colonel Morton is treasurer for the committee of the Las Palmas Sailors' Rest.

THE IRISH DEACONESS AND MISSIONARY TRAINING INSTITUTE, 31, Mount Pleasant-square, Dublin, is now ready for the reception of candidates, for either home or foreign mission work, and the hon. Lady Superintendent, Miss Gage Brown, will gladly supply rules, application forms, and give information as to terms, &c. The Home is under the management of the Irish Executive Council of the Y.M.C.A. Ireland has furnished many missionary candidates, but most of these have had to pass through English training homes, because there was no Irish institution where all the necessary experience could be gained and essential principles learned. Friends of the work are asked to send gifts of furniture, house linen, books, and other help, which will be gladly acknowledged by the hon. Lady Superintendent; or by Mrs. Pease, Willow-park, Boterstown, Dublin.

ECHOES FROM DEPTFORD.

Dr. Pring sends, under the simple title, "Echoes," a brief account of the work of the Deptford Medical Mission in a poor and godless neighbourhood. Even in this place God has been pleased to bless greatly the faithful labours of the Medical Missionary and his helpers, and this fact is made visible to every reader of the "Echoes" by a photographic group of some of the trophies, with a few notes on their careers.

The remark has been made more than once, "What a respectable lot of men;" and they are; but the workers can remember most of them when their respectability could have been put in a nutshell, with plenty of room to spare. The religion of Jesus Christ is one which can and does transform and reform the most abandoned. Their present welfare is a living echo of the Apostle's words—that godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come. Most of these men and lads have, through the grace of God, embraced a practical Christianity through the work which is being carried on at the Deptford Medical Mission. Most of them have served well the prince of this world, but have gone back to their workshops, the factory, or the docks, to witness a good confession for Christ, and to brave the taunts and sneers of their old companions. Persecution and abuse have been meted out freely by those whose ranks they have left, and who do not hesitate to use religious liberty for the propagation of their own atheism, but who are grossly intolerant of consistent Christianity in their midst.

Having touched on the comparative neglect of South London, Dr. Pring proceeds:—Surely an agency for reaching the people which has not only the impress of our Lord Himself in his two-fold character of Healer and Preacher, but which has received the fiat of his Divine command, is one for which we may unhesitatingly ask the prayerful sympathy and practical help of his people.

Money is not the only thing needed in the way of practical help. There is something which almost every one can give, and which, while being very valuable to us, will cost but a few pence for carriage in sending. It is not often that we can be generous at so small a cost, but it is, nevertheless, true that you can send us a most useful and valuable gift by packing up and despatching, as soon as possible, to the Deptford Medical Mission, your old clothes. It is wonderful what a lot can be done in a medical mission work with old clothes. To the sick and convalescent they are welcome gifts, and doubly so in those cases where the disease has been caused by lack of sufficient clothing, or through some poor toiler having got wet through and having no change of garments of any sort. Then there are the little ones, who make one shudder to see them with naked feet running about on the cold stones, or the hard sharp frozen roads. Amongst further needs are old boots and shoes, children's treats; but at present the Mission is greatly in need of funds. Communications should be made to Dr. F. A. Pring, The Medical Mission, High-street, Deptford, S.E.

THE MISSIONARY BUREAU.

The Secretary reports in Missionary Bureau Notes for January, that he has had 460 applications from persons desiring to be sent out as missionaries. Of these seventy-eight have been accepted, and are now working in connection with various imssionary agencies in China, Japan, Africa, Kashmir, the West Indies, Mexico, South America, France, and Italy. Seven others are on their way out. Additional parties are being arranged for, and will be sent forth as soon as funds permit.

The income of the Bureau for the year just ended has amounted to over £1370. During the past few days appeals have reached the Bureau from seven separate Mission centres in South America, asking for help and fresh workers; also from three stations in India; and a godly young man, a printer, is wanted immediately for Singapore. At a meeting of the Committee a few days ago, applications were considered from eight young men, desirous of being sent out at once to openings that await them. The "Passage and Outfit Fund" exists for the express purpose of meeting incidental expenses. Communications should be addressed, The Missionary Bureau, St. Martin's House, 1, Gresham-street, E.C.

OBITUARY.

JOSEPH MILNE MATHESON.

A recent New Zealand mail brings news of the death of Mr. Joseph Milne Matheson, youngest child of the late Duncan Matheson. He was twenty-four years of age, and his trust was in the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

BISHOP PHILPOTT.

Dr. Henry Philpott, for nearly thirty years Bishop of Worcester, died on Sunday last, aged 84. A native of Chichester, he graduated in 1829 at Cambridge, coming out as Senior Wrangler, with various distinctions. In 1845 he was appointed Master of his College (St. Catharine's), and was Vice-Chancellor of the University at the time of the election of the Prince Consort to the Chancellorship in 1846. As a bishop he was remarkably industrious. He lived almost entirely among his people, and was ever accessible to the clergy of the diocese. He took no part in Convocation, Church Congresses, or such like gatherings. He was a staunch Evangelical, of sympathies so broad that he occasionally spoke at the Mildmay Conference. His episcopal charges were practical, and showed his dislike of Ritualistic and other modern movements. He resigned his bishopric in 1890, owing to advancing years.

THE EARL OF LICHFIELD.

Many will have heard with deep regret of the death last week of the Earl of Lichfield, who fell asleep, aged sixty-seven, on Thursday morning at his London residence, Portman-square. A fortnight ago his lordship was seized with paralysis, from which it was hoped he would recover, but otherwise has been the mind of the Lord. Those who heard him a year or two ago in a City churchyard, preaching the Gospel in vigorous tones, and with clear and forceful statement, will remember how thoroughly he seemed to hold and sway the City men who thronged to hear him.

In early life the Earl, then Lord Anson, was a member of the House of Commons, and served at the Foreign Office, but in recent years he has given his strength and influence to evangelistic effort, Protestant defence, and the maintenance of sound doctrine against the advance of rationalism within the churches.

In the neighbourhood of his Staffordshire estates he actively promoted Gospel effort, and around Shugborough he will long be remembered as a true and sympathetic friend of the poor and of every good work.

Scripture Readers' Society of Ireland.

It may not be inopportune at this time to state what I have been able to observe of the operations of the Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland during the past year. The object of the Society is to send through the country men of the humbler ranks of life, but with a love for the spiritual welfare of the masses which they meet, and who are willing to go from house to house in order that they may read the Bible to the people, and engage in prayer with them wherever their services are welcome.

They avoid all that is controversial or pugnacious. The Society places each Scripture Reader under the direction of the rector of the parish in which he works, and the results appear to be very satisfactory. I believe that, as a means for the dissemination of the word of God, it is one of the most effectual of the associations in this country, and well worthy of support. The General Secretary, Captain Kearney White, directs his best energies to the promotion of the objects of the Society, and he appears to have done so with the greatest success.—Yours faithfully,

J. Townsend Trench.

LEGHORN BETHEL.—Our gathering of British seamen was this year a very large one. Owing to illness, it had to be postponed from Christmas night to January 1. The proceedings included a substantial tea. Presents, such as mufflers, gloves, purses, &c., were distributed. There were sixty-one seamen present, and twenty-five friends from shore. The supply of reading matter for the seamen's bags is now running short, and periodicals such as The Christian, Good Words, &c., also "Horner's Penny Stories" will be welcome. They should be sent to Mrs. Collie, 5, Via delle Grazie, Livorno, Italy.

VISITORS TO PARIS.—We are struggling hard to help our mission and make our principal hall self-supporting, by means of a restaurant connected with it. Surely many of your readers who may purpose visiting Paris will be glad to hear of neat, quiet bedrooms from 8s. to 12s. per week, with excellent living at low prices. All this may be had at 20, Rue Clairaut-Batignolles. If the place were only well known it would always be full. God's blessing rests richly upon this Clairaut Hall, in which so many souls have been turned from darkness to light. I will gladly answer any inquiries.—Yours truly,

Helen W. Gibson.

St. Cloud, Paris.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Peter's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which of course, are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, JAN. 17.—GALATIANS V.

Exhortations to Steadfastness (1-15).—The liberty which Jesus gives is not license to do as we will, but deliverance from a yoke of ceremonial obedience, as represented to the Jews in the initial rite of circumcision, which these false teachers were so eager to re-impose on their converts. Christ's yoke is easy, and rest-giving, but to do anything with the view of winning salvation is to take a yoke which galls the neck of those who carry it. 2. It is so impossible to combine opposites, that the least attempt to secure justification by our works is an utter rejection of Christ's free gift. 4. "Ye are severed from Christ" (R.V.). The soul must learn to rely wholly on the work of Christ, that it may be delivered from the guilt and power of sin, altogether apart from its own deeds. 6. Faith and love are inseparable; trust in God, and you will love men. 9. The persuasion which had led them to circumcision was not from God, whose voice had called them to faith. 11. This was to answer a slander that Paul himself had begun to preach legalism, which of course was not the case, as he was still being persecuted. 13. Love is even more stringent in its demands than law, and yields disinterested service. 14. Love to God leads us to fulfil the decalogue.

Walk in the Spirit (16-26).—This is the only secret of deliverance from the power of the flesh. 17. The present tense indicates that the self-life is present in the believer ever fretting for the supremacy, but side by side we may be always conscious of the grace of the Holy Ghost restraining and delivering, so that the self-life becomes as though it were not. "Ye may not do the things that ye would" (R.V.). 19. "Works"; contrast this with the fruit of the Spirit. 20. Witchcraft, i.e., spiritualism. 22. If we are filled with the Holy Spirit, his work in us is to produce these blessed results, naturally, without effort. 23. Temperance, i.e., self-control. 24. How much is meant by being "Christ's"? His by many bonds. Our crucifixion with Him took place on the cross, and was appropriated at the moment of our consecration. Affections, i.e, passions (R.V.). 25. Walk in the Spirit, live in the Spirit, be led by the Spirit. This is the supreme need of Christian living.

MONDAY, JAN. 18.—GALATIANS VI.

Burden Bearing (1-10).—"Overtaken," that is, by sudden temptation. To the most spiritual men in the Church must be entrusted the work of restoring backsliders. It is those who have fallen themselves and know what temptation is that are most able to restore others. From every man's fall turn to yourself. 2. Christ also has a law, that of service (John xiii. 34). 3. Better think yourself nothing when you are something, than something when you are nothing. 4. Test your work in the light of God's judgment, and you will have less to be proud of, and be more thoughtful of others. 5. There are some burdens which no human friend can bear for us. We must each live out our own life. Cast them upon God. 6. Christian people must support their teachers (1 Cor. ix. 10). 7. We may try to evade the inevitable result of sin, but God will see that we reap what we sow. 8. Every time we yield to the flesh we sow a seed of disappointment and misery, every time we yield to the Spirit we prepare for ourselves a little more blessedness. 10. We shall be judged according to the amount of our opportunities.

Glorying in the Cross (11-18).—"How large letters" (R.V.). This indicates that probably he suffered from ophthalmia, and wrote in clumsy characters. If he did not write all the epistle, these closing verses were penned by him. 12. The fear of persecution was constantly adduced to drive these converts to be circumcised, that their teachers might be able to boast of their successful proselytism. 14. What a contrast between their glory and his, who was proud only of his identification with the death of Christ, in whose life the cross only stood as a barrier between himself and the life he had once lived. 15. Compare chap. v. 6. 16. The rule of the new creation and of love binds men in a holy unity, and over these mercy and peace brood. They are God's Israel. 17. "I bear branded on my body the marks of Jesus" (R.V.). The handmarks of his blessed slavery.

THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

This was probably a circular letter to churches in Asia Minor, throughout which the Apostle was well-known, in consequence of his long stay in Ephesus (Acts xix., xx.) In was written with the following Epistles from Rome, where he was at that time a prisoner. It was carried by Tychicus, who also bore that to the Colossians.

TUESDAY, JAN. 19.—EPHESIANS I.

Salvation and Introduction (1-6).—1. All believers ought to be saints—that is, fully consecrated. The grace that helps and the peace that soothes are for such. 3. We bless Him who has blessed us. Our Father, because his "heavenly places" or "heavenlies," is a phrase characteristic of this Epistle, occurring five times. The blessing dates from eternity, the appropriation is in time by faith. 4. God chose Christ, and all who should believe in Him; but his choice always points towards holiness, rather than to privilege. 6. This is the Epistle of inness. "In Christ," in the purpose of God, and in our daily experience. Whatever be the variation in our feelings, our standing is always the same.

God's Eternal Purpose (7-14).—2. We are redeemed, let us claim it. 8. God's grace always works through his wisdom. 9. "Mystery" means a hidden thing to men generally; but unfolded to those who love God. 10. Infinite power need not make haste; it can await the "fulness of time," when all things are to be summed up in Christ (R.V.). This is the unity of creation, which shall attune its discords. 11. "We were made a heritage" (R.V.). That is, that God should live in us, deriving revenues from us, as from an estate. 13. The feeling of the Spirit apparently follows faith and conversion. "After that ye believed, ye were healed." He stamps us with the image of Christ, and thus assures us of our ultimate safety. 14. In the work of the Spirit, we have an earnest of that great future which is to be ours, when our body, which is Christ's purchased property, shall share in the general redemption.

The Apostles' Prayer (15-23).—16. Thanks should always mingle with prayer, and prayer should be largely intercessory. 18. "The eyes of your heart" (R.V.). We see spiritual things with spiritual senses. 18. A threefold prayer. What we shall be; what we may be; the power that is within our reach. 19. "The working of the strength of his might" (R.V.). 20. Gauge the power exerted in raising Christ from the dead, and you will know how much God will do for you and all his Church, in the daily resurrection of the soul from the grave of selfishness and sin. 21. "Principalities and power" are used in Eph. vi. 12 of wicked spirits. If Christ is above them, we are also, though we be but as part of his feet. 23. The Church is the Holy Catholic Church, which is the complement of Christ the Head, through which He fulfils his purposes.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 20.—EPHESIANS II.

Together with Christ (1-10).—1. Dead and yet walking. The unregenerate have all the motions of natural and moral, but are destitute of spiritual life. 2. The world and the devil are identical. The votaries of the world are the subjects of its prince; compare Phil. ii. 13. As God works in the Saints, his great antagonist works in the disobedient. 3. The desires of the mind are equally harmful as those of the flesh. We must watch against each. 5. This epistle is full of references to God's wealth (chap. i. 7, iii. 8). If He has loved us with a great love, is not that love over us still, individualising and tender? 6. Quickened, raised, made to sit—all these past tenses indicate something which was finished long ago in the purpose of God and the work of Christ, but are awaiting our realisation by the Holy Ghost. 7. Redeemed men are to be objects of eternal interest, and specimens of God's mercy. 8. Grace is the fountain, faith the channel. The faith itself is God's gift. 10. God's plan, prepared from eternity, is wrought out through prepared hearts, created for that purpose. Ask Him to show you the good works prepared for you.

Gentile Christians (11-22).—Their uncircumcision was a great barrier between them and the Jews, who boasted in that rite as the great mark of their being God's peculiar people. But in Christ this middle wall of partition was broken down, and He had made peace between the two. 16. Each reconciled to the other, and both to God. Our Lord not only made peace, but He has proclaimed peace. 18. Note the mention of the Trinity. 19. The city, the home, the building, are successive figures of the union of the saints and Christ, and the climax of all is the Temple illumined by the light of God, and indwelt by his Spirit. Apostles and Prophets (or preachers) have laid the foundations by their teaching, and themselves lie in the first courses of stories.

THURSDAY, JAN. 21.—EPHESIANS III.

The Mystery of Christ (1-13).—This beginning is interrupted by a long parenthesis, extending to verse 14. 2. "Dispensation," i.e., stewardship (R.V. marg.). 3. How much there is in the dealings of God with men which can only be understood through direct revelation. 5. Note the stress laid on the holy Apostles, and how the prophets (i.e., the preachers) of the early church are classed with them. We hardly realise how great a revolution it was that Gentiles should be admitted into the church without first becoming Jews. 7. Nothing less than the putting forth of omnipotence can change a headstrong rebel into an earnest proclaimer of the Gospel. 8. If the least of saints knew so much, how much there must be in Christ for the more advanced. Oh! the unexplored wealth of Jesus! 10. "Manifold," i.e., many-coloured. As a prism breaks up a beam of light on its many angles, so does the Church reveal the wisdom of God, breaking it up into many hues and colours. Each believer sets forth some new thought of God's wisdom. 12. Boldness, access, confidence, these are the notes of true religion.

Golden Links of Petition (14-21).—Note his attitude in prayer, though probably he knelt on a stone floor or earth; also the object of his prayer. 15. "Every family in heaven and on earth" (R.V.), as if each were a parable and type of eternal facts. 16. Let all your prayers be on the scale of God's magnificence. The order is very significant. Strength to do and suffer; the indwelling of Jesus through faith, as window for the light; the consequent sweetness and gentleness of our temper; the knowledge which comes from sympathy and likeness; the full life, filled with God, and to the measure in which God is full. 20. The power that works for us is in proportion to that which works within us, only the latter moves in the ratio of millions to one, of oceans to drops. 21. Glory in the Church and in Christ Jesus; as if the bride and bridegroom together break forth into song.

FRIDAY, JAN. 22.—EPHESIANS IV.

The Unity of Believers (1-6).—"Prisoner in the Lord" (R.V.). The Lord was nearer to him than the walls of his prison. 2. Our life is worthiest of God when it is most loving to man. 3. The unity is made, let us give diligence to keep it. 4. The seven twisted cords of Christian unity. 6. Above all, as ruler; through all, as the living principle in events and people and things; in all, as the Divine tenant of the life.

The Gifts of the Ascended Lord (7-16).—No one in the Church is utterly destitute of gift. 8. The ascent of the Ark to Mount Zion was typical of the Ascension of Christ. It was the custom of the Cæsars on the days of their triumph to distribute slips of paper, on which were written the gifts which each recipient might lay claim to. 9. There is no ascension possible which is not preceded by descent. We must sink to rise, die to live. 10. The very heavens are below Him, and from his zenith throne He pours floods of golden glory on the nooks and crannies and hidden places of his church. 12. "For the perfecting (adjusting or setting in joint) of saints unto the work of ministering"; as if, when the saints are in their right place, the Lord will work through them on the world. 13. All the saints together only make up one mature man, of whom Jesus is Head. What part in that mystical body dost thou fill? 14. Sleight—i.e., dice-playing. 15. Speak the truth by all means, but always in love. 16. "Through every joint of supply" (R.V.). If one joint fails to do its work the whole fabric suffers.

Sundry Exhortations (17-32).—18. Alienation from God's life involves the forfeiture of God's light. 21. Pupils in the school of the Divine Master learning how to live. 22. "The old man" is probably a term for the habits of the old life in contra-distinction to those of the new. 26. There is a righteous anger, concerned more for the cause of right than of self, and therefore sinless (Mark iii. 5). 27. Do not make room for the devil. 29. "Good for edifying, as the need may be" (R.V.). 30. Then He must be a Person. 32. God's forgiveness of us in Christ must be our daily model.

SATURDAY, JAN. 23.—EPHESIANS V.

Imitators of God (1-7).—This is the R.V. for followers. 2. Each time we manifest Christ's love we are as a sweet-smelling savour to God. 3. Note how covetousness is classed with uncleanness. 4. "Not befitting" (R.V.). 5. Here, again, covetousness is spoken of as idolatry. 6. We must beware of any attempt to palliate such sins.

Children of Light (8-20).—9. "The fruit of light is," &c. (R.V.). 10. We may soon discover what pleases God by the blessed rest which obedience infuses through our heart. 14. "Whatever is made manifest is light"—i.e., all that freely exposes itself to light and is willing to take the rebuke of light is on the way to become light. 16. "Buying up the opportunity"—i.e., making the most of each chance of doing good. 18. It is as much our duty to be filled with the Spirit as to avoid intoxication. Let us seek that exhilaration of spirit that communion with God alone can give. 19. The holy heart is the glad heart. There may be harmony within, when the voice is discordant and harsh. 20. Careful for nothing, and thankful for all.

The Family Life (21-33).—Recognise that earthly relationships are parables and types of eternal facts. 24. There is no limit but that imposed by conscience. 25. But where the wife gives obedience as to Christ, the husband must give love as from Him. 27. The Word of God has a marvellously cleansing effect on the soul. 30. What a tender thought is suggested here of the Lord's care for each of his members. Nourished and cherished by Him! 31. And surely such references as these justify the rapturous expressions of Solomon's Song.

THE SILVER STAR SOCIETY has been formed to assist all Christian effort. The hon. sec., Walter S. Robbins (23, Carlton-road, Manor-park, Essex), writes:—"We have worked steadily during the past nine months, and supplied evangelists to nearly sixty meetings. We have given nearly fifty lantern lectures on Bible and Temperance subjects, with a total attendance of over eight thousand children and adults. Gospel and Temperance literature, as well as funds, are required for the extension of our work. We are prepared to send speakers, free of charge, to any mission in London or the suburbs."

International S. S. Lessons.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 24.

Hezekiah's Prayer and Deliverance.—Isa. xxxvii. 14-21, 33-38.

Golden Text: Psa. xxxiv. 17.

Before the conquering power of the Assyrians, the kingdom of the Ten Tribes of Israel had already fallen (2 Kings xvii.). Ahaz, one of the worst kings of Judah, was succeeded by Hezekiah, one of the best, whose faith in God made him strong enough and bold enough to rebel against the Assyrians (2 Kings xviii. 3-7). Yet, when Sennacherib, the King of Assyria, marched into Judah and successfully attacked her fenced cities, the courage of Hezekiah failed him, and he sought to obtain peace by a great price (2 Kings xviii. 13-16). But though Sennacherib accepted the tribute, as the Assyrian inscriptions testify, he renewed the siege of Jerusalem, probably because he feared that Judah would seek an alliance with Egypt, and again rebel against him.

The renewal of the siege, though a cause of distress to Hezekiah, was an incalculable blessing. It threw him back upon God alone, whose miraculous deliverance was the more valuable after Hezekiah's own policy had failed. The victory that overcometh is not faith helped by human policy, but faith alone, which leaves God opportunity to work.

Hezekiah's Distress (14).—To understand how great this was, the whole story must be kept in mind. Rabshakeh was probably the chief leader of the Assyrian army. His words (xxxvi.) were cruel. They were full of scorn. Not once did he speak of Hezekiah as king. His reference to trust in Egypt showed how intimately he knew Judah's affairs. In the Jewish tongue he made his appeal to the people themselves, and sought to seduce them from their allegiance to Hezekiah. The narration of Assyria's victories gave greater point to his appeals and threatenings. What reply could Hezekiah make to such a taunting message? To Rabshakeh he said nothing, but made his appeal to God through his servant Isaiah (xxxvi. 21; xxxvii. 1-7).

Rabshakeh's letter (10-13) is worse than his speech. It breathes the same spirit of boastfulness and pride, and is even more blasphemous. To the people he had said, "Let not Hezekiah deceive you" (xxxvi. 14), to the king he writes, "Let not thy God deceive thee" (10). Hezekiah has good reason for distress. His position as king is threatened, his city is in danger, and, worst of all, his God is reproached.

Hezekiah's Prayer (14-20).—It is a model prayer for those in distress. Why go to the house of the Lord? See 2 Chron. vii. 13-16. There is no special place of prayer now (Jno. iv. 21-23); but as God then covenanted to meet with his people in the temple, so now He meets with us in Jesus. There is no true access to Him where the mediation of Christ is ignored (Jno. xiv. 6; Eph. ii. 14). Every title by which he addresses God is calculated to strengthen his faith. (16) Against the hosts of Assyria he puts the "Lord of Hosts." Against Israel's enemies he appeals to Israel's God. "Between the Cherubim" refers to the most holy place, where the Shekinah dwelt, and from which He wrought wonders for his people. All God's names rightly understood are revelations of Himself. To know his name is to have reason for unwavering confidence (Psa. ix. 10). To reproach the living God (17). This makes the quarrel to be God's, not merely Hezekiah's (compare Josh. vii. 7-9). Of a truth, &c. (see Acts iv. 27-30). The full confession of the strength of the enemy and of our own weakness is necessary to true prayer. Now, therefore (20). The argument is a double one. It looks back to the fact that all other gods are worthless, and it looks on to the glory of God which will result from the deliverance Hezekiah seeks.

The Deliverance.—The message of God through Isaiah turns upon the Assyrian king all the scorn which he has hurled at Jerusalem (21-23). His boasted triumphs, also, are all due to the God whom he has blasphemed (26, 27). Conqueror though he deems himself to be, he is but a rod in the hands of God with which to chastise the nations and then to be thrown as de.

1. The Deliverance Promised (33-35).—The most powerful enemy is under God's control, and He makes him to accomplish his will (Prov. xxi. 1). How it will be effected does not appear; but his promise makes it sure. By this message He makes a further demand upon Hezekiah's faith.

2. The Promise Fulfilled (36-38).—It is vain to conjecture by what means the destruction of Sennacherib's host was effected. One angel, in one night, laid 185,000 low! God has no lack of instruments for doing his work. Woe to Sennacherib and to all others who strive against Him. To return without shooting an arrow (33) against the city which he had treated with such scorn was a bitter humiliation. It is not wonderful that the Assyrian inscriptions, which in so many other particulars confirm the Bible story, should suppress their own defeat. The assassination of Sennacherib took place something like twenty years after his defeat. It is mentioned here to make the story of his humiliation complete.

ST. PETERSBURG.—The British and Foreign Sailors' Society, Shadwell, E., is extending its work to Russia by opening a new seamen's institute in the port of St. Petersburg.

Evangelistic Notes.

Binbrook.—Special evangelistic services have been conducted here by Mr. Lot Ward, and much spiritual good has resulted.

Mr. William Day hopes to commence, on the 17th inst., a month's special services at Salisbury. He would be glad to be remembered in prayer.

Eastbourne.—At last, after suppression for some time, open-air services were on Sunday permitted at Eastbourne, the order forbidding such being withdrawn.

Leatherhead.—Mr. Parker is at present superintending the village work in and around Leatherhead. During the past nine weeks there have been many tokens of blessing.

Ireland.—During the past week successful evangelistic meetings were held in Crumlin, co. Antrim, by Mr. James Dickson, soldier evangelist; and in Knock Methodist Church, co. Down, by Rev. W. J. Christie, Glenady.

Mr. W. T. Main has been conducting meetings in the village of Twyford, near Winchester. In other villages of the district special testimony has also been delivered, with results full of encouragement to the workers engaged.

Beckenham Y.M.C.A.—The committee of Beckenham Y.M.C.A. reports that the Sunday Evangelistic meetings have been well attended, and much spiritual good has accrued. Open-air services have been held with spiritual results.

Mr. Joseph Clarke, well-known at Mr. Charrington's Assembly Hall, has been doing a good work in Leicester for the past eighteen months, in connection with the Workmen's Hall Mission. The meetings have been crowded every Sunday night during the winter months, and many souls have professed to have been saved.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith have conducted a most successful mission at the Baptist Chapel at Ashford, Kent. Large congregations have attended the meetings, and their labours have been fruitful in conversions. Some blessed times were spent, the "hours with the Bible" being specially acceptable to those who received spiritual benefit. The singing of Mr. Smith was also greatly appreciated, and helped materially to brighten the meetings.

Odiham, Hampshire.—A week of evangelistic effort has just concluded in this village. The speaker was one who had formerly lived a life for self and the world for several years in the place, and so could forcibly illustrate the practical meaning of "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation." The attendances were very good, and evidence was forthcoming that the simple Gospel of Jesus Christ is the same power of God unto salvation as ever it was. The Bible readings in the afternoon were a time of much refreshing to Christians.—B.

Fruit to Abiding.—Rev. Morley Wright, writing as to the permanence of results from special services, recalls a mission held some two years ago by Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes, and adds: "Only one of those who were led to avowal of their faith in our Lord has disappointed our hopes, and the results have been exceedingly beneficial, without any qualification, to our church and mission work." "I am quite sure," concludes Mr. Wright, "that we, as ministers of the churches, can help one another and our work very considerably by engaging more frequently in such evangelistic efforts, and by calling in the aid of our brethren who have devoted their lives to this form of service amongst us."

CHRISTIAN HELP FOR CHRISTIAN JEWS.—Rev. J. B. Barraclough, 11, King Edward-road, Hackney, N.E., is the hon. director of an agency for promoting the spiritual and temporal welfare of Hebrew Christians, in so many cases cast off by their Jewish brethren, and distrusted by Gentile Christians. It will endeavour to do so in friendly co-operation with the various Jewish Missions. Mr. Barraclough appeals for offers of employment for men, young women, or boys; also money, clothing, hospital letters, and books or tracts calculated to promote the spiritual life. He would be thankful for the privilege of being allowed to address drawing-room or other meetings on the subject of his work for God and Israel.

LAMB AND FLAG RAGGED SCHOOLS AND MISSION.—The forty-fifth annual report shows that this work is still carried on by a zealous band of teachers. The two missionaries continue constant and faithful in the visitation of the twelve hundred men engaged in workshops, factories, and railway sheds in the neighbourhood. A great improvement has taken place in the character and habits of the Meat-market men, many of whose lives are changed. During the year large open-air meetings have been held on Clerkenwell-green, and Gospel addresses given to hundreds of persons who go to no place of worship. The philanthropic work has included 7484 dinners, at one halfpenny each, to poor children; the provision of clothes for the neglected, and the sending of fifty-four sickly ones into the country for a two or three weeks' change. The address of Mr. J. C. Sherrard, the responsible manager, is 7, Oxford-square Hyde-park, W.

Personalia.

Right Rev. Dr. Knox, Primate of all Ireland, is lying seriously ill at the Palace, Armagh.

The Bishop of Exeter has realised the hopes we lately expressed by declining the proposed presentation of a mitre.

Rev. Peter Thompson is, we regret to hear, suffering from overwork, and has been ordered by his doctor complete rest and change.

Rev. Handley C. G. Moule's attack of influenza has left him so weak that he has been unable this week to speak, as promised, at the Islington Clerical Meeting.

Mr. James B. Wookey is visiting most of the towns in the North of Ireland during the present month, preaching and lecturing on behalf of Dr. Barnardo's Homes.

Rev. E. A. Stuart has, many will regret to learn, met with an injury, through burning, to his face and eyes. He is confined to bed, but, it is hoped, will shortly recover.

Principal Oswald Dykes, D.D., occupied his old pulpit at Regent-square on Sunday week, and preached eloquently and helpfully from John xix. 18, "Jesus in the midst."

Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, in his letter read at the Tabernacle on Sunday, says, "I hope and believe that the steady and solid progress which had begun is continued, and will continue."

Rev. Dr. Antliff, President of the Primitive Methodist Conference, has, since his return from America, had a somewhat serious relapse. He is, at latest accounts, recovering strength.

Mr. C. T. Lipshytz, superintendent of the Barbican Mission to the Jews, left London on Saturday last for a month's tour in France and Germany. He will preach the Gospel to Jews, and address believers in several centres. The work in London will be carried on by the usual staff of helpers, under the direction of Mrs. Lipshytz.

Mr. W. R. Lane is, we regret to say, again laid aside, through an attack of influenza and congestion of the lungs. A correspondent writes: "Considering his weak condition, owing to his last illness, this is very serious, and we pray that the life of this useful evangelist may yet be saved to the Church of God."

Mrs. Josephine E. Butler is very seriously ill, and will not for some time be able to deal with any correspondence in connection with the British, Continental, and General Federation for the Abolition of State Regulation of Vice. At Mrs. Butler's suggestion, any inquiries affecting The Dawn should be sent to Mr. Frederick Burfoot, 55, Ellerdale-street, Lewisham, S.E.

Rev. Arthur N. Johnson, M.A., of Bond-street Congregational Church, Leicester, who has just accepted the home secretaryship of the London Missionary Society, is a son of Rev. G. B. Johnson, of Torquay. He is thirty-six years of age, and has graduated at Cambridge, Victoria, and London Universities. He was, for a time, assistant pastor with the late Dr. Macfadyen at Manchester, and has been at Leicester since 1883.

"Lost Coin of the Realm."

The fourth year's work among wayfarers and unemployed, at the "Travellers' Rest," Worthing, is narrated in a neat booklet just published, bearing the above title. The great event of the year has been the erection of the new building, with its increased and superior accommodation in the way of beds, private cabins, &c., for sixty persons in all. The sum at present needed to remove the debt and complete the furnishing is between three and four hundred pounds, to clear off which an appeal is made.

The Hon. Secretary, Mrs. L. D. Fooks (Rutherford Lodge, Worthing), who has been laid aside for the past three months owing to a complete breakdown from overwork, says, "The spiritual blessing of these men has always been our first aim; this leads to constant personal dealing with them; and we gratefully record the fact that God does give the increase to patient sowing and watering of the living seed." She answered, "There are a few now who, since the new building was opened, are, we believe, truly changed." One of these writes as follows: "O, how I do thank God day by day for directing my steps to Worthing, and for making you, dear madam, the instrument of opening my eyes to the miserable, shameless, degraded life I was living. Can I ever do or say enough for Him?" Another "became visibly moved during the singing of the hymn, 'Christ receiveth sinful men'; he asked for prayer, then told his story, first to God, then to us. The hymn had found him out, and broken his heart." And concerning yet another we read: "His was a hard case, as hard as sin and despair could make him; but after an hour and a-half pleading he broke down, prayed, confessed, and rose from his knees, oh! such a changed man, weeping tears of gratitude."

A SERIOUS FACT.—It has just been stated that out of a population of 23,500, only 7950 persons in Folkestone regularly attend places of worship on the Sabbath. Of these it is estimated that 4250 attend the Church of England, and the other 3700 the Nonconformist churches.

Letters to the Editor.

THE "DECLARATION ON THE TRUTH OF HOLY SCRIPTURE."

DEAR SIR,—A few words of explanation from one of the signatories may perhaps remove some of the misconceptions which have arisen in regard to the 'Declaration on the Truth of Holy Scripture.' Its origin is not known to the public, hence its purport and scope have been to many obscure. My own connection with it may explain much of its intention. As Chairman of the London Clerical and Lay Union, I, with Rev. J. W. Marshall, Secretary of the Central Union, was requested to enter into communication with Archdeacon Denison in consequence of a quasi-public letter, which he had written to one of our members, with regard to certain publications which he feared were greatly disturbing men's minds on the solemn question of Inspiration. We had a long interview with the Archdeacon, and many schemes were proposed for meeting the present distress. None of these led to any great practical results, though they produced a valuable correspondence with certain prominent members of our Church whose opinions are of the greatest weight, and who may yet give expression to those opinions in a more permanent form. But about six weeks ago Mr. Marshall and I (as the media of communication on behalf of the Clerical and Lay Union) received from Archdeacon Denison the now-published Declaration, requesting our names (among a very small number of signatures), as an expression of that unity which, at least on this point, different parties in the Church could display, who feel the importance of affirming the integrity and the inspiration of "the Scriptures."

There are many phrases in the Declaration which, from our standpoint in the Church, we would gladly have altered; but to insist on this did not seem gracious or right, so long as we could accept it in its general bearings. The one section most liable to be misunderstood was paragraph x. Upon that I wrote to one whom I believed to have framed it, quoting Bishop H. Browne on the Articles, pp. 159, 160, and saying that we could never for one moment assent to the idea that the Church established either the authority or the inspiration of the Bible, but that the Church was simply responsible for settling the canon of the New Testament. To this letter I received the following reply:—"I am extremely glad to confirm your view of the intention of paragraph x. We were very careful to appeal to the testimony not the authority of the Church. As good Bishop H. Browne said in his remarks on Art. vi., and as you say, 'it is the canon of which we are speaking, and which we receive on the external testimony of the Church and the authority of God Himself.'"

Without hesitation, therefore, I affirm that paragraph x. is not intended to set the authority of the Church above that of God's Word in any possible way, but only to state that on the testimony of the Church we accept those books which are now entitled canonical. This, moreover, I need hardly say refers only to the books of the New Testament Scriptures. The Old Testament we accept in its present form as "The Scriptures" on the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ. He accept them in their integrity as the inspired Word of God. We accept his imprimatur without reservation or doubt. For the inspiration and authority of the New Testament we look to the promised "Spirit of Truth," and simply record it as an historical fact, that the canonical books were at some time in her history decided by "the Church," using that term in the sense in which it is found in our thirty-nine articles, to which I still dare to offer my most cordial subscription.—I am, sir, yours, &c.,

H. W. WEBB-PEPLOE,
Vicar of St. Paul's, Onslow-square.
25, Onslow-gardens, S.W., Jan. 9, 1892.

DEAR SIR,—The question raised in the "Declaration on the Truth of Holy Scripture," published in The Times of the 18th ult., furnishes an illustration of the great conflict going on between "the rulers of the darkness of this world" and the King of kings, upon whose shoulders "the key of government is laid." It is nothing short of an attempt to deprive Him of his crown. St. Peter writes dead against this attempt, when he says that the whole plan of our redemption was not founded on what this document calls "traditionary testimony," or "antiquity of an undivided church," to bring us under bondage to her synods—but "foreordained before the foundation of the world—to bring us to God"—even to Him "to whom angels and authorities and powers are made subject."

The fact and form of the Divine revelation all along the ages supports our inalienable right to go directly to Him "to whom God gave glory." Therefore, "our faith and hope is in God, because (1) the research of science itself declares the fact that man is a recent creation upon this earth. Because (2), though he has in himself evidences of power of perpetual self-renewal, having been made to live for ever, the visible fact is seen that "death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Because (3) the separate existence of the Jews as a nation for centuries in the Holy Land is a fact incontrovertible in history. Because (4) the written covenant made with the Jewish people and the land was reduced to a fact in visible prosperity or desolation. Because (5) on account of sin against the covenant—not the least part of which was their claim that "the vineyard should be theirs"—the Jewish people for eighteen centuries are visibly scattered, and the land is visibly desolate. Because (6) the challenge is given in the written record that the Jewish people shall be visibly gathered, owned of God, and reinstated. And lastly, (7) because (not now to speak of the rise of the masculine world-power, "the Man of Sin,") the rise of the feminine power, "the Great Whore," whose doom is likewise visibly portrayed, is declared in that written record—namely, the utter destruction of that lying faction, which, according to her own claim, on her own authority, has out-Heroded the Jews by saying that she creates God and eats Him!

It is the effect of "iniquity abounding," that these seven proofs of the authority of "Scripture given by inspiration of God," is challenged; for, if faithful to the Word of his patience, we too are witnesses of its truth—not in assumption of authority, but in the way of obedience, and should ask ourselves, with one apostle: "What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" and answer with another: "the epistle of Christ, written not with ink," yet "known and read of all men."

THE SUBMERGED MASSES.

DEAR SIR,—The thanks of all earnest persons are due to you for the increasing prominence given to the practical efforts of Christians for the helping of the poor—notably, Barnardo's Homes, Charrington's and Geo. Holland's work, the Medland Hall Shelter, Miss Macpherson's and similiar efforts. If all professing Christians would give, without further solicitation, a definite proportion of their net income as well as their prayers for others to do their duty, the roots of the mischief among the submerged masses might be reached and dealt with. I see THE CHRISTIAN every week, and rejoice sincerely in your calls to the imitation of our Lord and Master, who went about doing good.—Yours faithfully, WM. C. COLLINS.

MODERN SACRIFICE.

PART I.

FROM dawn of the morning till far through the night
She toils for her children's bread,
And still, like a dirge of unending despair,
Is the rasp of her needle and thread,
Unceasingly singing, "'Tis labour in vain,"
Till she answers, "I wish I were dead!"

"Some lady," she murmurs, "this garment may wear,
Where the splendour of palaces gleams,
She may cover it over with jewels and gold,
And never think, even in dreams,
Of the pittance wrung out to the woman who stitched
Every thread of her life in its seams."

There are temples as lofty as Babel's old towers,
Reared to Mammon, the millionaire's god.
Manufacturer, merchant, or middleman—who
Are the priests in the demon's abode,
His coffers to fill with the workwoman's pay,
And his altars to drench with her blood.

PART II.

"Yes," she murmurs, "'tis hard, sewing on, sewing
Till the fingers are frayed to the bone, [on,
While employers grow rich and the worker grows poor,
And her heart grows, like theirs, into stone;
But I've turned from my wrongs unto God, and He Every string of my heart to his own. [tunes

"With no beautiful home but our dim, narrow room,
Love makes it a dear little nest;
No dainties to pile on our scant-plenished board,
Yet 'tis spread with what God deems the best;
No glorious rambles by mountain or sea,
Yet we're thankful and healthy and blest.

"For God is our Father, He makes us his heirs;
And his wealth, from unlimited space,
He would shower, if for good, on his struggling poor—
But so few for earth's riches have grace:
So He gives us his love, the great treasure of Heaven,
To make home in earth's dreariest place."

"LEAVING ALL."—The following interesting facts are noted as to a convert, lately baptized near Calcutta. The young man holds a considerable amount of landed property in common with his father's two brothers, and there can scarcely be any doubt that he has lost his share in this for good. Moreover, he possessed Rs. 35,000 left by his father. Of this sum, Rs. 13,000 is in cash in his uncle's house, and the rest out on loan, the documents being in the possession of a creature of the uncle's. An old Bengali Christian told him that he should have got all his property into his possession before he came to be baptized, but he reminded the old man that Jesus had told his followers to leave all for his sake.

The Book World.

THE EVERLASTING NATION. This monthly magazine, edited by Rev. A. A. Isaacs, M.A., Vicar of Christ Church, Leicester, has completed its third year. The new volume is a body of interesting and valuable information in regard to the Jews in history and prophecy. The contents are so varied that they cannot but absorb the attention of all Bible students, for alongside Scripture interpretation we have chapters on Jewish biography, and records of discoveries in the East are alternated with glimpses of Hebrew life and thought in ancient and modern times. At the present time, when the Chosen People occupy so prominent a position in the world, on the one hand living in luxury, and on the other weeping from oppression and persecution, these pages should find many thoughtful readers. We have read some of the articles with much pleasure and profit. (4s. 3d. post free; the three vols. for 10s. 6d. post free, from Mr. A. J. Lev, 7, Herbert-street, Haverstock-hill, N.W.)

CHRISTENDOM FROM THE STANDPOINT OF ITALY is the very appropriate title of the volume containing the proceedings of the ninth General Conference of the Evangelical Alliance, held at Florence in April last. The pages have a special import and value, some of the papers read being historical, others doctrinal, and a third class practical. Men of weight from many lands contributed of their learning and experience by way of exposing the evils of our time, and showing the duty of the Christian Church in regard to aggressive work. All kinds of agencies were reviewed, and the importance of united effort was enforced by Scriptural argument and on more general grounds. Various European countries and the churches of Great Britain and America were influentially represented, and no fewer than 150 pastors and evangelists from all parts of Italy joined in the meetings. If we single out any portion of the contents for special mention we should particularise: "The Renaissance and the Reformation," by Dr. Philip Schaff, of New York; "Florence and the Italian Reformation," by Dr. John Stoughton, of London; and the statements on "Evangelisation in Italy," by Drs. Prochet, Taylor, Burt, and Gray, and Rev. James Wall (all of Rome), Revs. D. Borgia (Milan), T. W. S. Jones (Naples), Varnier (Messina), and A. Robertson (Venice). The conference afforded a grand opportunity for the exhibition of Protestantism in a country which is still suffering much from the Romish down-treading; the addresses were worthy of the occasion, and will be read with peculiar pleasure and profit by Christian workers at home and abroad. The volume is edited by Professor R. A. Redford, of London, whose address on "The Divine Authority of Holy Scripture" holds a good position alongside others of conspicuous excellence on the word by Archdeacon Richardson, of Southwark, and Sir J. W. Dawson, of Montreal. (Office of the Evangelical Alliance, 7, Adam-street, Strand.

Messrs. Cassell and Co.

WORK is a capital publication. The current number has something for all workmen, professional and amateur. It is fully illustrated.

THE ART MAGAZINE. The engravings in the January issue are varied, and the letterpress of a high order. The student of art should not overlook this attractive monthly.

CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE is welcomed in many homes. L. T. Meade writes the opening chapters of "Out of the Fashion." There are wholesome complete stories and miscellaneous papers to suit all varied tastes.

LITTLE FOLKS begins admirably, and has a supplement in the form of a birthday album for the year. Mrs. Molesworth begins a new story, "The Next-Door House," and the contents are such as will delight and sharpen youthful readers.

The first article in THE QUIVER is by Mr. G. Holden Pike, and is entitled "The Gospel in the Open Air." It describes a form of Christian effort with which our readers have a sympathetic acquaintance. Rev. P. B. Power's "Thought for the New Year" is "I am Come," and it is presented with point and force. There are bright stories, sketches, and meditations, as well as an admirable address to young people by Rev. Dr. Allon, on "Knowing the Scriptures from a Child."

Temperance Notes.

Mr. A. L. Leon states that from returns made it appears that intemperance is on the increase in East London.

There are ten thousand abstainers in the railway service of Great Britain, and twelve thousand among the sailors in the naval service.

The first annual meeting of the East London Good Templar Convention was held last week at the Stepney Temple, Commercial-road.

An interesting gathering of Band of Hope workers was held on Saturday week in Lower Exeter Hall, Mr. G. Williams presiding. Addresses were given by Canon Leigh, Mr. F. Smith, and others.

In Floyd County, Iowa, the members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union have prosecuted in the County Court three violators of the prohibitory law, and have won every case.

During last year the amount spent on drink in this country was equal to £4 19s. 8d. for every man, woman and child in the kingdom. The amount spent for Christian Missions was equal to only ½d. in every £1 on which income-tax was paid.

Mr. G. Williams, speaking on Wednesday week in Portman rooms, called serious attention to the fact that no less than five hundred children (under ten) were last year arrested in London for being intoxicated, while some 1500 were arrested under the age of fifteen. This, he felt, revealed a very sad state of affairs.

In the Hawaiian Islands there are about fifty native Temperance Societies, with a membership of over two thousand. Their pledge includes opium and awa as well as alcohol. Awa is an intoxicant manufactured by the natives, and said to be more disastrous in its effects upon the human system than even the imported liquors.

There is perhaps no part of the United Kingdom in which the temperance cause is worked with greater vigour than in Dublin. The Dublin, Glendalough, and Kildare Diocesan Association have arranged to hold an examination in temperance principles on March 25, and a series of temperance meetings are to be held in Dublin this month under the auspices of the Church of Ireland Temperance Society.

We notice with regret the early death of one of America's most gifted women workers, Miss Julia B. Ames, assistant editor of the Union Signal, whose visit to this country in the summer of 1890 was an inspiration to many, was attacked with typhoid during the Boston Convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and died in that city after a brief illness. Her loss will be felt by Temperance women all round the world.

Speaking last week Mr. E. H. Pickersgill, M.P., said the terrible, growing, and insidious habit of taking intoxicating liquors, which had seized upon so many of their countrymen, was one which might well be abandoned with the new year. The first step was the most difficult, and after that abstention would be found easier. One thing which the community ought to do was to remove some of the temptations which met a drunkard at every corner of an East-end street in the shape of a flaunting gin palace.'

The Daily Chronicle of Friday, 8th inst., contains a copy of a "tied house" agreement. The correspondent who sends it says: "The owners of tied houses have hitherto been at great pains to prevent the terms of their 'agreements' with their 'tenants' from being made public. The document is in force at the present time, bearing upon it the name of a firm of brewers who own between twenty and thirty tied houses in one English county alone. Prima facie it would appear that the formulæ must be as obnoxious to the unfortunate 'white slaves' bound by them as they are injurious to the wellbeing of the State and antagonistic to the intentions of Parliament in framing the licensing laws."

Mrs. Hilton, of the Crèche, Stepney, recently said to an interviewer from The Woman's Herald :—"Intemperance is the curse of three-parts of the poorer population. The poor little babies who come here have, in many instances, inherited the awful legacy of drink. One little baby, only five, who was brought here in a dying state, was simply mad for brandy, and would shriek for it, and go into the most dreadful paroxysms of rage if we would not supply her. Only the night before she died she got up from her bed, when she fancied nurse was asleep, and stole to the cupboard like a shadow, in the hope of finding the brandy there. Yes! I may safely say drink is the greatest curse of all. I cannot look on any wine or spirit without a shudder."

THE SNOWDROP BAND REPORT for 1891 tells of rapid, extensive, and steady progress. Since last winter applications for information have poured in, more than 2,000 new cards have been sent out, and many new bands formed. Those who may apply for the report will learn "How the meetings can be varied, and what are good subjects to introduce." As a new feature of the work, which is entirely unsectarian, it is proposed to issue (commencing in January) a series of Monthly Letters or Talks to Girls, by some of the most experienced workers. Mrs. Amy Watson, whose address is Southwold, Sheffield, will be happy to post these Letters to anyone sending, without delay, a subscription of 1s. 6d.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Bishop of London's Fund has just received a New Year's gift of £1200.

Rev. J. M. Eppstein baptized an English Jew on New Year's Eve in the Episcopal Jews' Chapel, Palestine-place.

The Bishop of Exeter, on his return from Japan, speaks hopefully of that empire. There are many towns and thousands of villages utterly untouched by Christianity as yet, but seldom in the history of the world has there been a prospect of a richer harvest.

At a meeting held the other day in the Bradford Church Institute, in support of the Church of England schools in the town, it was determined to make an earnest appeal to the Churchmen of the borough to subscribe to the Church of England School Society.

Active steps are being taken to provide for a bishopric of Birmingham. It is proposed that the diocese shall consist of the Archdeaconry of Coventry, the parishes of Yardley, King's Norton, and Northfield, heretofore in the Archdeaconry of Worcester, and the parishes of Handsworth and Harborne (including Smethwick), heretofore in the diocese of Lichfield.

At the evening service on Sunday week at the parish church of Portsea, the vicar (Canon Jacob) was able to announce that the edifice was free from debt. Towards its cost (£16,000) the late Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P., contributed £27,100, and his widow (Viscountess Hamb'eden) has just sent £50, with £5 from her daughter, to the fund for the completion of the organ.

Owing to the advanced ritual in use at the parish church of New Brighton a number of Evangelical Churchmen resident in the locality invited Rev. M. Forbes to conduct a course of Evangelical services in the Victoria Hall. To these services the vicar has taken strong exception, involving the interference of the Bishop of Chester. The services, however, are still continued.

A special service for men was held at Christ Church, North Brixton, on Sunday week, when a New Year's address was given by Rev. W. R. Mowll, the vicar. There were about six hundred men present, and it is intended to repeat the service on the first Sunday evening of every month. A good many remained for conversation at the conclusion of the service, which, it is believed, was productive of definite good.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The new Chairman of the New South Wales congregational Union is Rev. J. Fordyce, M.A., formerly of Belfast.

We learn that Mrs. Sanders, the wife of Rev. W. Sanders, of Oaklands Chapel, Shepherd's-bush, has died suddenly.

The Ebenezer Flower Mission, at Chatham, reports that its workers have paid a thousand visits to the poor during the year.

A cottage has been secured in Patcham for Sunday services, and the use of a piece of ground for open-air meetings has been granted.

A large number of poor people were on Thursday week provided with a free dinner at Brentwood Church, through the generosity of a member of the church.

An interesting service was held at the Old Tabernacle, Norwich, on Sunday week, in commemoration of the centenary of the Countess of Huntingdon.

Rev. J. G. Adeney has just completed fifty years' pastoral work, thirty-six of which have been spent in Reigate, where special commemorative services have just been held.

The annual united Communion service of the Congregational churches of Halifax was held in Stannary Church, on the first Sunday of the year; over 2000 members were present.

The funeral of Rev. James Sibree, whose death we noted last week, took place on Thursday week, attended by large numbers anxious to do honour to one who had been prominent in all good work for sixty years in the town of Hull.

BAPTIST.

Rev. T. R. Dann, of Bath, has been ordered a prolonged sea voyage on account of the state of his health.

Mr. Baynes has just received for the Missionary Society two anonymous gifts of £1000 each (both from the same donor).

The report of the Regent's College Preaching Society shows good work in supplying village and rural stations with preachers of the Gospel.

We understand that Mr. R. Klickmann, of 41, Belvedere-road, Lambeth, has been appointed English representative of the Dutch Baptist Union. He hopes to be able, in various ways, to help the churches in the Netherlands through the sympathetic co-operation of British friends.

The Baptist Missionary Committee has determined to hold during the present year, at the Mission House, every Thursday morning, a prayer-meeting, to be devoted principally to the cause of missions, and to embrace representatives of all sections of the Evangelical Church.

PRESBYTERIAN.

A series of social Saturday evenings for the people are being given at St. Andrew's Church, Chatham.

The accounts of the English Presbyterian Church for the past year show a fairly satisfactory state of matters.

Rev. Colin C. Mackenzie, of Strathglass, preached on Sunday afternoon the Gaelic sermon in Crown-court Church.

The Evangelisation Committee of the London Presbytery are holding special services this week in Millwall and Brondesbury.

A strong plea has been issued by the Synod's Committee on Christian giving, with the object of raising higher the standard of liberality in the Church.

The Students' Missionary Society of the English Presbyterian Church are pleading this year for funds to aid in extension work in connection with the Mission at Swatow, China.

Rev. John M'Neill, has written a letter saying good-bye to the congregation at Regent-square. "Our time together has been brief, but I assure you it is crowded on my part with the happiest and holiest memories. How steadily, after the usual preliminary period of bearing and forbearing and hoping concerning each other, we have grown in mutual faith and love and peace! In the pain of parting we are learning how tender and true was the bond between us."

METHODIST.

Mr. and Mrs. Pickering sailed last week per ss. Matadi, for their new field of labour in West Africa.

Newport Circuit have prohibited lay preachers using the train service for reaching their appointments on Sundays.

The Primitive Methodists propose founding a Mission in Opopo, where the late King Ja Ja reigned, and where no mission is yet in operation.

A successful meeting was held at the Shoreditch Town Hall on Monday week in favour of the London Wesleyan Mission, Revs. Mark Guy Pearse, J. E. Wakerley, and H. Price Hughes being the speakers.

The Wesleyans opened last week a new institution in Jamaica-road, to be known as the "Bermondsey Wesleyan Settlement." It is stated that the Mission operations will not be in full action for a few months.

SALVATION ARMY.

Five additional Homes of Rest are shortly to be opened for officers breaking down through hard work.

Great preparations are being made to give General Booth an enthusiastic reception on his return in February.

During the present month a special campaign is being carried on by the Army for "the reclamation of backsliders."

The Salvation Army's annual report states that there are 3154 corps and 10,393 officers. The circulation of its newspapers and magazines in all the world has reached forty-five millions. The self-denial week produced £40,122.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Magee College, Londonderry, has received a further donation of fifty volumes of valuable books from Rev. Dr. Kinnear, of Letterkenny.

Mr. Andrew Wilson, of Ardstraw, co. Tyrone, has been ordained by the Strabane Presbytery as a missionary to Queensland.

A convention for the deepening of spiritual life has just been held at Dalkey, Dublin, in which Revs. J. Ervine, W. B. Lumley, and others took part.

Five members of one family were publicly baptized in Rossmire Church, co. Waterford, on December 27, by Revs. Messrs. Parker and Short.

No less than fifty-one ministers of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Ireland died during the past year, being eleven more than in the previous year.

Acting on the suggestion of Lord Pinnuket, Archbishop of Dublin, sermons were preached last Sunday in some of the churches in Cork on the subject of Christian union.

A juvenile association for boys between twelve and eighteen years has been commenced by Rev. Wm. Crawford in connection with Wesley Chapel, Cork, and promises to be a success.

The Belfast Town Mission has been devoting much time and effort of late to the visitation of the sick, and instances have come under the notice of the missionaries where the influenza epidemic has been followed by spiritual blessing.

A mission band has been formed in connection with Fall's-road Methodist congregation, Belfast, which visits the slums of the city and holds a short open-air service every Sabbath evening, with the object of trying to reclaim some of the ungodly and the careless.

Miss Bloomfield, a Protestant lady residing at Ferrybank, Waterford, offered to give a Christmas treat to the poor children residing on the Ferrybank side of the Suir, but the Roman Catholic priest would not allow the children to attend lest Miss Bloomfield should make them sing a hymn or "God Save the Queen," to both of which he objected.

The City of the Seven Hills.

AN HISTORICAL POEM. By H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, D.D

Crown octavo, 300 pages, fully Illustrated (45 engravings), with copious Notes. In cloth boards, gilt, price 5s.

"Few living men have done so much to expose the horror and wickedness of Popery as Dr. Grattan Guinness. His latest blow at the demonic system is a poem entitled THE CITY OF THE SEVEN HILLS. It is profusely illustrated. . . . Among the many amusing or interesting books given at this season, this one of grave reality, relating to the past, the present, and the future, demands a foremost place."—The Christian.

Scripture Biographies.

ABRAHAM: 12th Thousand.

OR, THE OBEDIENCE OF FAITH.

With Nine Original Illustrations.

Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CHRONICLE:—

"Beautifully illustrated, and so tastefully bound as to be a most acceptable gift-book. But the contents are such that no Christian can rise from their perusal without feeling consciously strengthened of God, and inspired afresh for a godly life. Sunday-school teachers may learn from it how to draw out the spiritual lessons of the Sacred Word."

ISRAEL: 16th Thousand.

A PRINCE WITH GOD.

With Nine Original Illustrations.

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from THE SWORD AND TROWEL:—

"Exceedingly good. Not only spiritual, as everything from our brother Mr. MEYER would be, but also thoughtful, fresh, suggestive, and thoroughly practical. Oh, that hundreds of our younger men gave signs of such real godliness, such true devotion, and such clear knowledge of the Gospel as we see in the author!"

JOSEPH: 8th Thousand.

BELOVED—HATED—EXALTED: A PRINCE OF DREAMERS.

With Nine Original Illustrations.

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from THE PREACHERS' MAGAZINE:—

"The great charm of this very beautiful monograph is its clear setting forth of the way in which the life of Joseph mirrors, to use the author's own phrase, the life of Jesus. This idea is not at all unduly pressed, but it runs through the volume, and adds immensely to its homiletic and devotional value."

ELIJAH: 19th Thousand.

AND THE SECRET OF HIS POWER.

With Nine Original Illustrations.

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from CHRISTIAN PROGRESS:—

"Full of devout reflection, stimulating thought, and most helpful instruction—all tending to lead up to a holier and more consecrated walk with God. This, in every sense of the word, is a helpful book; and we most cordially recommend it to all who desire to go forward and higher in their Christian life."

THE LIFE AND LIGHT OF MEN.

EXPOSITIONS OF JOHN I.—XII. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from THE CONGREGATIONAL MAGAZINE:—

"These expositions are delightful reading. To be at home with John is our earnest ambition, and we gratefully welcome any helps of mind and heart in this direction. Mr. MEYER in this work affords both light to the mind and stimulus to the heart. Whoever would understand the vital force and practical bearings of John's Gospel would do well to procure this series of studies."

"TRIED BY FIRE."

EXPOSITIONS OF THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PETER.

Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from THE BRITISH WEEKLY:—

"The popularity of Mr. MEYER'S Expositions is a good sign of the times. This, on the first Epistle of Peter, is one of the best, and is full of tender Christian wisdom. There are many unobtrusive signs of thought and culture throughout; but the chief charm of the book is its earnest simplicity."

Devotional Volumes.

27th Thousand.

THE SHEPHERD PSALM:

MEDITATIONS ON THE 23RD PSALM. Cloth Boards, 1s.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 1s. 6d.

A Review from The Quiver:—"Like some masterpiece of art, in which new study reveals beauties new to us, there are some passages of Scripture that seem to possess almost unfathomable depths of meaning and boundless treasures of blessed teaching.

"Notably is this the case with the Twenty-third Psalm—'THE SHEPHERD PSALM,' as the author entitles his volume. Mr. MEYER'S writing is full as ever of suggestive and profitable thought."

CHRISTIAN LIVING. 25th Thousand.

Cloth Boards, 1s.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 1s. 6d.

A Review from Footsteps of Truth:—"A choice book of nine chapters, into which is condensed a mass of helpful instructions and wise practical counsel on various topics relating to the Christian life."

THE PSALMS: NOTES AND READINGS.

(Crown 16mo size, for the pocket.)

Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.

A Review from The Cambridgeshire Congregational Magazine:—"A pocket commentary on the entire book of Hebrew song.

"The treatment of each Psalm is brief, plain, and well planned. The divisions are usefully suggestive for public addresses, and the fillings in are the pith and marrow of Gospel truth. For private devotional use also it is a little treasure. An admirable volume for presentation."

The same Volume, in Demy 8vo size, forms one of Secretary and Superintendent—Mrs. BIRT.

OBJECT—To Shelter, Clothe, Train, and Place in Homes and Situations in Canada, Fatherless, Motherless, or Friendless Boys or Girls between the ages of ten and fourteen.

The cost of Six Months' Training Outfitting, and Emigrating is £15.

Subscriptions and Donations will be gratefully received by Mrs. BIRT, at the Sheltering Home, Myrtle-street, or by the Hon. Treasurer. Applications to be made to Mrs. BIRT.

WOMEN'S PROTESTANT UNION.

A LECTURE will be delivered by

Dr. H. GRATTAN GUINNESS,

On "THE ROOT OF THE EVIL; the Genius of the PAPACY in Relation to DOCTRINE,"

On THURSDAY, JANUARY 14, at 7 p.m., at EXETER HALL.

The Meeting is open to MEN also.

HOMES OF HOPE,

4, 5 & 6, Regent-square, Gray's Inn-rd., London, W.C.

Special efforts are made on behalf of Mothers with their first infants, who are really the most hopeful class of the fallen, and are generally greatly to be pitied.

A Home has been opened for the reception of such young women, before they become Mothers, as are unfitted, from their previous good character and position, to mix with others.

The Committee are obliged to make an urgent appeal for contributions—

1. For the General Fund; the expenses of which amount to about £5 a day.
2. For the Child's Fund; a guinea or two to pay the nurses would in many cases rescue a mother and child. Five Shillings would pay for a child for a week.
3. For law expenses: in every case where it is possible the men are compelled to pay the sum allowed by law for the child's support.

The applications are so distressing and urgent that every shilling has been spent.

Bankers:
LONDON AND WESTMINSTER, Bloomsbury Branch, 216, Holborn.

CONTRIBUTIONS will be received by Messrs. MORGAN and SCOTT, at the office of THE CHRISTIAN, or by HENRY THOMPSON, Esq., Treasurer, 38, Mincing Lane, E.C.; WM. HORNIBROOK, Secretary, 7, Bloomsbury Street, New Oxford Street, W.C.

DAY OF PRAYER FOR IRELAND.

THE COMMITTEE OF THE IRISH CHURCH MISSIONS' SOCIETY

Cordially invite all who desire the Temporal and Spiritual welfare of Ireland to UNITE with them in SPECIAL PRAYER and THANKSGIVING for Ireland on FRIDAY, January 15th, instead of the 16th, as usual.

The CENTRAL PRAYER MEETINGS of the SOCIETY will (D.V.) be held at the OFFICES,

11, BUCKINGHAM STREET, STRAND, at Half-past Two p.m. on the 15th, when

Sir ROBERT PHAYRE, K.C.B., will Preside.

Rev. DALLAS HARINGTON

and other friends are expected to take part in the meeting.

Christian Community.

ALL-NIGHT RESCUE WORK.

ALREADY, since this work began, 33,000 poor Homeless and Starving Men have been gathered from the streets in the dead of night, Sheltered, Fed, and otherwise assisted, with most gratifying results.

This season has commenced with more than usual pressure, and from present appearances a very hard season is apprehended, making our appeal all the more urgent.

The continuance of this much-needed work must depend upon the liberality of those having the means to support it. Contributions will be gratefully received by the SECRETARY; the Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or, by Messrs. MORGAN AND SCOTT, office of THE CHRISTIAN.

JAS. ATKINSON, Secretary.

THE ENGLISH & FRENCH COASTING MISSION

In connection with HENRY COOK, of 47, Stoke Road, Gosport, will (God willing) hold its 38TH ANNIVERSARY on TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1892,

IN THE

VERNON HALL, STOKE ROAD, GOSPORT.

THE CHAIR TO BE TAKEN AT SEVEN O'CLOCK.

Several Christian Fishermen and Friends will address the Meeting and give some accounts of the work among them in the various Ports round the coast.

Our New Mission Steamer is not yet secured for the want of £1100. T. A. DENNY, Esq., has offered £50 if others will kindly make up the sum needed, that the vessel may be obtained at once for this year's work, so pressingly needed by thousands in France, and for our lighthouses and lightship men in England very much so.

CONTRIBUTIONS will be gladly received by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, Office of THE CHRISTIAN.

COLD AND HUNGRY.

FIELD LANE REFUGES & RAGGED SCHOOLS

ARE WORKING AMONGST THE POOREST AND MOST DESTITUTE.

URGENT APPEAL.

The Applications for Help are Urgent and Numerous.
Nearly 1000 Persons Sheltered Annually.
Also 200 Children Fed, Clothed, and Educated.
Upwards of 300 Persons helped to Employment Annually.

FUNDS ARE EXCEEDINGLY LOW.

£1500 will enable the Committee to close the Financial Year (31st March, 1892) free from debt on the Year's Expenses.

President—THE EARL OF ABERDEEN. Treasurer—WILFRID A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard Street, E.C.
Secretary—Mr. PEREGRINE PLATT, The Institution, Vine Street, Clerkenwell Road, E.C.

THE SHIVERING & SUFFERING POOR

The Duchess of Wellington and H. Norman, Esq., are most heartily thanked for their sympathy in providing Food, Coals, and Clothing for widows and other necessitous persons in a large and poor London parish.—Bankers: L. and County.—A. STYLEMAN HERRING, Vicar (31 years) St. Paul's, Clerkenwell; 45, Colebrooke-row, N.

SEVERE SUFFERING!

Your practical sympathy is earnestly asked for continuing the Free Dinners to Drift Children, Meals to Famishing Men, and for the Widows' Sewing Classes, in connection with the N.E. London Gospel Missions.

Contributions thankfully received by Mrs. F. A. BEVAN, 59, Princes-gate, S.W., or by the Director, WM. CHORLEY, 2, Marquess-grove, Canonbury, N., or Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

£1000 ARE NEEDED to enable us to meet pressing liabilities.

Who Will Help Us?

Donations will be most thankfully acknowledged if sent to our Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; to our Secretary, Mr. W. WHEATLEY, 29, Brooke-street, Holborn; or to the Superintendent, Mr. GEORGE HATTON, 4, Ampton-street, Regent-square, W.C.

A WOMAN'S CRY.

MRS. SETON ADAMSON, The Vicarage, Wright's-road, Old Ford, E., APPEALS to the MANHOOD and WOMANHOOD of the British Empire, on behalf of East London Young Women and Factory Girls. A debt of £204 still remains on the building erected for them in this parish, and to clear it off one generous donor has given £25. Will ten of the Lord's Stewards give similar amounts?

"We heartily commend this appeal for £1600 to your most favourable consideration."

Archdeacon of London.

LONDON CITY MISSION.

500 MISSIONARIES now employed in beseeching the masses in the Metropolis to be reconciled to God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

House-to-House visitation. Personal dealing.
Work purely undenominational.

For the last two years the expenditure has exceeded the income by £3500. To meet this deficit of £7000 the Committee have been compelled to draw upon their comparatively small reserve fund.

Unless there is an immediate increase in the income of the Mission they fear they will be obliged, most reluctantly, to reduce their staff of Missionaries.

To avert this calamity they ask all friends to come, without loss of time, to the help of the Mission. The need is urgent.

"Echoes from the Borderland."

The North-East London Gospel Missions have been under Mr. Chorley's superintendence since 1870, and now maintain regular preaching and mission work in five halls in the North and East of London. The happy results of these twenty-one years of labour are recorded in the report just published, bearing the title "Echoes from the Borderland," and pointing to men, women and children whose downward course has been arrested in time to save them from passing from the "borderland" into the yet darker region of the submerged.

Things, however, are sad enough even on the borders, for we read: "Our patient workers could tell of bare cupboards, empty grates, feeble mothers wasting away day by day, and naked children, all crying in turn, and none to comfort or help." And again: "To meet death on the cold floor with barely a covering, and only a little water beside you, on a freezing day, while the grate has scarcely an ember left, and then to recall that this poor aged man was once a Christian minister himself, such experiences are not easily forgotten."

Much blessing has attended the preaching of the Word. There are now, says Mr. Chorley, among the attendants at our Halls, numbers of fathers and mothers and young men and maidens who have been saved through our ministry, while over a hundred are in church fellowship in our largest hall. Equally cheering is the record of resuscitated energies following a brief stay at the Lancing Home of Rest, proving in many cases almost life from the dead. Early in the year, as reported recently through the kindness of a friend, an excellent Bible van, with ample supply of Bibles and texts, was handed over to the Mission, and has done good service not only in London but in several of the Home Counties, more than two thousand Bibles and Testaments having been sold. The opposition, however, to this branch of evangelism has been great and determined, and efforts to upset the meetings, hinder the sale of Scriptures, and even to throw the van into the river, are among the plots devised by the enemy to frustrate the efforts of the Bible men, for whose preservation and sustaining earnest prayer is requested.

Mr. William Chorley's address is 2, Marquess-grove, Canonbury, N. The Report, copies of which he will gladly send to applicants, sets forth the progress of the work at the Isle of Dogs, where a most happy and fruitful work is being done, and details efforts among factory girls and working destitute lads; also the work of visiting the sick and dying in the Kingsland district, by Miss E. J. Prior, "a real friend of the poor, who day by day spends many hours in helping and caring for them in every way she can."

The Path of Duty.

Definite work is not always that which is cut and squared for us, but that which comes as a claim upon the conscience, whether it's nursing in a hospital or hemming a handkerchief.—Elizabeth M. Sewell.

Let us be very careful of thinking, on the one hand, that we have no work assigned us to do, or, on the other hand, that what we have assigned to us is not the right thing for us. If ever we can say in our hearts to God, in reference to any daily duty, "This is not my place; I would choose something dearer; I am capable of something higher," we are guilty not only of rebellion, but of blasphemy. It is equivalent to saying, not only, "My heart revolts against thy commands," but "Thy commands are unwise; Thine almighty guidance is unskilful; Thine omniscient eye has mistaken the capacities of thy creature; Thine infinite love is indifferent to the welfare of thy child."—Elizabeth Charles.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For special meetings by Mr. W. Henry Collins, at Eastacombe, North Devon, from Jan. 17.—For a mission in Trinity parish, Worthing, by Rev. Walter Bradbury, in January.—For a special mission in Doncaster-street Hall, Glasgow, by John M. Scroggie, from Sunday, Jan. 17.—Praise is given by one who, in answer to years of prayer, has been led to the Lord Jesus as his God and Saviour. He asks prayer that, if it be God's will, he may be raised up from a dangerous illness, to be a witness of his Saviour's healing mercy.

LONDON CITY MISSION TO THE JEWS.—Mr. D. Oppenheim writes from 119, Leman-street, Whitechapel: The distress amongst the Jews in our large district is terrible indeed. This morning at ten o'clock forty-six resident and refugee Jews came who had not tasted food for twenty-four hours. Some of the refugees have had to wander about the streets in this cold weather, but those who attend our Gospel services and are inquirers after truth suffer most of all; forfeiting as they do any claim on their own brethren, they naturally look to us for Christian sympathy. It is very hard indeed to preach to an audience of starving people, telling them of the love of Christ, without being able to give them a little food. We have seen scenes of misery which defy description. Would that Christian friends would help us now in this matter.

Forthcoming Meetings.

Test Them Free of Charge.

Write for samples of Frazer's Sulphur Tablets, naming The Christian, and they will be sent you gratis and post free. Frazer's Sulphur Tablets are the pleasantest and most efficacious of all spring medicines. They are invaluable in the treatment of all Blood and Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Eczema, &c. They are specially indicated for children, being alike safe, pleasant, and efficacious. As a remedy for women's complaints they are unequalled. They are preventive of chills, colds, rheumatism, and constipation, and are of great service in the treatment of these complaints. They are the best of all blood purifiers, and ward off influenza and infectious complaints.

Those who desire a good skin and complexion, clear, healthy, and free from blemish, are especially recommended to use Frazer's Sulphur Tablets internally and Frazer's Sulphur Soap externally. The last-named is the purest of all soaps, and absolutely the best. It leaves the skin soft and smooth, and neither dries the nails nor hair. It is free from excess of alkali or fat, and contains extra soft cream, which is especially soothing and beneficial to the skin. About 600,000 packets were sold in 1891; Frazer's Sulphur Tablets being one of the greatest successes on record.

Frazer's Sulphur Tablets are put up in 1s. 1½d. packets; post free 1s. 3d. Frazer's Sulphur Soap (scented) in white card boxes, price 6d.; unscented, in green boxes, price 6d.; three, post free, 1s. 6d. Frazer's productions are sold by or may be ordered of all Chemists and Medicine Vendors at home or in any part of the world. THE CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL,

TESTIMONIALS.

The Rev. Dr. CHICHESTER A. W. READE, LL.D., D.C.L., writes from Banstead Downs, Surrey, May, 1890:—"My duties in a large public institution have brought me daily, during the recent epidemic of Influenza, in close contact with the disease; I have been perfectly free from any symptom by having the Smoke Ball always handy. It has also wonderfully improved my voice for speaking and singing."

Rev. Dr. J. HILES HITCHENS writes from 90, Gloucester-street, Belgravia, S.W., January 1, 1890:—"Your Carbolic Smoke Ball relieved the head and throat to a large extent."

Lady MOSTYN writes from Carshalton, Cary Crescent, Torquay, January 10, 1890:—"Lady Mostyn believes the Carbolic Smoke Ball to be a certain check and a cure for A COLD, and will have great pleasure in recommending it to her friends. Lady Mostyn hopes the Carbolic Smoke Ball will have all the success its merits deserve."

Mrs. GLADSTONE writes:—"She finds the Carbolic Smoke Ball has done her a great deal of good."

TESTIMONIALS.

Rev. HENRY S. LUNN, M.D. (Editor of The Review of the Churches), writes from 5, Endsleigh-gardens, London, N.W., November 16, 1890:—"I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad catarrh."

Dr. J. RUSSELL HARRIS, M.D., writes from 6, Adam-street, Adelphi, September 24, 1891:—"Many obstinate cases of post-nasal catarrh, which have resisted other treatment, have yielded to your Carbolic Smoke Ball."

Rev. G. J. BRETT writes from The Manse, Tendring, Colchester, July, 1891:—"For eighteen months I have used the Carbolic Smoke Ball, with very astonishing beneficial results. I value it very highly, and should feel uncomfortable without one kept by me."

Lady ERSKINE writes from Spratton Hall, Northampton, January 1, 1890:—"Lady Erskine is pleased to say that the Carbolic Smoke Ball has given every satisfaction; she considers it a very good invention."

NERVOUS AND MUSCULAR WEAKNESS.

PULVERMACHER'S

Galvanic Establishment is the oldest house in the world for genuine Electric Appliances.

PRICES FROM FIVE SHILLINGS TO TEN GUINEAS

MR. PULVERMACHER has had the honour of receiving Testimonials from Her Majesty's Physicians, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales's Physician, and over Forty Members of the Royal College of Physicians, London, and Royal College of Surgeons of England.

The distressing symptoms of Nervous and Muscular Weakness are speedily removed by means of which act directly on the affected parts, and impart new life and vigour to the whole system, making life a pleasure.

The public are cautioned against the many sham appliances now being advertised, and to avoid disappointment, intending purchasers should send for Pulvermacher's prospectus before investing.

The "LANCET," in speaking of Mr. PULVERMACHER'S APPLIANCE, says:—"In these days of medico-galvanic quackery it is a relief to observe the very plain and straightforward manner in which Mr. Pulvermacher's Apparatus is recommended to the profession."

SIR CHARLES LOCOCK, Physician to Her Majesty the Queen, says:—"PULVERMACHER'S BELTS are very effective in neuralgia and rheumatic affections, and I have prescribed them largely in my practice for other similar maladies, paralysis, &c."

DR. C. HANDFIELD JONES, F.R.C.P., F.R.S., Physician to St. Mary's Hospital, says:—"I am satisfied that Mr. Pulvermacher is an honest and earnest labourer in the field of science, and I think he deserves to meet with every encouragement from the profession and scientific men."

DR. GOLDING BIRD, M.D., Physician to Guy's Hospital, says:—"I can hardly recommend MR. PULVERMACHER'S INVENTION too strongly to the notice of my medical brethren."

DR. TYRRELL, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, England, writes, October 28, 1891:—"I have used PULVERMACHER'S BELTS in many cases and have found them serviceable in restoring lost functional power."

THIRTY-EIGHTH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

CONSUMPTION—CASE of a YOUNG PERSON at BOROWASH, DERBY.

Two years ago last March the case of Miss ROSE WALKER, of Ockbrook-lane, Borrowash, near Derby, was brought under my notice.

Rev. S. A. BARRON, late of Wilmot-street, Derby, corresponded first with me on her behalf. In his first letter he writes:—"She has been ailing a long while. She has a hacking cough, night sweats, and pain in her side. She is losing flesh fast; her eyes have assumed that glassy look so often seen in cases of phthisis. I hope there is yet a chance to save her. We want to try it."

In two months Mr. BARRON writes:—"I am very pleased to say that from the time Miss Walker commenced to take your medicine there has been a gradual encouraging improvement."

She continued under my treatment for scarcely two months after this. She then resumed work, and has continued well since.

Writing me from Marriott-street, Northampton, last month (September, 1891), Mr. BARRON says:—"The young woman, Miss Rose Walker, is well, and has the appearance of health. She went through the last severe winter without any illness whatever. You will be glad to hear of this."

At the same time, I received a letter from a member of the family (writing for the mother of the patient), stating that ever since she was under my treatment, and restored to health, she had been perfectly well. And the writer adds: "Make any use you like of her case."

Indigestion

34, MEDLAND STREET, RATCLIFF, E.

"DEAR SIRS,—You must think me very ungrateful for not writing before this. I am very sorry for my neglect, for I am sure I can never thank you enough for what Guy's Tonic has done for my dear husband.

"I am very happy to say he is very much better, the night sweats have left him, the bowels are regular, and the cough very much better. The pain in the head and stomach are not so bad as they were; and I do believe that if he had not taken Guy's Tonic and Guy's Fruit Pills he would have been in his grave instead of being at his work as he now is. I am sure they are the best medicines he has ever taken.

"W. BROWN."

We do not claim

That Guy's Tonic will infallibly cure every evil under the sun, but we do say, here and now, that it should immediately be resorted to—

When digestion is accompanied by flatulency.
When pain, weight, fulness or distension, is felt after eating.
When there is drowsiness after meals—a very common symptom.
When there is distaste for foods of all kinds; or
When there is a dull, weak, failing, or pining appetite.

Guy's Tonic is sold by all chemists at 2s. 9d. per bottle, and Guy's Fruit Pills at 1s. 1½d. box. They will be sent post paid at these prices by the Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C.

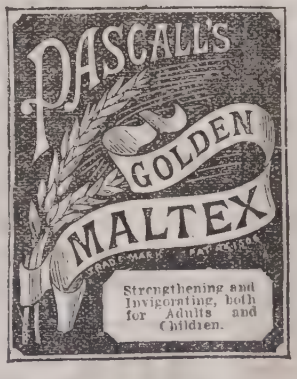
INDIGESTION.

You need not diet. You need not suffer. You need not dose yourself with nauseous drugs, pills, or tonics. PEPSALIA is a certain preventative and speedy remedy. It is not a medicine in form, but a Table Condiment, with digestives which are most effectual and totally harmless. A pleasant, appetising, and agreeable substitute for Table Salt, and used regularly as such permeates every particle of food taken, and ensures Perfect and Complete Digestion.



One saltspoonful to be taken with each meal.

The British Medical Journal says:—"We have proved its efficacy."

BEWARE OF ALL OTHERS.
PEPSALIA ALONE IS GENUINE.

Friendless and Fallen.

A New Year's Work and experience are before us, and again we anticipate the ingathering of hundreds of Young Women and Girls from Sin, Sorrow, and Temptation. What is the GREAT NEED of these collected into the Homes? CHRIST JESUS THE LORD. His BLOOD and RIGHTEOUSNESS alone will save them, and the HOLY SPIRIT alone can show them their NEED of the SAVIOUR. May I ask the many thousands of Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN" to unite at the "Mercy Seat" in supplication that all preventive and rescue work in 1892 may be rich in spiritual results? Let us think of the PRECIOUS PROMISES. See St. Matt. xviii. 19, St. John xiv. 12, 13, 14, &c. Jehovah is honoured when his promises are pleaded and heartily believed.

The Committee and Directors are in URGENT NEED of FUNDS to maintain the Institute, and to carry on the Winter's work, which is meeting with signal tokens of God's blessing. There are "open doors" in the Metropolis, the Provinces, and abroad. The Club Rooms are in use daily, Evangelistic Meetings for Theatrical Employes are constantly held. Lady Correspondents needed for new Members, and Visitors in the different districts of London.

Contributions payable to Joseph Peters, Esq., Treasurer, or will be received by Messrs. Morgan and Scott. Bankers: London and County, Covent Garden. Communications to W. A. Wilson, Esq., Secretary (as above).

SOCIETY FOR RELIEF OF PERSECUTED JEWS

(Syrian Colonisation Fund).

Mr. R. Scott Moncrieff, the Society's Special Agent, reports terrible distress among Jews in Palestine. Men, Women, and Children in silent misery, till sought out by Christian kindness. Winter has begun: "Frightful weather—floods of rain four days—half a gale of wind, in terrific gusts—followed by three days' great snowstorm, then more rain and cold winds. Hundreds outside the City in wretched huts, lying IN THE MUD on the floor. No bedding, food, or fire." Scarcely any clothing. Mr. Scott Moncrieff is giving bedding, flour rations, and fuel to hundreds; also bread twice a week to 1000, and at Jaffa shelter and food to 694 daily. Hospitals filled to overflowing. Mothers and new-born infants found starving.

FUNDS NEEDED for giving Food, Fuel, Bedding, Shelter, Work. Who will help in token of Christian sympathy?

LARGE SCRIPTURE TEXTS.

Printed in very distinct type, in large blue letters. Size, 31 in. by 20 in.

From the late AGNES ELIZABETH JONES, Lady Superintendent of Nurses at the Liverpool Workhouse.

"The Lady Superintendent of Nurses begs to acknowledge the receipt of the Parcels of Texts as ordered. She more and more feels their value. The patients lying in their beds can read the words the print is so distinct.

"As she is going to undertake the charge of several hundred more patients, she wishes to give other Wards the advantage of these Texts on the wall."

70 Different Texts, 3d. each.

Mounted on canvas, varnished, and with eyelet holes, 9d. each.
Mounted on rollers and varnished, 1s 6d. each.

LIST OF THE TEXTS.

1. "Choose you this day whom ye will serve."
2. "The wages of sin is death."
3. "The gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."
4. "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out."
5. "Repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance."
6. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."
7. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins."
8. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."
9. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."
10. "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon Him, to all that call upon Him in truth."
11. "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world."
12. "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."
13. "The Lord is good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works."
14. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; but fools despise wisdom and instruction."
15. "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered."
16. "When we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly."
17. "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus."
18. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."
19. "Now in Christ Jesus ye, who sometime were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ."
20. "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near."
21. "Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God."
22. "Herein is love: not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins."
23. "God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."
24. "As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so, by the obedience of One, shall many be made righteous."
25. "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing."
26. "The just shall live by faith."
31. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the Sons of God."
32. "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."
33. "Through this Man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins."
34. "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation."
35. "God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved."
36. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."
37. "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."
38. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."
39. "God so loved the world, that He gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."
40. "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me."
42. "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus."
43. "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."
44. "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."
45. "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not."
46. "He shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom."
47. "Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well-pleasing unto the Lord."
48. "I love them that love Me, and those that seek Me early shall find Me."
51. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth."
52. "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him."
53. "Casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you."
54. "The Eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."
55. "He hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."
56. "I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content."
57. "As thy days so shall thy strength be."
58. "In all their afflictions He was afflicted."
59. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth."
60. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."
61. "Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him and he in God."
62. "He is despised and rejected of men; a Man of Sorrows, and acquainted with grief."
63. "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities."
64. "The chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with his stripes we are healed."
65. "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way."
66. "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquities of us all."
67. "Look unto Me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth."
68. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters."
69. "If any man thirst let him come unto Me, and drink."
70. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."
71. "It is the blood that maketh atonement for the soul."

The eight following are in Extra Large Type.

25. "Jesus only."
27. "Now."
28. "God is love."
29. "Behold, He cometh."
30. "Have faith in God."
41. "Prepare to meet thy God."
49. "Thou God seest me."
50. "Be ye kind one to another."

BY THE LATE MR. BENJAMIN SCOTT, F.R.A.S.,

Thirty-three years Chamberlain of the City of London.

THE Catacombs at Rome: THEIR CONTENTS AND TEACHINGS.

A Vindication of Pure and Primitive Christianity, and an Exposure of the Corruptions of Romanism; Derived from the Sepulchral Remains of the Early Christians at Rome.

FIFTH EDITION. REVISED AND IMPROVED. WITH NUMEROUS ILLUSTRATIONS.

Presentation Edition.	s.	d.
Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges ...	3	6
Tinted Covers ...	2	0
Cloth Boards ...	2	6

"There is great wealth of information in this well-condensed, well-written book. Think of 587 miles of passages of CATACOMBS! The CATACOMBS have been a hiding-place for truths as well as for martyrs, and the sermons in stones which have been there preserved preach very forcibly against certain errors of the apostate church. Half-a-crown will bring a large return if spent upon this book." Sword and Trowel.

"Most people have heard of these famous CATACOMBS; but nowhere have we met with a more graphic or instructive account of their contents than in this book. The many wood engravings help to make the whole thing quite plain. We advise our young ministers, or more educated Sunday-school teachers, to study this volume."—General Baptist Magazine.

BY THE LATE BENJAMIN SCOTT, F.R.A.S., Late Chamberlain of the City of London.

"Here is a slashing book, which leaves no need for a second stroke. These sermons in stones (the monumental inscriptions in the Catacombs) are then used to prove in a relentless and unchallengeable fashion the wholesale departures from primitive Christianity by the modern Church of Rome. The verdict of the book is this—ROMANISM is baptized PAGANISM. And we entirely endorse the judgment. In these days, when Romanism is being stealthily spread among us, this book ought to be scattered in thousands all over the land." Presbyterian Messenger.

ABRAHAM: 12th Thousand.

OR, THE OBEDIENCE OF FAITH.

With Nine Original Illustrations.

Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CHRONICLE:—

"Beautifully illustrated, and so tastefully bound as to be a most acceptable gift-book. But the contents are such that no Christian can rise from their perusal without feeling consciously strengthened of God, and inspired afresh for a godly life. Sunday-school teachers may learn from it how to draw out the spiritual lessons of the Sacred Word."

ISRAEL: 16th Thousand.

A PRINCE WITH GOD.

With Nine Original Illustrations.

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from THE SWORD AND TROWEL:—

"Exceedingly good. Not only spiritual, as everything from our brother Mr. MEYER would be, but also thoughtful, fresh, suggestive, and thoroughly practical. Oh, that hundreds of our younger men gave signs of such real godliness, such true devotion, and such clear knowledge of the Gospel as we see in the author!"

JOSEPH: 8th Thousand.

BELOVED—HATED—EXALTED;

With Nine Original Illustrations.

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from THE PREACHERS' MAGAZINE:—

"The great charm of this very beautiful monograph is its clear setting forth of the way in which the life of Joseph mirrors, to use the author's own phrase, the life of Jesus. This idea is not at all unduly pressed, but it runs through the volume, and adds immensely to its homiletic and devotional value."

ELIJAH: 19th Thousand.

AND THE SECRET OF HIS POWER.

With Nine Original Illustrations.

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from CHRISTIAN PROGRESS:—

"Full of devout reflection, stimulating thought, and most helpful instruction—all tending to lead up to a holier and more consecrated walk with God. This, in every sense of the word, is a helpful book; and we must cordially recommend it to all who desire to go forward and higher in their Christian life."

NOW READY—A NEW WORK ON ROMANISM.

The City of the Seven Hills.

AN HISTORICAL POEM. By H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, D.D.

Crown octavo, 300 pages, fully Illustrated (45 engravings), with copious Notes. In cloth boards, gilt, price 5s.

"The style is terse and clear, and the thoughts come forth arrayed in the beauty of spiritual insight and pathos. The measure is varied, and the reader is carried on with unwearying interest through phase after phase of the story of Rome, from her rise amid plunder and strife to her final overthrow. There is a thrilling appendix, which marshals the awful testimony of those fearful deeds that stamp Rome as the harlot of prophecy, drunken with the blood of the saints. Books like this are sadly needed, and should be warmly welcomed by all who desire to save England from the closing talons of its old foe."—Word and Work, Jan. 15, 1892.

WHOLESOME LITERATURE

WHEN a firm of publishers find themselves able to issue over eleven millions [now reached over sixteen millions] of a series of cheap popular stories for the masses, and continue year after year to issue fresh stories and new editions of the older stories, one scarcely needs to be told that the series possesses merit of a more than commonplace order. It is easy to produce penny sensational stories, to give them startling titles and flashy covers, and to clear a good profit out of the undertaking. But the difficulty comes in when a publisher is not content with profits only, but has a high humanitarian motive underlying his plans of work. For mere goody-goody stories will not go down with the readers of this class of literature. The heart of the people is sound enough and is at least as susceptible to religious influences as to those of a demoralising nature. But the average Englishman will not stand what in his blunt way he calls "humbug." He has no objection to a "dash of religion" in the books he reads, but it must come in just the same sort of way as it does in the life he knows all around him. What he wants is stories that are true to life taken all round. He finds two influences at work in all the life of which he knows anything, one good, one evil. The books he believes in and sets store by, are those which pourtray life in its double aspect, neither ignoring the evil, nor making it appear beautiful by comparison with the good. And the series of stories under our notice to-day fulfils this condition, and because it fulfils it has won success.

We have read a good many of the stories and should like to dissect them thoroughly for the benefit of our readers; but this would be scarcely fair to the publishers. A very good story called "Under a Cloud" (No. 56 of the Series") depicts admirably the rise to a better life, not without strong temptations to the contrary, of a country lad who had made an early slip. And he is not represented as going to sea and killing 500 pirates single handed before he regains his position; he does it in his own humble sphere of life—the story reads like truth, the example is such as any lad similarly placed, might follow, and in this lies the practical value of it. Another story, and one which brings us nearer home, is called "The White Slaves of London" (No. 49). We do not know if the story is taken from life or not, but it reads remarkably like it, and by no exaggerating the state of things in the poorer parts of London arrests the attention in a way that the more sensational and obviously overstated accounts never have and never will. The story is such as a man can believe, and is therefore likely to act upon. Two other stories "The Demon of Monaco" (No. 77) and "For Mother's Sake" (No 63) describe respectively the evil effect of the two sins of gambling and excessive drinking. We prefer the former because it traces the sin of gambling so clearly to his first beginnings, a most important point, and because it illustrates its influence in all grades of society, from the "sailor boy" with his pitch and toss, to the noble (!) gamblers at Monte Carlo. "Thrown to the Lions," a Tale of Old Rome (No. 65) is a well told story of the early Christian martyrs in the time of Marcus Aurelius. But perhaps the best story of the whole series is "Dudley Carlton's Wife" (No. 32). There is as much here for one penny as there is in many a three-volume novel, and the style is quite as good. This is no exaggerated statement. The central character of the story is painted by an artist's hand, and the story is worked out from beginning to end with consummate skill.

These stories cannot fail to do an incalculable amount of good, and Churchmen may take it from us that they will do no harm.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of Mr. Cheok Hong Cheong, at present in England pleading the cause of China in the movement for the abolition of the Opium Traffic in India.

Rev. John McNeill desires us to say that his stated address now is 31, Ashton-terrace, University-avenue, Glasgow. All letters sent to him there will be forwarded without delay.

So widespread and fatal has the influenza epidemic now become, that there are few families or social circles which have not been visited with the malady. Who does not mourn the loss of relatives or friends that have been suddenly attacked by this strange complaint, and swept away by supervening complications? Last week individual sorrow gave place to public grief, owing to the unexpected death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, eldest son of the Prince of Wales. The fact that the young man was hoping shortly to be married to Princess Victoria May, daughter of the Duchess of Teck, lent additional pathos to his decease. Deep sympathy has been expressed with the Royal Family in their sad loss, and while the recollections of the Prince are pleasant, because of his exemplary character, the well-known graceful bearing of Princess May has called forth widespread compassion.

This distressing epidemic is not special to any particular land or race; it seems to be stalking through the world, and many are its victims among rich and poor alike. Having regard to the high rate of resultant mortality, our minds should all be solemnized. Let us pray that men may in multitudes be led to turn to Him who alone is able to support them in death, and who can enable them even now to live to the glory of God, and have a blessed foretaste of the world to come.

We have received several letters suggesting a day of national humiliation and prayer, in view of the prevalence of the dread disease. Our correspondents do not all recognise the fact that the scourge is by no means confined to our own land. Of course, humiliation and prayer are always opportune. The command has gone forth for all men everywhere to turn to God and acknowledge his Son; but the multitudes abroad as well as at home disregard their duty to God and their indebtedness to Him who reconciled them to his Father. It is always timely for loyal and devoted servants of the King of Heaven to call upon God in the day of trouble. If not in one place by concerted arrangement, earnest souls may well at the present juncture "call upon the name of our Lord Jesus Christ in every place," and their prayers and ours may, in the mercy of God, speedily give place to songs of praise to the tune, "The plague was stayed."

While so many are criticising and carping at the Written Word, and even the great and primary books of the Old and New Testaments are brought, as the Living Word was brought, before the judgment seat of men, it is refreshing to get an old-fashioned believer like Rev. Marcus Rainsford setting before us the spiritual marrow and the Divine fatness of Solomon's Song. Whatever modern critics may think of this inspired scripture, the soul that knows "I am my Beloved's, and my Beloved is mine," and who sits under his shadow with great delight, whose banner over her is love, can never be persuaded that the fruit so sweet to her taste comes from any other than the Comforter, the Paraclete who maintains the fellowship between us and Jesus. Mr. Rainsford says of these notes of his lectures on "The Song of Solomon" (Simpkin 4s.) :—

They contain all the Lord has been pleased to teach myself as to the meaning of this most spiritual and heavenly record, as well as all I could gather from other sources which appeared worthy of repetition. I can truly say, I never expect to enjoy on earth sweeter hours than I have spent in the study of this Song of Loves.

That is the only kind of answer which need be given to those who ask, "Where is 'the inward witness' to the Book of Esther? the Song of Solomon?" or any other of the words of God. Those who have eyes to see the Son of God, and ears to hear the voice of his Spirit, will find in these meditations "fat things full of marrow, wines on the lees well refined."

Dr. Parker has many peculiarities, and they often appear in times of public excitement and display. It is a pity that the preacher's strength should be weakened by doctrinal perversion or adventure. Surely on no Scripture authority did the Doctor declare on Sunday last—

I often pray to the dead. I ask them to come very near me, and to help me to carry the load which is too much for my failing strength.

It has been said that some prayers never ascend beyond the roofs of the buildings in which they are offered. We are convinced that these unauthorised petitions belong to such a category. When our strength fails we should pray to the Strong One, who is the great Burden-Bearer. "Seeking unto the dead" is an act of foolish disloyalty to the ever-living Divine Intercessor; it was condemned under the Law, and is excluded by the Gospel.

Stands England where she did, in the van of Protestant nations? It is to be feared not; else how is it that any proposal for doing honour to a Papist, whether alive or dead, is sure to be received, if not with open enthusiasm, at least with ready acquiescence? How is it that those who raise their voices against the subtle encroachments of Rome are hailed as bigoted, narrow-minded, out-of-date fanatics? The latest instance of this eagerness to meet any wish of Rome half-way is the consent of the Oxford Town Council, at the request of the Duke of Norfolk and several Roman Catholics and Ritualists, to the erection in that city of a monument to the late Cardinal Newman. This ecclesiastic, as Dr. Ince has said in his vigorous protest to The Times, "is the man who caused the defection of a larger number of cultured Protestants than any other English writer or preacher since the Reformation." Therefore, to erect a statue to him, as it is proposed to do, within a stone's throw of the very place where Cranmer, Latimer, and Ridley were burnt at the stake, is a gratuitous insult to the memory of those faithful martyrs.

By the death of Cardinal Manning the Church of Rome loses one whose ideal seems to have been attained by rendering unhesitating allegiance to the Papacy. From threshing ecclesiastical chaff during the Tractarian movement, he proceeded to submit himself to the Pope; and becoming a willing slave of the Romish system, he exercised an unyielding sacerdotal authority over others of like abject dependence of mind. Before the world at large he posed as a benefactor, full of sympathy and of untiring activity, but it was obvious that, to use the language of The Times, his zeal in this regard went hand in hand with an ardent desire for "the conversion of England," and that it was a part of his policy to show the Roman Catholic Church to the poor in the character of a deliverer.

In the words of the official announcement, the Cardinal was, in his last hours, "strengthened by the last rites of the Church, and consoled by the blessing of the Holy Father, which came to him in a most affectionate telegram." Again:

The masses of the clergy, and the prayers of the congregations and of the religious communities, are earnestly requested for the repose of his soul.

How fearfully has Rome departed from the simplicity which is in Christ! The dying thief was relieved by the promise of the faithful Saviour; but "his Eminence" of Westminster had to be content with the "last rites" and the "blessing" of a fellow mortal, who grieves that he is "the prisoner of the Vatican!" If Christ does not provide "repose for the soul," how can "masses and prayers" avail for any one, whatever his position in the world may have been?

That the Cardinal exercised a potent influence in attracting English people Romeward is unquestioned. His death will doubtless weaken the Papal system in our land. We again quote from The Times :—

It is now apparent that the Church of Rome is neither so formidable as a conquering enemy nor so secure as a refuge for feeble hearts, as she appeared to be in the days of Manning's secession. . . . She can never more delude herself with the hope of ruling over the majority of Englishmen. . . . She may become more powerful even than she has been over a minority ably organised and disciplined, and to this work Cardinal Manning devoted the energies of his later years.

Much prominence is being given to a statement in regard to the Pope's charitable donations, and some of our contemporaries are announcing that "although stripped of all his territorial possessions, a prisoner in his own palace, and dependent upon the world's alms," he has, during the year 1891, "out of his comparative poverty" given £28,000 to poor families, £15,000 to charitable institutions, £16,000 to hospitals, and £10,000 to the poor. Unfortunately, however, for this calculation, the statement in the Italian papers from which the figures are taken refers not to pounds sterling, but to lire-coins, which are worth only about a twenty-fourth of the English pound.

Painful accounts come to hand of the sufferings of the starving peasantry of Russia at the present time. Those who are outside the pale of the Orthodox Church, including the poor Stundists, are uncared for by the official agencies designed to meet the pressing needs of the people. Letters from travellers and others who have been dispensing funds raised in England depict in horrible outline the miseries of the hungry. A devoted Christian in the province of Samara, who has been helped from Miss Hesba Stretton's fund, writes :—

No words can paint the wretchedness of the people in all their naked squalor. Entering a yard, we went down into a damp, dark cellar under a log hut. When the door opened the stench was almost unbearable. When my eyes became accustomed to the darkness, I saw, lying on benches which did duty for beds, women and children in the most emaciated condition. One poor woman, ill with typhus, was lying near the door, and her only covering part of a dirty old sheet she was sharing with her babe. Although in a high fever, the woman explained to me that all could be borne but the moaning of the child. She had nothing to give it, poor soul! There are six families living in that cellar, six men with their wives and children—thirty-one souls. One man was in a dying condition from typhus, and all the children were blind from ophthalmia caused by the fœtid atmosphere. The place was about six feet by thirty feet, and not more than seven feet high.

These cases were promptly relieved, the sick being placed in hospital, the naked clothed, and the hungry fed. The gratitude of the poor people is everywhere expressed through tears of joy. Another kind distributor of aid from England says that when he told a few Christian peasants that prayers were going up for them in Great Britain, many of them burst into tears, a manifestation which was followed by such an overflow of prayer as he had never witnessed anywhere before.

We are glad to observe that several organisations have been formed in this country to provide relief. Delegates sent out by the Society of Friends have returned with harrowing reports of the deadly sufferings which are gradually, but surely, settling down on vast numbers of the inhabitants of Russia. Money in aid of this fund, which will be administered by commissioners worthy of the fullest confidence, should be forwarded to Joseph Gurney Barclay, care of Barclay and Co., 54, Lombard-street, E.C. The provision of clothing is also an urgent matter, and we gladly insert the following note from a lady who has the cause of the Russian peasantry very near her heart:—

A community of Russian ladies in Paris are spending several evenings each week in making garments for their suffering country-women. As a very large supply is necessary, they urgently appeal to their English sisters kindly to send means for purchasing suitable stuffs. Some of these ladies have just returned from famine-stricken districts. Contributions will be received by Messrs. Morgan and Scott, and forwarded without delay.

Those who understand Russian policy will not need any explanation of the non-publication of the names of those who are distributing food and raiment among the despairing population of the great empire.

In a letter to The Times the Bishop of Bedford recently gave some useful and suggestive information with respect to the condition of the East-end of London. Although, he says, night-shelters are provided for the destitute, there are very many who will not use them, who do their utmost to escape being found by those who would bring them in. Another reason assigned for the avoidance of these night-refuges is a disinclination on the part of many who are out of work to hear a word about returning to a life of self-exertion and daily labour. There is also much truth in his contention that the indiscriminate giving of "charity" is to blame for some of this indisposition. The Bishop knows the East-end, and it is, therefore, encouraging to be informed, as the result of his personal observation and from the reports of those familiar with every street and court, that there is less chronic distress than there once was, and that the East-end is a very different place from what it was a few years ago. There is, too, he considers, among the poorest a growing sense of the disgrace of pauperism. We may, therefore, "thank God and take courage."

How many a sad contrast does our advanced civilisation present! Sometimes we read of a man dying of starvation in the streets; in the police and coroners' courts many a story of the utmost poverty and wretchedness is told; the life of thousands of toilers in sunless courts and alleys is one never-ceasing struggle to keep body and soul together on some miserable pittance: there are 100,000 paupers in London alone. Yet side by side with all this, it is recorded in a "society paper" how the pet-dogs of fashionable ladies are provided with four changes of garments a day: sumptuous outfits of fine cloth, plush, furs, richly-ornamented and emblazoned cashmere or velvet, are provided for pampered pets of a degenerate plutocracy, while hundreds of women and children have scarcely rags enough to cover them. In the light of such contrasts as this, it is scarcely matter for surprise that some should indulge in wholesale and indiscriminate invective against wealth and property, which are so often prostituted to ignoble uses. "God," said Bossuet, "has committed the poor to the rich, and has assigned them their maintenance out of their superfluity." But how often is this maxim ignored—trodden-down in the race for wealth or pursuit of amusement.

The fact, noted by Pearl Fisher in his article respecting the Salvation Army Social Scheme, that the most helpless class are clerks, ought to open the eyes of parents to the necessity of teaching their boys "honest trades for necessary uses." It is the insane ambition of some mothers that "their boys shall earn their living without taking their coats off." The learning of a handicraft is an education for hand as well as brain, and often makes all the difference between a living and starvation. To live by the sweat of the brow is not a curse, but a blessing. Everyone is the better for knowing how to use a tool as well as a pen.

The measure for the prevention of drunkenness which is being promoted by the Emperor William of Germany is one which might be adopted in this country with advantage both to the individual and the State. Amongst other things, it provides that spirituous liquors shall not be sold to any lad under sixteen years of age, except in the presence of his parents or guardians; that no drink shall be sold to any habitual drunkard; and that all publicans shall sell food. The measure is likely to become law, as only one section of the representatives, and that one in league with the drink interest, has resolved to oppose it. The fact that the statistics of German insanity shew a direct ratio to those of intemperance (twenty-eight per cent. of insane persons in the Rhine provinces having lost their reason through excessive drinking) is evidence of the necessity of some legislation on this subject.

Attention has frequently been called in these columns to the cruelty which necessarily is involved in the wearing of feather trimmings by ladies, and in the current number of The Sunday Magazine there is a striking paper from the pen of the Rev. Benjamin Waugh, in which the horrible cruelty practised upon humming-birds in order to preserve the colours of their plumage for dress purposes is dealt with. The birds are literally flayed alive, and Mr. Waugh urges that to wear the plumage so obtained is disgraceful to any Christian woman.

A Hindu writer in the current number of The National Review paints the position of woman in India in very rosy colours. He accuses England of holding mistaken ideas on the subject, and describes Indian wives and daughters as being "perfectly contented with their lot." But this may be only because their conception of what a woman's true life should be is a sadly imperfect one. The state of public and private morality in our own country does not justify us in throwing stones at others, but the assertion that life in India is purer than here is more easily made than proved. The testimony is too strong of those eminent authorities—travellers, writers, missionaries, and others—who tell of the obscenities connected with Hindu worship, and of the hundred millions of women and young girls who are virtually prisoners for life in the zenanas. In the words of Dr. Murray Mitchell:—"More cruel and demoralising customs than exist in India with regard to women can hardly be found amongst the lowest barbarians." It has been well said that "no nation can rise far above the level of its women." Through her women India may yet be won for Christ.

The Jews and Palestine.

On Monday last week a large meeting was held in the Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, in connection with the subject of the return of the Jews to Palestine. Gentlemen representing the Hebrew community maintained that the Jewish question can only be solved by the coming together again of the Land and the People. One of the Colonies, established by the Chovevi-Zion (Lovers of Zion) Society, has flourished exceedingly, and promises soon to be entirely self-supporting. In all, the Colonies number nineteen, all except one being governed by a sheik or mayor, elected by the people. The Society seeks general assistance in its endeavours to assist suitable families to settle on fertile land, which has just been acquired east of the Jordan. Sympathetic addresses were delivered by Revs. Wm. Paterson and Dr. MacGregor, and an organisation was formed, embracing Christians of all denominations, to be called the Scottish Society for the Restoration of Jews to Palestine, designed to aid the Chovevi-Zion Society in their endeavours.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For a mission by Mr. William Forbes at Leytonstone, from January 25.—For a united mission in Macduff, N.B., from January 31, Mr. C. G. Roger, Evangelisation Society.—For fourteen days' mission at the Baptist Chapel, Newton-street, Petrock, North Devon, by Mr. W. H. Dawe.

The Uncertainty of Life.

While a whole nation bows in mourning under the mighty hand of God, surely we shall lay to heart truths that ought, in this world of uncertainty, to be a potent modifying force in our daily lives. We are so apt, when all goes outwardly well, to conclude that to-morrow shall be as this day, and yet more abundant, and so to trust our hopes and interests to the freightage of a most unreliable bark. Look at some historic human schemes from this standpoint. Haman planned the gallows for Mordecai; he was hanged upon it himself. The Jews with bloody hands crucified and slew our Lord, but confusion covered their faces when He rose triumphant over death and the grave. Herod intended to bring Peter out of prison on the death side; Peter came out through the iron gate that led to earthly life and freedom. And so of many other plans, not murderous and bad, but happy and innocent, flooding the present with joy by the anticipated brightness of the future. How often are these purposes broken off, and, as in this great cloud of sorrow that has so suddenly eclipsed the plans for national rejoicing, instead of sharing in bridal festivities, we have been called to tread the valley of the shadow of death!

Are there no life-long lessons to be learned? Does our Father willingly afflict or grieve the children of men? Does He not, in his love, purpose that through this dire event, fraught with elements of tragedy, there should go forth to all the people a loving, tender entreaty that they will "receive a kingdom that cannot be moved"; that learning, in characters which burn into the heart as with letters of fire, that "the things which are seen are temporal," we shall seek an anchor for our hopes that entereth into that within the veil? There is such an anchorage for every reader of these lines.

Opposed to the fluctuations of Time are the immutabilities of Eternity, and each one of us can be linked to these. God's "morrows" bring no disappointment, no frustration. Once united to his great purposes of love in Christ, we need not fear "though the earth be removed." True, our firmest faith in Christ will not exempt us from trials that may be very unexpected and very bitter, but though "heart and flesh" may therefore "fail," the unseen anchor holds, and God is "the strength of our heart, and our portion for ever." Surely this should be our lesson to-day, as we weep tender tears of sympathy and sorrow, and offer fervent prayers for the consolation of the illustrious mourners whom a nation holds so dear. Shall we not give more earnest heed to the Master's own monition: "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things that he possesseth," therefore "Lay up for yourselves treasure in heaven."

Percy-park, Tynemouth.

THEATRICAL EMPLOYEES.—A few days ago upwards of 120 theatrical women engaged at Olympia accepted the invitation of Mr. William Forbes to tea at St. Mary's Iron Room, Edith-road, Kensington. After tea hymns and solos were sung, and brief Gospel addresses were given by Colonel Savage and Rev. C. B. Fay. We should mention that Mr. Forbes is anxious to continue such meetings, but needs some little help. His address is 71, Tollington-road, Holloway, London, N.

ZENANA MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The students have resumed their studies, and amongst them are two young ladies who have been accepted by the committee for "free scholarships" for two years, including board, residence, and instruction. The committee hope to be in a position before this year is out to give at least four more free scholarships to deserving candidates. The address of the College is 58, St. George's-road, S.W., and the hon. secretary is Dr. G. de G. Griffith.

WAIFS AND STRAYS SOCIETY.—A meeting of the Executive Committee was held on Monday last at the Church House, Westminster, General Lowry, C.B., in the chair. The receipts during the last fortnight amounted to £3110, from which was voted the sum of £1577 for the maintenance of the Homes and boarded-out children. The deficit on the General Fund had been reduced to £1206; towards this the Society has received four offers of £100 each provided six others are forthcoming.

An Apostolic Postscript.

NOTES OF AN ADDRESS AT ABERDEEN,

BY REV. JOHN McNEILL.

IT seems as though the Apostle John had intended to close his Gospel at the end of chapter xx. You can see him finishing his manuscript after having written:—

And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book: But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name.

There, I believe, he meant his Gospel to end. But the Holy Spirit, on whom we depend for our Scripture, its authenticity, authority, and accuracy, and not on the Evangelists themselves—the Holy Spirit brought the things contained in chapter xxi. to his remembrance. He eagerly unrolled his scroll: "Dear me! Why was I going to publish my narrative about the life of Christ with this left out?"

In speaking in this human way of our Divine Book, I am not to be considered as weakening by one jot its Divine inspiration. What is inspiration? I do not know; and you cannot tell me. It is the subtlest miracle that ever God wrought—so fleet and nimble and subtle that it has been the despair of theologians ever since they began to study it, and will be so to the end. It is a fascinating subject, but, as I say, it is at once of an interpreter who would attain to a knowledge of it. But while actual definition and knowledge are difficult, we have here an illustration of it. Here it is jogging the Apostle's memory after he thought he was done, making him write this postscript; for it is agreed on all hands that this twenty-first chapter has a postscript look about it. Here the Holy Spirit prevents a man from forgetting what He wanted to reveal. The matter he is adding is an additional proof of the Resurrection, and there we have an explanation of why this postscript was written. The truth of the Resurrection is one that must be overwhelmingly proved. It was as if the Holy Ghost had looked down the ages and seen that in the end of the nineteenth century there would be questionings as to the date and the authority of this Gospel. So He said: "Oh, ye critics, I will break your hearts with instances of the Resurrection, and your teeth with nuts to crack." So He would establish in all its glorious strength and immensity the fact that God in Christ lived and died and rose again. Of all the irritating things that we defenders of God's Word have to endure this is the worst—that when somebody over in Germany writes a book to prove that the Gospel by Matthew, Mark, Luke or John belongs to some other century, an Englishman must sit down and write an equally learned book on the other side. Let it stand there. The man who cannot take God's Book as he finds it, will not take it in through apologetics—as a rule. I never yet found a man who did.

Now, let us look at the story. These were trying times for disciples. Remember what discipleship meant then. To-day it may be dull and humdrum enough—trotting to church and home again, with a little extra trotting to special meetings once in a while—a mere flicker that soon passes away. But from the beginning it was not so. You object to excitement in religion? Well, you would never have done for one of the first disciples. From the day in which they joined hands with Jesus, their dull days were over. They simply never knew what was going to happen next. You say you do not believe in sensation in religion. I beg to say that I do not believe in a religion that has no sensation. It is not the religion of Jesus Christ. For that is the freshest, liveliest, and most stirring thing that ever entered into the heart of man or a community of men. Whenever you find it getting very dull, so that people can stand it, you may know

THERE IS SOMETHING WRONG.

Sensation does not mean vulgarity. There is nothing so grand or fine as the religion of Jesus Christ. As I have frequently said since I came to Aberdeen, there are no false notes in it; but it is in the deepest and truest sense real excitement and sensation. It is the breaking up of death; and is not that sensation? Is not the spring a sensational time, when the icy bands of winter are breaking before one's eyes, and the bare black earth begins to be covered with its mantle of green, and the flowers appear, and the singing birds come back? You like the excitement, the revival of the springtime; why object to it where it is still more needed—in the dull, dead heart of us?

The life of the disciples had always been a life of sensation, because Jesus had been in the midst of them. But now it was more wonderful than ever. The Master had been betrayed by one of themselves. Surely there was a sensation in that. Don't you know of anybody in Aberdeen who sells Jesus for gold? Ah! that sensation is among us every day we live. The disciples had seen Him taken, scourged, crucified, and buried. Surely there must have been breathless excitement in that. And, wonder of wonders! He had risen from the dead and had appeared to them; had convinced them of his identity; and had breathed on them the Holy Ghost, and said, "As the Father hath sent Me, so send I you." Yet here we find them away up in Galilee idling, doing nothing. The Lord wanted them to go there and wait for Him; and a waiting time is always a testing time.

At last Peter said, "Well! well! come He soon or come He late"—and perhaps his manly mouth twitched as he added, "or come He not at all—I am going to fish; I cannot stand this waiting any longer. Let us go and do some work." He did not say heroically, "Let us go and convert the world," but "Let us go and catch fish." It was a good step down, you think. But when some great and terrible trial comes upon us, it is the doing of the humdrum common-places of life that keeps us from going to pieces.

Some of the commentators are always down on Simon Peter. They never can get over the fact that he denied his Lord; and they always seem to think of him as cursing and swearing. Altogether it does look for a good while as though he were the wrong man for the Lord's work. He is not at all as composed as we consider a preacher of the Gospel ought to be. But the Lord made no mistake in calling Peter to be a preacher of his Gospel. All the Apostle's blundering and going wrong was worth the trouble. I am inclined to say with respect to some of us—not even excepting my ministerial brethren—that three grains of Simon Peter at his worst would be a beginning of days for us. Unfortunately most of us belong to that dismal crowd who never said a foolish thing and never did a wise one. We are "content to dwell in decencies for ever," and the Lord leaves us there. We are so awfully concerned for our reputation. Either the editorial or the ecclesiastical Mrs. Grundy has frightened the soul out of us. Thank God, Peter had got rid of that terrible old woman! He preserved his individuality and his outspokenness. And one day the Lord gave him 3000 souls; and that in a city that was mad drunk with its Redeemer's blood. How many of us want to trim Peter; but, then, what have you left? There are those who would send Samson to have his hair cut, so as to make him look respectable! Then he would be like other people—and just as useless! But Peter is showing here that the Lord made no mistake in his man when He chose him to be "a soldier of the Cross, a follower of the Lamb."

Now let us be like him. Let us get something to do. Do not go moping about the shores of Time, as these disciples were doing on the shores of Galilee. What were they doing? Putting in the time till Christ should come. What are we doing? What is the continual attitude of the Church of Christ on earth, but just this waiting for his coming? As they ran away up into a far corner of Palestine, and waited till Christ should come, so we are away in the far corner of the nineteenth century; and still He does not come. The word He left by the man who saw Him last was, "Behold, I come quickly." I beg to say that nineteen hundred years count for something; surely it is "a while of a forenoon," both in God's calendar and in man's.

How are we to put in the time? Peter gives us the right idea. I do not say he did it perfectly. Jesus is coming, as He promised; what are we to do? For one thing, do not mope. I know of no doctrine that might do us more good, or that is more spoiled, practically, than this doctrine of waiting for our Lord's return. It is a thing that the Church seems occasionally to take down from the shelf, to frighten herself into good behaviour when she has got terribly worldly. What she should do is to use it permanently and steadily as a leverage for patient, faithful service. So do not go about the shores of Time saying:

I 'gin to be aweary of the sun,
And wish the world were at an end.

You know you don't. You are just as fond of the world as your neighbours; and if the Crack of Doom were to sound, you would be considerably surprised and frightened. Do not talk rant or cant about the Lord's Coming. Neither sit down with your Bible between your knees and turn over its pages to find out when He is due. Woe is me for the folly of those who say they have discovered that the Lord is going to arrive on such and such a day! I pity those poor people who cannot get that Euphrates to dry up, or those ten horns to go on to some beast, just to please them!

Do not hold the truth that way. Then how shall we hold it? Because you believe the Lord is coming, go out and do your best work. I do not say a word about pre-millenarianism or post-millenarianism; I am not interested. Let us hold the doctrine practically. Let us beware of heresy on the one hand, and of lunacy on the other. Be diligent that you may be found of Him in peace. How we spoil our Lord's Second Coming. In the midst of our day's work let us often betake ourselves to it as unto a mountain of myrrh, or a hill of frankincense, till the day break and the shadows flee away. He said, "A little while," and when He comes it will be found to be a little while.

A little while with tides of dark and light
The moon shall fill;
Warm autumn's gold be changed to shrouded white,
And winter's chill.

A little while shall tender human flowers
In beauty blow,
And ceaselessly through shade and sunny hours
Death's harvest grow.

A little while shall tranquil planets speed
Round central flame;
New Empires spring and pass, new names succeed
And lapse from fame.

A little while shall cold star-tapers burn
Through Time's brief night;
Then shall my soul's beloved One return
With dayspring bright.

A little while—but ah, how long it seems,
My Jesus come!
Surpass the rapture of my sweetest dreams,
And take me home.

THE IDEAL CHRISTIAN LIFE.

AN Edinburgh correspondent writes:—On Saturday, January 9, there was held in the Students' Union, Edinburgh, a conference on the subject of "The Ideal Christian Life." The speakers were delegates from practically every university in the kingdom, including two representatives of Edinburgh University itself. Professor Drummond, who was in the chair, welcomed the delegates, and introduced them to the meeting. The subject was divided into (1) Source—the new birth; (2) Development—by the Holy Spirit, by the imitation of Christ, by Bible reading and prayer, and, lastly, by general culture; (3) Manifestations—influence, and work at home and abroad.

The addresses, occupying ten minutes each, were hearty and outspoken, and were much appreciated. When the leaders had concluded, the meeting was thrown open, and those who had sent in their cards were called upon to speak for not more than three minutes each. The fearless way the students gave expression to opinions which were not able to command a majority was remarked on all sides. The noticeable features were—to God's praise and glory be it said—(1) definite insisting on a need for the personal working of the Holy Spirit; (2) maintaining the necessity of personal dealing; (3) persistent and almost unanimous denunciation of theatre-going and dancing, and this mostly for the sake of others. About sixteen or eighteen students including several foreigners, spoke in this part of the meeting. Professors Charteris and Drummond both said a few words before the close.

The result of the conference—who can tell? May we not see in the ruling impression the beginning of the answer to the prayers of many, that the University, which takes the lead in so many things religious, might be quickened by the Spirit, and sanctified for the Master's service? On Sunday morning there was a prayer meeting, at which Professor Charteris, who presided, said a few words about the work of the Spirit. In the evening five of the delegates addressed a meeting of students in Oddfellows' Hall.

The Social Scheme of the Salvation Army.

III.—THE FARM COLONY.

BY PEARL FISHER.

What I have said, in previous numbers, of the City Colony, with its seven Food depôts, eight Shelters, three Métropoles, three Elevators, and the labour bureau, fairly covers the operations of the Social Wing in London. Next comes the Farm Colony, an undertaking to which not a few look with ardent hope, believing that one grand remedy for the distress in the large cities is to be found in getting the people "back to the land." Many, doubtless, have been the daring experiments already made in this direction; will this, with its very distinctive character, succeed better than those attempts now historical? Presumptively, the Salvation Army Farm Colony enjoys better chances to start with than its predecessors, in the Christian spirit animating it, and in the thoroughly business character of the undertaking. But to my,

VISIT TO THE FARM COLONY.

Travelling to Leigh (on the London, Tilbury, and Southend line), we, a little party of inquirers, found ourselves two-and-a-half miles from the Hadleigh Estate, on which the Farm Colony stands. A pretty drive through village and hamlet brought us to the Park Farm, which, with the Castle Farm and Sayers Farm, forms the colony, some 1150 acres in extent. The ground, which is broken and of varied quality (a most desirable feature, where work is to be found for all kinds of men), stretches from the River Thames to the rising ground in the rear. Part, therefore, is low-lying and marshy, while the larger part is arable and grass land, and some eighty acres are suitable for market-gardening. Already fine fields of cabbages, potatoes, and the like are under cultivation; but at present the operations are largely of a pioneer character. A tramway is being constructed from the River wharf to the farms, to afford facility of transit; while officers' dwellings, and rows of dormitories, sitting-rooms, workshops, kitchens, and other buildings for the accommodation of the colonists, are rapidly rising. In an isolated and sheltered nook stands the hospital, under the charge of a "rescued man," found to be a fully-qualified doctor, who is now rendering good service under the oversight of a visiting physician from Leigh.

THE COLONISTS AND RECRUITS.

On the date of our visit some 170 men were actually at work on the farm; but we saw eighteen arrive, the first contingent of a party of fifty ordered to the colony. On the farm we noticed many older men employed, but this particular party of fresh recruits were all lads or young men, just the type one sees lounging round low public-houses. Scanning their features, we felt that, in turning such into useful farm labourers the Salvation Army was conferring no slight benefit on the nation at large. It is fully expected that ere long five hundred men will be profitably employed on the farm, although not all engaged in agricultural work.

The rules show that, after a trial, the colonists are classified. Class IV. receives 1s. per week, besides food and shelter; Class III., 1s. 6d.; Class II., 2s. 6d.; and Class I., 4s.; a certain proportion being reserved towards clothes and other eventualities.

TEMPERANCE AND SPIRITUAL WORK.

Necessarily, the whole is conducted on absolute abstinence principles; any one entering a public house (and there are three in the neighbouring village) is liable to instant dismissal.

In the farm, as in the elevators, the spiritual character of the work is emphasized; and besides the nightly meetings, every effort is used to win the men to the Saviour, as the only true keeper and friend. A report, issued just before my visit, states that "fifty men have professed to give their hearts to God," and appear to be doing well. I merely mention this to show that the soul is not overlooked in caring for the body of those who have sunk deeply.

AN OUTSIDER'S VIEW.

Talking outside with a villager (by no means of a Salvationist turn of mind) I learned one or two interesting facts:—

1. The old hands originally employed on the farms purchased by the Salvation Army have all been retained, at better pay than before. Though a small point, this bulked largely in my informant's mind, and to me it seemed well worth noting.

2. The village of Hadleigh has profited largely, I was told, by the coming of the Salvation Army, and trade has revived all round.

3. Whatever may be said as to the competition of the men in the elevators with ordinary trades, no such pressure is felt in the country. However largely the Salvation Army Farm may produce, it hurts no other farmer. Were there fifty such farm colonies no one would suffer by the competition, but the country generally would be the gainer.

Such, refraining from any lengthened and detailed description as scarcely necessary for my present purpose, is the Farm Colony at Hadleigh as I saw it a few days since. It is a hopeful beginning in a real and resolute endeavour to lead back suitable men, starving on the streets of London, to the land on which they may live and thrive.

IV.—A GENERAL REVIEW.

And now, in adding a few words of general comment on the whole work, I trust that it may be felt that, even where critical, these are penned in no unfriendly spirit; the whole tone of the present series of articles ought to evidence a desire simply to depict facts as I found them. In entering on a general review, I have before me the "Report of the First Year's Work of the Social Scheme," a report which I have carefully and repeatedly read.

THE FRINGE ONLY TOUCHED.

The first question which arises is as to the extent of the operations. When the scheme was launched, a veteran in mission work, who has given a long life to the service of the poor, remarked, "The only fault is that it is vastly too small; it can but touch the fringe of the problem of the poor." This the Salvation Army confesses frankly when it says (page 19 of Report), that to provide for the helpless "tenth" throughout Great Britain "would, at an estimate of 8d. per day, require a charity fund of £73,000,000 per annum!" The elevators have helped 2080 men during the year, but obviously this is a mere handful out of the mass.

SHOULD THERE BE "FREE" SHELTERS?

Next, there is the absolutely penniless "dosser" to be considered. As already remarked, none of the Salvation Army shelters are free, although in connection with the Penny Shelters just opened a plan is being adopted to make them practically free to any man who will do from twenty to forty minutes' work. I understand that the question has been carefully considered by the Army, who have come to the conclusion that Free Shelters are likely to do quite as much injury as good. Still, in the winter season especially, the need is so urgent that it may be hoped that every facility will be given to those who do not possess even a penny.

THE MARRIED POOR.

Further, I must note that, really, the Salvation Army Scheme touches but one class—single men, or those who have deserted wife and children. It does not reach the poor, labouring class, with families; yet amongst these the distress is deplorably great, especially in winter. The Labour Bureau does help such to find work, but otherwise the Scheme (Shelters or Elevators) does not meet their case. The home-dwelling poor helped by Mr. George Holland, Miss Macpherson, Pastor A. G. Brown, the Ragged School Union, and other workers, find no help in the Social Scheme, though it is dealt with in the "Slum Work" branch of the Army's operations.

THE QUESTION OF COMPETITION.

Another and somewhat awkward question is raised by the competition with regular trade. This matter requires careful and candid consideration on the part of the Salvation Army and other philanthropic agencies, for it would be small benefit if a certain number of the "submerged" are aided only at the cost of throwing others out of work.

HOW ABOUT THE SPIRITUAL WORK?

Lastly, there is the important question of spiritual work. Is this kept to the front? I find that as a matter of fact it is at headquarters borne steadily in mind, while the officers and workers, so far as I have seen, do honestly and earnestly seek the real welfare of the men. But while admitting this fully, one cannot help seeing the danger that in the pressure of work and the manifold concerns in hand for feeding, sheltering, and training hopeless men, the spiritual end may become obscured. It is greatly to the credit of those now labouring in it, that hard as they are pressed by the many calls upon them, they still hold in view the highest of all aims, the winning of lost men to the Saviour of sinners.

THE SCARCITY IN SOUTH INDIA.

Many of your readers have already heard that the rains this year have been an utter failure. All kinds of grain have been fearfully dear for months, and now that all hope of rain is over, they have gone up to famine rates. It is becoming almost impossible for the poor to buy grain, and unless rice is poured into the country from other parts of India, starvation and death must await many. We are feeling the strain all over the Mysore, but in Tumkur we generally feel scarcity before the other parts, and it seems to continue here longer. Most of our Christians are very poor, and it will be utterly impossible for them to live without help.

We have here in Tumkur a large boys' orphanage, and you may imagine how this scarcity affects us. Unless help reaches us soon we shall have to reduce the quantity of grain we give out for their meals every day. I dread doing this, as many of them are strong, growing lads, who need all the food we can give them, but it will have to be done soon. Our big lake, which ought to contain water for the cultivation of the paddy fields next hot season, is absolutely empty, without a drop of water, and the wells are fast drying up. There is no fodder for the cattle, and we are selling off the orphanage plough bullocks, or rather giving them away, as the prices we realize in no sense represents their value. The outlook is very gloomy, and I feel inexpressibly grieved, especially for our married boys, who will suffer most severely, as most of their crops are an utter failure. We shall probably have a number of poor heathen children applying for admission into the orghanage; but I shall be able to do nothing for them without help. Surely friends in England will aid us. Help given to the children, Christ's little ones, is given to Christ Himself.—Yours very truly,

George W. Sawday.

"WHEN THE SUN WAS SETTING."

A radiance fell across the street
While evening glow was dying,
As though, regretful of retreat,
Sweet day departed sighing;
Golden the light where faces white
And brows unsoothed were lying,
Triumphant in its tender might,
Yea, conqu'ror over crying.

A radiance fell across the street,
A ray of Heaven's effusion;
The lustre of Emmanuel's feet
Invading sin's confusion;
Like burnish'd brass* his footsteps pass
'Mid woe's outspread profusion,
Till sunset glories far surpass
Earth's noonday of illusion.

Effulgent radiance o'er the street!
Swift pinion-rays† of healing!
Fountain whence deep compassions beat
Response to pain's appealing!
Emmanuel spoke: the anguish broke,
Dumb, joyless lips unsealing,
There all the harps of song awoke,
His fingers o'er them stealing.

Oh, hear the cry from every street,
Wail upon wail ascending!
'Tis sunset: fain our gaze would greet
The glory Thou art sending;
Shine, Radiant Ray! announce the day!
Armies of light attending;
Till, dawning 'neath thy Kingly sway,
Shall break the morn unending.

BRUNSWICK HALL, POPLAR, E.—On Monday evening three hundred poor children (chiefly those of poor widows and those whose fathers were out of employment) were entertained to a free supper. The friends are anxious to give the same every Monday evening if enabled. Any willing to help should communicate with Mr. George Fuller, Brunswick Hall, Brunswick-road, Poplar, E.

MARAH AND ELIM.

1 COR. x. 2.

THE peninsula of Sinai, on the shores of which the ransomed people stood, and which for forty years was to be their school-house, is one of the wildest, grandest, barest countries in the world. It has been described as a tangled maze of mountains, piled in inextricable confusion, and gradually rising in height towards the lofty summit of Um-Shomer, to the south of Sinai. Between the Red Sea and the lowest outworks of these mighty citadels of rock there is a plain of gravel, and thence the way climbs slowly upward through long avenues and passes composed of purple granite or brilliant sandstone, which give a richness to the landscape unknown to our bleaker and greyer hills.

We have not now to do with those majestic approaches to the inner sanctuary, but with the sandy plain over which, during the first weeks of wandering, the host was led, skirting the shores of the Red Sea, along which they probably beheld the dead bodies of their foes. A ghastly spectacle!

Though not expressly stated, there must have been a division of the Israelite host, from the point where their first encampments were pitched in the strange new land of freedom. The flocks and herds, as is the custom with modern Arabs, were dispersed far and wide over the country to crop the scanty "pastures of the wilderness" of which the Psalmist speaks. "Nearly everywhere," Dean Stanley tells us, "there is a thin, it might almost be said, a transparent coating of vegetation. And in some few spots there are more marked spots of verdure, the accompaniments, not of the empty beds of winter torrents, but of the few living, perhaps perennia springs, which by the mere fact of their rarity assume an importance difficult to be understood, in the moist scenery of these northern lands." It was there that their flocks and herds were preserved, whilst the main body of the people marched with Moses.

How marvellous the change! No longer the ceaseless pulse of movement of Egypt, with festival and pageant, song and feast, the court and the army; no longer the green valley of the beneficent Nile, where water never failed, and luscious vegetables, melons, leeks, and garlics charmed away thirst; no longer the majestic glory of sphinx, and pyramid, and temple, but instead, a silence so intense that the Arabs say they can make their voices heard across the Gulf of Akaba, a waste so waterless, that they might count themselves fortunate if they met a spring in a day's march, whilst they were literally enclosed within a temple, whose walls were cyclopean rocks, such as human hands had never piled. But amid all these chequered and strange experiences, the cloud slowly led them forward; and as the successive scenes crowd on our view, we cannot but see in them an allegory or parable of human life, and we acknowledge the truth of the Apostle's statement, "Now these things happened unto them by way of figure." (R.V. marg.)

I. THE COURAGEOUS FAITH OF MOSES. — He knew that desert well, its wild and desolate character, its dried torrent-beds, its lack of all that would support human life; he knew, too, that if they were to follow the northern route it would not take them very long to reach the land of the Philistines, "which was near," and where they would be easily able to procure all necessary supplies either by force or purchase; but we are told, nevertheless, that he deliberately led them southwards and entered the wilderness. "So Moses brought Israel from the Red Sea, and they went out into the wilderness of Shur." He could not do otherwise, because the cloud went that way but even with that indication of God's will before his eyes, it must have required an heroic faith to lead two millions of people direct into the wilderness (Ex. xiii. 17; xv. 22).

We all of us need the leading about by the way of the wilderness. In its majestic scenery our minds, dwarfed and stunted by too great familiarity with the works of men, are turned to a higher keynote, and learn to wonder at the littleness of the vanities which engross so many There we learn to deal with God not at second-hand, as is too frequent in human civilisation, but directly, as scattering with his own hand the manna for our food, and deriving from "the flinty rock" the living streams to quench our thirst. We lose the luxuries which were sapping and enervating our moral nature, to find ourselves becoming braced and strengthened in every sinew by privation and hardship. Patience, freedom, faith, the pilgrim-spirit, all these are children of the wilderness wanderings, that thrive in its rare and peculiar air.

There was good reason, then, why the great leader should follow the lead of the cloud; but it was not the less a sublime evidence of a faith that could trust God to the uttermost, as he turned his back on Philistia, and stedfastly took his course towards the heart of the desert, veiled as yet in those mighty ramparts and walls of rock. Child of God! wherever He clearly guides thee by circumstances or his word, dare to follow, though it be into a wilderness to be tempted of the devil. Cast on Him all the responsibility and follow. He is bound to justify Himself; where the cloud leads, manna will fall and water flow.

II. THE TESTING OF HIS FAITH.—"They went three days in the wilderness, and found no water." The first day's journey was, doubtless, very distressing—the blinding sand-storms, the glare of the sun reflected from the white limestone plains, the absence of shade, of tree, of water. Perhaps they had filled their skins at the wells now called Ayoun Mousa, where they had encamped last, but the contents must have been hot and unrefreshing.

The second day was not less trying. The sea was now far in their rear, and there was nothing to break the monotony of the treeless, lifeless, waterless horizon. And surely as they pitched their black tents for the night it was difficult to repress some discontent, or at least anxiety, as to what the morrow might bring to their blistered feet and fevered lips. Their supplies of water were also getting low, if they were not quite exhausted.

The third day broke. Perhaps Moses, knowing that pools of water were not far away, encouraged them to persevere, and every eye was eagerly strained to catch the first sight of palm trees and living verdure. Not more eagerly does the mother look for the symptoms of returning life on the cheeks of her child, or does the beleaguered garrison scan the horizon for the first signal of the relieving squadrons, than did those wistful eyes seek for the promised signs.

And when at last, towards the close of the day, they descried them in the far distance, how glad their shouts, how buoyant their hearts, how ready their expressions of confidence in Moses! Their fatigues and complaints and privations were all forgotten, as with quickened pace they rushed to the margin of the wells. But, ah! how bitter was their disappointment and chagrin when the first long draught filled their mouths with bitterness, and they discovered that the water was too nauseous to drink!

So long as there was none to be got, they had managed to endure, but the disappointment was harder than they could bear, and they turned on Moses and murmured, "What shall we drink?" "They soon forgot His works." From minstrels they became mutineers.

Do we not all know something of the wilderness march? It may follow on some great deliverance. But how great a contrast there is between the rapturous hallelujahs of the one, and the wearying commonplace of the other! The start is both interesting and delightful, but it is so hard to plod on day after day, amid the dust of the shop, the glare of temptation, the pressure of grinding poverty, the routine of irksome toil. The wilderness is no child's play; it is meant to be our school, our training-ground, our arena, where we are being sternly and carefully educated for our great future. And then Marahs will come — bitter disappointments, heart-rending sorrow, as our ideals are shattered and our cherished plans torn to shreds. Ah me! it is better to plod on day by day without the vision of coming bliss than to awake to discover that it has been an unsubstantial mirage. The Marahs are permitted to prove us, or, in other words, to shew what is in us.

The songs that rang out on the shores of the Red Sea may remind us of the glad confidence with which, from the distance, we challenge the dangers and difficulties of coming days. But how soon we forget them in the weary desert march, and how quickly they turn to murmurings, if we meet with the least check to our hopes, and fond ambitions.

Youth has its disappointments. The schoolboy thinks himself a slave under tutors and governors, and counts the days when the schoolbooks shall be buried, and the schooldoor shut behind him for ever. But he is soon disillusionised as he finds himself compelled to tread the weary track of daily duty, and to plod from day to day in grinding toils. This disappointment is his first draught of Marah water.

Age, too, has its disappointments. When we have passed through some baptism of blood and fire, and stand at the commencement of some new enterprise, we persuade ourselves that there is now no further obstacle to complete success. A few easy stages and Canaan is ours. But it is not so. There is first the stony path, and then the bitter waters. The water is pellucid, but mingled with salts of copper, or some overshadowing tree has impregnated it with its bitter leaves. The rose is plucked, but there is a thorn in it. The house is bought, but the foundation gives. The son grows up, but he turns out amiss. The position is reached, but it is full of anxious care. This is to drink of Marah.

There is disappointment, too, for the young convert. Egypt is left with its tyranny; he knows that he has been redeemed by precious blood, and he fondly thinks that life henceforth will be for ever free and glad. He little thinks how stern the discipline must be before he has learnt his inability to realise the ideal on which he has set his heart. And as he finds that the will is present with him, while he has no power to perform, that his sanctification must be as much the work of grace as ever his justification was, he drinks of the bitter Marah water. What pilgrim to the New Jerusalem is there that has not visited those springs and mingled bitter tears with the bitter waters?

III. MOSES' RESOURCE.—"He cried unto the Lord." How much better this than to rebuke the people, or to threaten to throw up his appointment, or to sit down in despondency as utterly out of heart. The disciples of John, when they had buried their beloved leader, went and told Jesus. And in all ages the servants of God have been glad to turn from their discouragements and the ingratitude of those for whom they would have gladly laid down their lives, to Him whose heart is open to every moan, and whose love is over all and through all, and in all.

Beside each bitter Marah pool there grows a tree, which, when cast into the waters, makes them palatable and sweet. It is so ever. Poison and antidote, infection and cure, pain and medicine, are always close together. The word which saves is nigh even in the mouth and in the heart. We do not always see the sufficient grace, but it is there. Too occupied with our disappointment, we have no heart to seek for it, but when we cry, it is shown to our weary longing eyes.

And of what is that tree the type, if not of the cross of Jesus, which is the symbol, not only of our redemption, but of a yielded will? It was there that his obedience to the will of his Father reached its supreme manifestation. He became obedient to death, even the death of the cross. From that cross as from a pulpit He proclaims to men the blessedness of those whose wills are as true to the will of God, as the synchronized clock to Greenwich time. Nor is there anything that will so take the bitterness out of disappointment, and so make it palatable and even life-giving, as to look up from it to the cross, and to say, Not my will, but thine be done. Thy will is my weal. In thy will is my bliss.

What a constant lesson Moses was learning from day to day! God must indeed have become a living reality to him. He learnt God's ways; we are expressly told "that they were made known to him." And gradually he must have come to feel that the whole responsibility of the pilgrimage was on the great, broad shoulders of his Almighty Friend. Ah, fellow-workers, let us not carry the burdens of responsibilities arising out of his work. Our one thought should be to be on his track, and to be in living union with Himself. We may leave all the rest with Him. "In quietness and confidence shall be our strength."

IV. Elim.—There are more Elims in life than Marahs; and we encamp by them. We are not bidden to tarry at the one, but we may spend long blessed days at the other. How refreshing the shadow of those seventy palm-trees! How sweet the water of those twelve wells! How delightful those long restful days! You say that they will never come to you. Yes, but they will. They come to all tired souls. There is no desert-march without an Elim at last. The Lamb cannot fail to lead you by living fountains of water, and to wipe away all tears from your eyes, before you pass the gateway of pearl. He makes his sheep to lie down in pastures of tender grass, and leads them beside waters of rest. "Oh! magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together."

We must tread the desert, or we can never come to Elim. But the desert lends the Elim much of its bliss. The Castle of Doubting makes the vision from the Delectable Mountains so entrancing. The long illness makes the air so exquisite in the first-permitted walk or drive. The long winter snows paint the fairest colours on the spring flowers. Do not stay murmuring at Marah, press on, our Elim is within sight. Hope thou in God, for thou shalt yet praise him.

At Marah Moses received from God a glad, fresh revelation, that God would be the healer of his people in their wilderness march, securing them from the diseases of Egypt. Marvellous that such a message should be sent at such a time! But the grace of God is not restrained by human sin from making its glad surprises. And Elim was the vindication of the promise. What a God is ours! He overthrows our foes in the sea, and disciplines his people in the desert; He leads us over the burning sand, and rests us in luxuriant glades; He permits disappointment at Marah, and surprises us at Elim; He leads us by a cloud, but He speaks to us by a human voice; He counts the number of the stars, but He feeds his flock like a shepherd, and gently leads those that give suck. He proves by Marah at Elim and recruits us.

Among Jews in Paris.

Mr. L. C. Mamlock, missionary of the London Jews' Society in Paris, writes:—Our work is growing, and we have been obliged to increase the sitting accommodation at our hall, 2, Rue de Roi de Sicile. The lectures and Bible-classes have not only been maintained, but the Jews evince great interest in them. They have learned many of our Christian hymns, and join most heartily in the singing, such as "Come to the Saviour, make no delay," and "Knocking, knocking, who is there?" Many bring their children with them.

I am thankful to state that the Lord has again permitted me to gather some fruits of my labours. A well-to-do Jewish family, consisting of five members, who have attended my discourses, became so impressed with the truth of Christ that they requested me to give them a regular course of religious instruction, and afterwards desired to be prepared for baptism. I acceded to their request, and Pastor Theodore Monod, who is greatly interested in our work, baptized them in his church, St. Marie, on Jan. 9. The little group who surrounded the five new confessors of Christ was composed entirely of Hebrew Christians, most of them the fruits of my humble labours.

THE BRETON EVANGELICAL MISSION.

The year which has just closed has been most fruitful in blessing on the labours of the devoted band of workers in the Breton Evangelical Mission. Difficulties may reasonably be always expected, but those that are now most seriously felt are such as the steady, prayerful work of years has brought about. There is now practically no limit for extension of evangelistic work, and that with rich promises of usefulness. Many cases of conversion during the past year have been singularly interesting, including two Roman Catholic priests, whose unique abilities will, it is hoped, be used in extension of the work, if the Lord send the needful help for that purpose.

A quite unexpected, yet much desired advantage is placed within the reach of the Mission, by the kindly offer by the Baptist Missionary Society, who founded the Mission originally more than half a century ago, of the chapel, commodious house, and a plot of land adjoining of several acres, for the nominal sum of £200. Together with several institutional buildings, upon land abutting upon the Society's land, and given by Pasteur Lecoat, who owns some land at Tremel, these form the central station of the Mission, which carries on operations mainly westward as far as Brest and Carhaix. Towards securing this boon, the Chairman, Dr. Underhill, has promised £10, and other support has been promised by the committee and friends. The Mission is worked on very economical lines. A Bible carriage has been in successful work for some time, and an opportunity having arisen for the use of another, the appeal for it was answered at once by the gift of a very suitable vehicle. The appeal for funds to secure the chapel and premises now placed at the disposal of the Mission, will not, we are sure, be made in vain.

So violent is the persecution which our converts receive when they forsake the Church of Rome, that in this day it is perhaps without parallel anywhere. We are often obliged, for a time, to find employment for many who are driven from their homes, and the land which we propose to acquire will help in this direction, and also to train the boys in the orphanage. I shall be glad to answer inquiries regarding the work.

DR. BARNARDO'S INSTITUTIONS.

In accordance with a resolution of the committee, the twenty-fifth year of Dr. Barnardo's Homes was marked by the extension of the system to other towns, and already branches have been opened and are in full swing in Liverpool, Leeds, Plymouth, and Edinburgh, whilst plans are now being completed for the establishment of similar branches in Cardiff, Newcastle, Bath, Southampton, Dublin, and perhaps Aberdeen. In the first week of the New Year, Dr. Barnardo gave a free supper to twelve hundred slum children in Liverpool, and on the 16th inst. a similar entertainment was given in the Corn Exchange, Edinburgh, to 2100 of the poorest waifs of the town. The most remarkable development of the work has, however, been in the direction of boarding out, nearly 1500 young orphans being now placed out in rural homes with Christian people, and under godly oversight, all over the kingdom. In all there are now 4300 boys and girls maintained in the Homes, and this large number is being increased daily.

Gospel Hall, Bristol.

The seventeenth anniversary of the opening of the Gospel Hall in St. Nicholas-road has just been observed by two days' conference and prayer, which were richly enjoyed by many who gathered, not only from the city, but the suburbs around and towns adjacent.

The subjects suggested for consideration, "Waiting on God—Walking with God and Working for God," were dealt with in a most practical, spiritual and helpful manner. The afternoon of Wednesday was devoted to reports of the Lord's work abroad, by three missionaries from the regions beyond. Thus a deepened interest was awakened, and a spirit of sympathy manifested which unquestionably will lead to far-reaching and permanent results.

Several of our brethren who had hoped to have been present were prevented by illness, but the Divine Master was in our midst; and the language of most at the close of the meetings was, "Did not our hearts burn within us, while He talked with us...and while He opened to us the Scriptures?"

FAREWELL TO LADY MISSIONARIES.

A meeting was held on Tuesday last week at 51, Gordon-square, W.C., to bid God-speed to three lady missionaries who sailed for India two days later to work for the Zenana Bible and Medical Mission at their own charges.

Rev. A. R. Cavalier, in introducing the missionaries, said they were going to India at a time of special interest in the history of that country. The need of workers is very great, as the census last year showed that there were more than one hundred and thirty-nine millions of women in India. About thirty-seven years ago Dr. Murdoch visited India specially to promote educational work. At that time there were only twenty-eight thousand children at school in the whole country, whereas now there are four million! The progress of female education is most striking considering the great opposition it has had to encounter. In 1853 there were nine thousand girls at school, now there are about three hundred thousand. The Government are doing very little for the girls, leaving their education to the Missionaries.

Miss Horton, who is proceeding to Lucknow, and who has been in India before, said that if British people only knew the way the women of India were anxious to receive Christ, and how thankful they were to the missionaries and to the people in England for sending them, she was sure many would be anxious to go themselves.

Miss Pearce, proceeding to Jaunpur, spoke of the wonderful way in which God had spoken to her, and of the distinct call she had received to labour in India.

Miss Hibberd also spoke. She is going to Gorakhpur, where there is a population of four and three-quarter millions, to assist Miss Davies, these being the only English Zenana missionaries to work amongst the women of this vast district.

Lord Kinnaird, who presided, urged upon the missionaries that it was not required of them that they should undertake more work than they were able to do. It was painful to hear from time to time of the many missionaries who had to be invalided home simply because they had striven to do more than lay in their power.

Rev. F. H. Baring, rector of Kingsworthy, delivered a helpful valedictory address, and Mr. W. T. Paton, hon. finance secretary, commended the missionaries to God in prayer. The office of the Society is 2, Adelphi-terrace, W.C.

Hebrew Christians in London.

A large and earnest company of Hebrew Christians assembled in the Conference Hall, Old Montague-street, Whitechapel, E., on Thursday evening last week, being the twentieth annual gathering of converts from Judaism. Mr. J. P. Cohen, Chairman of the Hebrew Christian Prayer Union, who presided, said there was an impression abroad that there was no such a thing as a Christian Jew, but he rejoiced to know there were many, and that their number was increasing. Addresses were also delivered by Revs. A. Bernstein and A. L. Williams (Chaplain of the Episcopal Jews Chapel), Messrs. Mark Levy, James Rennie (General Superintendent of the City Mission), and Spiegel. The work of Mr. and Mrs. Ehrlich, in Whitechapel, has been the source from which many similar operations have sprung, and to this fact kindly reference was made by some of the speakers.

EXETER HALL EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.—Mr. J. McDonald, manager of this useful agency, writes:—"We were able last year to announce the establishment of this Bureau. During the twelve months upwards of thirteen thousand applicants were interviewed, but the result of strict inquiries as to character and capacity allowed of only 617 being placed upon the register, and appointments have been secured for 491. We undertake for an inclusive fee to advertise on behalf of employers, interview all candidates, selecting the best six for their choice. We are greatly extending the operations of the Bureau."

OLD FORD FACTORY GIRLS.—Mrs. Adamson writes from The Vicarage, Old Ford, E.:—"The contractors are pressing us for the balance due upon our Factory Girls Institute and Association Rooms. It amounts to £204, and seriously cripples us. Towards this I have just received a cheque for £25 from one who has long been a generous sympathiser in our work. The donor hopes that ten others will at once do as he has done. Our rooms are open every night, and a pleasant sight they present, so cosy and cheerful in their surroundings. Miss Rowland, their superintendent and friend, is always present, and also takes the several Bible classes. We have also recreation, sewing, and work of all kinds, and all things are sanctified by prayer."

The Wrongs of India,

BY LEGALISED VICE AND THE TRAFFIC IN OPIUM.

ATTENTION at the demonstration held in Exeter Hall on the evening of Tuesday, 12st inst., was mainly, if not solely, directed to the wrongs India is suffering at the hands of our administrators; but these "wrongs," it should be clearly understood, were moral, and not political. Two injuries being inflicted on our Eastern Empire were the special objects of attack, viz.: the Provision made for Vice, and the Opium Traffic. A little company of Indian gentlemen, now studying in London, were present to represent their people.

At the outset, a warmly sympathetic letter was read from the City Chamberlain, Mr. Benjamin Scott, F.R.A.S., who was to have presided, but was hindered by illness, and who, as many have heard with deep regret, died on Sabbath morning. In his note he expressed the hope that now we would see until the cause was won and the iniquities denounced put an end to.

Mr. ROBERT SCOTT (of Messrs. Morgan and Scott) filled the vacant chair, and in opening, said: I heartily sympathise with you in the enforced absence of the City Chamberlain—our much esteemed friend and coadjutor in this movement, as well as that of the C. D. Acts—and more especially as illness is the cause. I believe I speak the earnest desire of every heart here when I say that, if the Lord will, we should rejoice in Mr. Scott being speedily restored to health, and spared to see the final overthrow of those two gigantic evils concerning which we are now met.

The Chairman then referred to certain misleading and confusing paragraphs which had appeared in the Press. For example, The Standard of January 8 had a telegram from Calcutta stating that:

An official statement is published, in which the Government of India declares that, after full inquiry, it is able to give an emphatic denial to the alleged increase in the use of opium, and the existence of greater facilities for its sale. It has been decided to prohibit opium smoking, or the use of opium in any form, on licensed premises, a prohibition which already exists in the Punjaub and Central India.

On this Mr. SCOTT commented: This is a confusing and cleverly-worded paragraph. To the ordinary newspaper reader the course set forth as that which the Indian Government are about to pursue would appear to be a step in the right direction, but when read in the light of the longer paragraph, which I am about to submit to you, we are led to conclude that in the process of boiling down the long series of Government papers, The Standard has fallen into error.

Next came an account in The Times of a lengthy correspondence between the Supreme and the Provincial Administrations as to the Opium Trade, "the most remarkable feature of which is the opinion expressed by Sir A. Mackenzie, Chief Commissioner for Burmah, that the opium shops should be closed to all men of Burmese race, and that the possession of the drug in any quantity by them should be made illegal. The Governor-General naturally hesitated to accept this proposal, but replied that he was willing to sanction it, provided that he was first satisfied that the evil to be removed was as great as depicted, and that the enforcement of the prohibition would not cause greater evils."

The Governor-General naturally hesitated to accept this proposal. Why should he, in the face of an unhesitating opinion expressed in the clearest terms by a Chief Commissioner, based, no doubt, on the most careful observation? Sir A. Mackenzie, I should judge, is not the man to found such an emphatic opinion on hearsay evidence, or to risk his reputation on such a burning question by ill-considered or hasty proposals.

Mackenzie is the stamp of man which India needs in her officials, from the Governor-General downwards—men whose ears are open to the sighs and sorrows of the people, and who have understanding of the times.

The main resolution brought before the meeting was as follows:—

This meeting having heard confirmatory evidence of the demoralisement of the system of legalised sin in India, in defiance of the Resolution of the House of Commons, of June 5th, 1888, and of the declared instructions of Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India thereon, looks to the Imperial Government to insist upon strict obedience to their orders and to the spirit of the mandate of Parliament in this matter, that this demoralising system may be totally abolished in our Indian Empire, as it has already been in Great Britain.

Further. In regard to the devastating Anglo-Asiatic Opium Traffic, this meeting records its grief and condemnation at the continuance and participation of the British Government in India in the production and export of Opium, not for legitimate medical use, but primarily and almost exclusively for sensual and degrading purposes; this meeting claims for our Indian fellow-subjects not less protection against this drug than is accorded to the people of Great Britain under the Pharmacy Act of 1868, by which it is sold here, under restrictions pertaining to poisons; and this meeting declares that nothing will satisfy the Christian conscience of this land short of immediate and total prohibition of the growth, manufacture, and sale of Opium in India (except for strictly medicinal purposes) and of its export therefrom, that thus there may be an entire cessation of the wrong inflicted upon the peoples of India, Burmah, and China, in this respect.

Mr. A. S. DYER, in moving the above resolution, said: I will first refer to the infidel system of legalised sin. After more than fifteen years' struggle, the people of this country succeeded in sweeping that system out of Great Britain. It was then found that it had been established in a worse form in India, and in some of our Colonial possessions. The abolitionist agitation was renewed, until in June, 1888, the House of Commons, passed a resolution condemning any legislation which enjoined, authorised, or permitted the licensing or regulation in India of the sin of impurity.

The resolution was the result of the uprising of the Christian churches against the infamies perpetrated in the midst of heathen populations. The voice of God was heard through his people.

Upon the passing of that resolution, Imperial instructions were issued to British Administrators in India and the Crown Colonies, to bring their actions and ordinances into accord with it. Those instructions have been carried out to a large extent, I believe, in our Colonial possessions, thanks to the noble persistency of Lord Knutsford, the Secretary of State for the Colonies. In India it has been otherwise. There we have been given the promise, but deceived and MOCKED IN THE PERFORMANCE.

The Indian "Contagious Diseases Act" (so-called), and the old Cantonment Act, under which licensed sin was carried on prior to June, 1888, have, it is true, been repealed; but a new Cantonment Act has been put in force by the Viceroy in Council, which has revived nearly all the infamies and iniquities of the previous laws.

The Imperial Government of England, it appears, are loth to believe that their instructions are being disobeyed, for no result has followed the representations made to them by committees of two of the largest religious bodies in this kingdom—the Free Church of Scotland, and the Wesleyan Methodists. It has therefore become necessary to make a more public protest. It has become necessary to place some of the serious and condemning facts over against the false professions of British administrators in India; and thus to recall to arms, before the general election, the strong and determined party of Social Purity and National Righteousness.

Here the speaker went on to describe unutterably sad and pitiful scenes witnessed in the "Serai" barracks, built, owned, and maintained by Government, contiguous to the camp or station, and expressly for fallen women, whose numbers, moreover, are, it seems, deliberately recruited, mainly from girl-widows, by a "Mahaldanee," a woman who is paid to oversee the whole and to find, it is said, fresh victims. We cannot give the details in our pages, but this summary of the facts of the case will stir many hearts and raise, we doubt not, a loud cry and firm demand that as indeed it was understood would be the effect of the resolution passed by the House of Commons in 1888 and referred to above.

Passing next to the Opium question Mr. Dyer referred to recent despatches and paragraphs in the press which he maintained gave an entirely erroneous view of the facts. Dealing with the the speaker said: "Let us put our finger upon the initial iniquity of it. It is this. That the Government of India cause to be grown, and themselves manufacture, at their own factories, this poisonous drug, not for legitimate medical use, but for voluptuous, for sensual, for degrading purposes.

Opium, as five thousand doctors in Great Britain have declared in substance during the past three weeks, has no legitimate use other than for medicinal objects, but the Government of India produce and sell it for broadcast consumption in India, in Burmah, in China, in the Dutch possessions in the East, in other parts of Asia, and now in Africa as well.

Every one who has gone into the subject knows that the opium habit and impure thoughts and actions go together. Opium and impurity are twin devils. I therefore charge the British Government in India, before God and humanity, with pandering to the vilest and most destructive passions of mankind.

We cannot listen to proposals from the Government of India to cease, by instalments, from their crime against populations embracing half the human race. Total and immediate prohibition of the opium traffic, except for purely medical purposes, is the demand which we make. In that demand we must and shall persist. We shall accept nothing less.

With a determination born of religious conviction and the deepest sense of duty, let us count it an honour to be permitted to make sacrifices in so great and holy a cause; let us march forward—it will be a march to early victory, for "behold God Himself is with us for our Captain."

BRIGADE-SURGEON R. PRINGLE, M.D., who seconded the resolution, began by explaining that the "wrongs of India" protested against were in no sense political—else as an old soldier and servant of Queen and country he could not stand on that platform. They were moral wrongs, and therefore he had full right to plead the cause of the soldiers and natives. As a medical officer of long experience he challenged any one to meet him on a public platform and maintain that the "Cantonment Acts" were necessary to the health of the soldiers. Now, as ever, the secret of health and happiness lay in—to use the words of Scripture—"denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, and living soberly, righteously and godly in this present world." Any one who had witnessed the scenes in the Cantonments when cholera was raging must have been struck by the difference between the men whose hearts were stayed on God, and those poor fellows who had to rush to the canteen to drown their fears. Then followed a passing reference to the "Harbours of Refuge," little temperance resorts opened near many of the camps under the auspices of the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Association and with the approval of Gen. Sir F. Roberts.

As to the false, miserable ideas of sanitation on which the Cantonment Acts were based, the speaker denounced them as unscientific and unsound, declaring them a relic of the days when woman was the slave of man. He could not understand how any, in face of the Book they profess to believe, could defend these Acts and their operation in India. Besides, he pointed out, an order went forth from this country forbidding the licensing of dens of iniquity, and that order has not been carried out.

As to the Opium question it was difficult to speak calmly. Once there was a king in Israel whose epitaph is "Jeroboam who made Israel to sin"; so might it be said that and that in a cold-blooded, systematic manner such as the world has never known. Even the Thuggee system could not be compared with this deliberate setting about to poison humanity for the sake of revenue. The procedure revealed in Governmental reports for the cultivation of the opium habit, justified, the speaker felt, these strong words. Moreover, the report made by Sir Charles Aitchison, and more lately by Sir A. Mackenzie, as to the state of things in Burmah, prove there is no exaggeration in the charges now made.

"THIS COUNTRY HAS MADE ASIA TO SIN,"

Another and serious point was that the noble Christian work our representatives are doing in India and China is by the opium trade with its demoralising and corrupting accompaniments.

But how is it to be stopped? Some say it is impossible; but with God all things are possible. Let us bring Him our prayers and efforts, and see if He will not open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing. We are resolved to do nothing to keep back the full flow of the Gospel.

MRS. MAURICE GREGORY, in supporting the resolution, said: I have seen something of Gospel work among soldiers in India, having visited most of the military cantonments in North India, where we had large meetings, and were assisted in many places by bands of earnest Christian soldiers. I have found the soldiers simple-minded and impressionable fellows, and by no means hardened sinners; though many, alas! become so, ere their time expires. Away from home and mother, surrounded by the vilest temptations placed in the midst of their camp often by the Government, we cannot wonder that they fall sadly, and by-and-by return home to corrupt others. At many of our meetings we had soldiers professing conversion, but not a few fell away through great temptation. Young men convicted of sin, have told us, "It is no use trying, we are bound to fall; it seems almost forced upon us."

I have often pondered, with pain and shame, the contrast between a British camp and a native camp, where no such temptations are permitted.

THE DISTINCTION IS STARTLING,

and we cannot wonder that the poor, ignorant natives have come to look upon immorality as an essential part of the system of Christianity, and thus our holy religion is brought into contempt. The question now seems to be, What can we do to undo the wrong, and manifest aright the pure and holy Jesus, who is separate from sinners?

The resolution having been enthusiastically adopted,

Miss Soondebbai Powar, in the course of a touching plea on behalf of her sisters, said: Have you ever heard of a prince or governor who resolved to DESTROY HIS OWN PEOPLE?

No, you never did; but I have, and it is our own India. Great Britain has taken the position of Governor of India, has undertaken to educate and civilise our people, but, at the same time, has given ten thousand licences, and employed ten thousand men to go about every city and village and poison its own subjects; and lest they should not be active enough in killing the people, it inflicts a heavy fine if they do not get rid of enough of the poison.

Now the Lord Jesus said, "Go ye and preach the Gospel to every creature," and you are sending missionaries to preach to our people; but with these missionaries come men, sent by Christians, to do their best to destroy us. There are millions of children crying for food who cannot have it because their father has been taught to waste his money on opium. There are millions of broken-hearted women spending their days in misery, because their husbands have been poisoned by the agents of the Government. This opium destroys both body and soul.

Then there are those who try to cultivate the taste for it, and we have heard of the drug put into tea and gruel for this purpose. Thus women and children are acquiring the taste; and even the English are not safe. We hear of nurses giving opium to the children they have in charge. My own sister's baby was nearly killed in this way. So we are not safe, our children are not safe; and if we are not safe in our own country, where shall we go for safety? If things go on as now, and where, then, will your revenue come from, if India is ruined? There are those who say opium is good for the Indian constitution. Yes; good for the revenue, but not for the people. If you were to try a few grains, you would know how good it is for you. I have read my Bible often, but have never found where it says that poison is good for Chinese and Indians, but bad for English.

WE SHALL BE RUINED IN A FEW YEARS,

Then we have heard terrible things this evening as to women kept by Government in order to find young women and girl-widows for your soldiers. We know something of that, and we ask, Can it be your wish that such things should be done? I have a noble lady friend (Pandita Ramabai) who is giving life, and strength, and money to save these poor widows, and all the time your Government is taking them, and instead of doing good to them is destroying them. I am sure you in England, hearing of these things, cannot sit quiet. I feel certain you demand of your Government a complete change; for if you cannot rule India justly and righteously, the best plan is to give it up.

Rev. Joseph Adams, who has spent seventeen years in China and Burmah, moved a resolution of cheer and sympathy to be sent to fellow-workers in the East, and in so doing drew from personal experience between the state of things in Upper Burmah under heathen rule and prior to the British annexation, and things as they are now since the English have admitted opium, formerly strictly forbidden and vigorously repressed. The contrast, as presented by the speaker, was certainly sadly humiliating to us at home. That good in other ways had been done was not for a moment denied, but the introduction of opium—even though it be nominally only for the Chinese in Burmah—is working incalculable injury. In a few closing words, the speaker further dwelt on the wrong done to China and told something of what he had seen of the ruinous results of the opium drug.

Dr. J. L. Maxwell, in seconding the resolution, urged specially the consideration that the with disastrous effects, for in the Straits Settlements and Australia Chinamen are introducing the drug and cultivating a taste for it. Thus God's hand is bringing home to us the evil we have wrought in China. If anything is to be done at all, it must be done now, else soon it will be too late.

The resolution having been adopted, the proceedings were concluded with prayer.

CHINA'S CRY TO ENGLAND.

By Rev. Richard Glover, M.A.,
Vicar of St. Luke's, West Holloway.

We call from the land of Sinim,
List to our wail of woe,
O brothers, who dwell o'er the Western sea,
Who wish us your Christ to know,
But whose ships are black with death
In your greed of earthly gain,
And who leave us the bodies so gaunt and grim
Of our fathers and brothers slain!

O hear our piteous wail,
Land of the Western sea,
And let your sons, if their hearts can feel,
Respond to our agony!
O send us your ships no more,
If burdens like these they bear,
Leave, leave us in darkness, if this be your light,
And evangelise otherwhere!

We send you the herb that cheers
At the wholesome, social bowl,
And instead you send us the cursed drug
That ruins body and soul;
You fatten upon our vice,
You batten upon our sin,
And then with hypocrite face you beg
That we let your Christ come in!

For a Christ like this, shall we leave
Confucius, Brahm, or Buddh?
Ah, no! if this be your better way,
We prefer the lesser good!
How can we your Book regard
With other than proud disdain,
That your right hand holds, while your left conceals
The terrible poppy bane?

Is this the fruit that your Gospel grows—
The death's head poppy bloom?
Is this the thing that will save our souls—
This Gospel of earthly doom?
Is this the way you would have us learn
The worth of your Gospel plan?
O, blessèd is hate, if this is to love
The soul of your brother man!

Yet our brothers, who love your Christ,
Say these are not Christians true,
And that some of you look with burning shame
On these deeds their brethren do.
Ah! if it be so, to them
We appeal with tearful eye
To stop the accursed Judas-trade,
At the voice of China's cry!

"SUNDAY CARS."—After some earnest and animated discussion the ratepayers of Toronto have decided, by a majority of 4200, that no street-cars be permitted to run on the Lord's Day.

THE THEATRICAL MISSION has been very busy at this season. The commodious Institute, providing a safe and homely place of rest for the young women, seems increasingly appreciated, and the work is being much blessed. Nearly two hundred of the theatrical children lately had their giant Christmas-tree, and the opportunity was taken for "a straight talk" on the "Gift of God." Their fathers and mothers were entertained and instructed with dissolving views another evening, and Mr. Wilson, the secretary, pleaded earnestly with these parents to yield themselves to the Saviour. Outside "Macready House" gatherings are being arranged for the employées in places of amusement North, South, and West of London, while both the Italians and English engaged in "Venice at Olympia" have been cared for. The provision of shawls for these young people, who are thereby saved from draughts and cold during their "waits," is an instance of practical Christianity which has commended the work of the committee of the Mission.

MR. STANLEY SMITH ON HIS WORK.

Allow me to thank you for your most kind words relative to myself and the men with whom it was my privilege to go out in 1885. It may not be out of place to thank (through your paper) the many friends in England who have remembered us in prayer, and largely, no doubt, in answer to whose prayers we have all hitherto been kept in the grace of God.

Five of the seven are now working in China, and one, Mr. Arthur Polhill Turner, is on his way home for needed change. I write more particularly to touch on a few points in the notice of my address which occurs in your issue of January 14. The province in which I have been working is Shansi. In my address I did not touch on the amount of opium which was grown there. But I said that the province of Sz Ch'uen a few years ago (1881) grew enough opium to supply its own smokers' needs, and exported into the other provinces more than twice the whole amount of opium exported from India to China in that year. The phrase that Indian opium "is very little seen inland" should read, "is not much seen away from the sphere of treaty port influence and the capital—Peking."

But I want particularly to comment on the words: "Three hundred men and fifty women had passed through his refuge, but that did not mean either that all had become Christians, nor that they had all given up opium." The impression given by such language to an ordinary reader would be that, at any rate, several—if not many—of these had "become Christians." I would take the first opportunity I have of stating that I could not guarantee that a single one of these had either become Christians or permanently broken off the opium habit.

It is true that, during the last year I was in my new station, Lu-ch'eng—at which place I have been for over a year and a-half—that seventy men, whose names and addresses I have, have during that time made public profession that they wished to leave sin and turn to God, and of these the majority would be men who had been in my opium refuge. But several of these are known to me to be unsatisfactory; many live so far away (we have opium patients coming from distances of over one hundred miles) that I have no certain knowledge of their state; while of others there are some hopes that God's Holy Spirit is working in their hearts.

However, if you take "a Christian" or a disciple of Christ to be one who "denies himself, and takes up his cross daily and follows Christ;" who loves God and his fellow-men disinterestedly; who counts it "more blessed to give than to receive"; then, judged by such standards, I have at present solid, well-grounded hopes of none of the above-named, but one such has been baptized after two years of Christian profession and consistent walk.

It is true that I have seen much discouragement, especially in the last three years of life in China. But I trust that no one will imagine that I am in the least discouraged. I desire earnestly to be again in the field when my health will permit; and shall go out just as full of hope and determination by God's help to do what I can to save some Chinese as when I first went out. Every work has its "Rubicon." It is only a matter of time and plodding love, and that Rubicon will be passed. In many parts of China there seems real ground for encouragement and praise. God's word must see fulfilment. "These (shall come) from the land of Sinim."—Yours very sincerely, Stanley P. Smith.

THE FIRST PROTESTANT IN JAPAN.—A native Japanese Christian periodical recently told the story of the first Protestant Christian in Japan. This was one Murata, a military retainer of the lord of Saga, in the southern island of Kiushiu. In 1860 he went to Nagasaki by order of his chief, and one evening, as he was crossing the harbour in a boat, he picked up a book that was floating about in the water. The writing ran from side to side, "like the crawling of crabs," and upon sending it to one of the Dutch then settled at Nagasaki, he learned that it was the Christian Bible, then a proscribed book. Curiosity spurred him on, and he had one of his assistants learn the language of the book and translate it for him sentence by sentence. His study was continued in secret, with a few friends, after his return home. When a difficult passage was found a messenger was sent to Dr. Verbeck, a well-known missionary then in Nagasaki, for its interpretation. Murata was afterwards baptized, and his name now stands first on the roll of Protestant Christians in Japan.

For the Young.

WHICH WAS THE HAPPIER?

Jane and Mary started out for a walk one afternoon. They were schoolmates, and were often together, for their parents were old friends. The two children were very different in disposition, in spite of their intimacy, for Jane was inclined to be haughty, while Mary was sweet and gentle.

The two little girls were walking along, wondering what they would buy with their pocket money. While they were walking they came to a poor little girl sitting upon the curbstone selling dolls. Mary stopped to speak to her; she looked so pale and tired.

"Oh! come on, Mary," said Jane. "Don't waste your time over beggars;" but Mary would not go on until she had found out where the little girl lived and something about her. She then took her allowance from her pocket and gave it to her. The poor child could hardly thank her, and wanted her to take her dolls, but Mary said,

"No, I do not want the dolls, sell them and buy something for yourself with the money I gave you."

"Well," said Jane, walking haughtily off, "you are very silly, Mary, to believe the story of every beggar you see, and, besides, you needn't have given all your money."

"I couldn't help it, Jane, she is so sick and needy," said Mary.

When Mary went home, she told her parents about the little girl and where she lived. Mamma went to see her, and soon made her more comfortable.

Whom do you think was the happier—Jane, who bought something to please herself, or Mary, who gave to one in need?

LONDON RAGGED SCHOOLS.

A QUESTION TO CHRISTIANS.

TENS of thousand boys and girls,
London's hope—or sorrow,
Urgent help they need to-day—
They'll be gone to-morrow.
Waifs and strays, your neighbours they,
Guess you what will mend them?
Sympathy and kindly aid—
Will you, will you send them?

"Suffer them to come to Me,"
Ever Christ exclaimeth;
Guest-rooms are these Ragged Schools,
Where He entertaineth.
Truly they are ragged rooms!
Guess you what will mend them?
Golden guineas in a purse—
Will you, will you send them?

Ragged though the schools may be,
Think of their attraction,
Sunshine gleams through every chink,
Love in every action.
Ragged clothes and ragged lives!
Guess you what will mend them?
Bank notes make a pretty patch—
Will you, will you send them?

Stretch to Christ the hand of faith,
Sight He gives for blindness;
Every child that God hath made,
Answers "Yes" to kindness.
Ragged lives and broken hearts!
Guess you what will mend them?
Nothing short of you and yours,
Christlike, come ye, send them.

WILLIAM MAIN.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., Jan. 24, Philippians i. 1-17; Mon., Jan. 25, i. 18-30; Tues., Jan. 26, ii. 1-13; Wed., Jan. 27, ii. 14-30; Thurs., Jan. 28, iii. 1-12; Fri., Jan. 29, iii. 13-21; Sat., Jan. 30, iv. 1-9.

CHILDREN'S MISSION AT HAMPSTEAD.—A fortnight's Mission for Young People has just been concluded by Mr. Lewes Sayer in the Lyndhurst-road Church. The attendances were, of course, considerably affected by the prevailing epidemic, but there were not wanting tokens of deep and gracious work in many a young heart. The many workers and teachers in connection with the church were specially helped and blessed, the nightly prayer-meeting being a means of grace to many. Special meetings for boys and girls were held, also were portfolio, essay, and similar competitions. One deeply interesting feature of the work was the bringing in by the children, at Mr. Sayer's invitation of large numbers of toys, books, warm garments, &c., for their poorer brothers and sisters elsewhere.

MISSION FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

During the week ending January 8 Mr. Newton Jones, Missioner from the Sunday-School Union, London, held a very successful series of evangelistic services, both for children and adults, at the Congregational School Hall, Godalming. Notwithstanding a great deal of illness in the town and neighbourhood, the meetings were well attended, and many of the children opened their hearts to the Saviour. At the adult meetings also souls were won for the Master.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. H. Hutchinson, Wesleyan School, Holly-park, Crouch-hill, Jan. 15 to 23, at 6.30; St. John's, Highbury, Jan. 28 to Feb. 5; Finsbury-park Congregational Church, Feb. 7 to 12; Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, Presbyterian Church, Wandsworth, Jan. 24 to 29; St. Mary's Hall, Merton, Feb. 7 to 17; Mr. Josiah Spiers, Sevenoaks, Jan. 22 to Feb. 8; Mr. A. G. Dodderidge, Holy Trinity Schools, Richmond, Jan 18 to 30, at 6 p.m.; Mr. Geo. Goodman, Markham-square Congregational Church, Chelsea, Jan. 17 to 23; Mr. Livesey Carrott, Athenæum, Camden-road, every Sunday at 3 p.m.

IN PERSIAN VILLAGES.

MRS. POTTER wrote lately from a village near Teheran:—I have never had so happy and busy a year. We are still in this mountain village rusticating. We have with us only the very necessary things for our comfort, and are living quietly and restfully; I hope storing up strength for the winter. Our children have had so much fever since our return to Persia that I was almost desperate; if this thorough change does not break it up, I shall be quite so. Though only about twenty miles from the city, we are two thousand feet higher than Teheran, and have consequently a good deal of hill to travel up and down in going or coming. It will be hard for you to realise that twenty miles is far from anywhere, but with no means of transportation except horses and donkeys, we feel that it is a very long distance, particularly on mail days.

MOHAMMEDAN DARKNESS.

We are not idle, and did not come with only the idea of our own pleasure. One of the chief reasons was to reach this and perhaps other villages with the Gospel message, and in getting hold of the women I have succeeded quite as well as I had hoped. Each day they gather about me, either here or out under the trees, and listen to my "Book." I think in this way and in my walks I must have given the good news of salvation to nearly all the women of this village. They listen and rarely disapprove of what I say, but when most convinced that I am speaking the truth, they seem to pity me, and pray that I may soon dream of seeing their Prophet, and so become a true believer in Islam! To tell them of a higher spiritual life seems to me almost like telling an animal of human life and intelligence. I feel more and more that these Mohammedans must be raised above that life which they now have and which is mere existence, before they can even understand salvation. One feels in saying the most simple things about faith and the works of the Spirit, that she is talking far above their thoughts and comprehension. It seems to me that is exactly what Christ meant by the "new birth" in his talk with Nicodemus.

We need to keep close to Christ and walk slowly. To denounce or even speak derogatively of Mohammed would make enemies of these woman at once, though they show such friendliness now. Yet how discouraging it is to tell them as earnestly as you can of their great need, God's love and their redemption by Christ, and then to see by their faces, their words, perhaps their sneer, that not one thought of this has reached their mind—no one can understand who has not hopestly tried.

THE SHAH'S TRAIN.

We are indebted to a rich Persian official in Teheran for the use of his palace during our stay here in Afcha, and are permitted to stay as long as we choose, except that it was stipulated we should give up the place to the Shah's use whenever he passed through here as he was expected to do. This gave us considerable excitement and trouble, for the owner sent masons to fix up in preparation, which obliged us to move from one room to another repeatedly. After all, His Majesty did not come this way. His harem, however, moved down through the pass and valley and we saw the whole train. It was a sight to be remembered, as it gave us a clear idea of the immense crowd of followers the Shah has with him on these journeys. No wonder the villagers dread his coming. Some of the farmers here cut their grain before it was ripe for fear of losing their whole crop. The train of laden animals, horsemen, and mounted women was long enough to keep a continual passing for eight hours.

WOMEN'S PROTESTANT UNION.

AN encouraging statement of progress was made by Mrs. ARBUTHNOT, hon. sec. of this Union, at a meeting in Exeter Hall on Thursday evening last week, for the first of a series of free "Instruction Lectures," open to both sexes, which are to be held throughout the year, in the same place, in connection with the Union. Meetings for prayer (women only) are also arranged.

Mrs. ARBUTHNOT'S address revealed the fact that the Union now has nearly a thousand members, most of whom have been added since the Brighton Congress last October. As the spread of Romish error has been largely due to the public and private influence of women, it is felt needful to band together Christian ladies for prayerful and personal local effort in the endeavour to counteract Romish undermining of the spiritual, moral, and social liberties of England. In thus uniting women of every class and denomination, the Union seeks to avoid personalities, to depend upon spiritual weapons of warfare, and to co-operate with all other established associations having the cause of Protestantism at heart. Instances of the good work which the Union is doing were mentioned, such as dissuading from attendance at a Ritualistic Church, change of mind concerning entrance into a convent, and the successful inculcation of right principles with regard to tempting but poisoned advantages offered in the way of education for children by Ritualists. Particulars respecting meetings, cards of membership, plans of work, and the proposed monthly magazine, may be had from Mrs ARBUTHNOT, Plawhatch, East Grinstead.

After a few words from the CHAIRMAN (Rev. W. Lancelot Holland, M.A.), in which he referred to the unpopularity of a decided, individual stand on Protestant lines,

Rev. Dr. GRATTAN GUINNESS read a lecture on "The Root of the Evil: the Genius of the Papacy in Relation to Doctrine." The Bible order, he said, is that practice shall flow from doctrine. The distinctive and erroneous doctrines of the Church of Rome are not found in the Word of God, but are gradual growths springing from corrupt practices, and have their roots in the evil dispositions of the natural man, who is a compound of conscience and carnality. Rome's so-called religion is adjusted with the view of making sin safe; hence its hold upon the minds of millions. Christendom has repeated Judaism's corruption of divine religion, so that every feature of Jewish apostacy is reproduced and exaggerated in "Christian" history. Whence comes the likeness but from the corrupt tendencies of human nature? The Word of God is particularly fitted for the present instruction and guidance of the whole Church of God, from the fact that more than half of the Book is occupied with the history of the Jews, there being not only a profoundly instructive anology between such history and that of Christendom, but the analogy also applies to the life of the individual Christian.

Dr. GUINNESS proceeded to trace type and anti-type through three stages in the history of God's ancient people, namely, as Hebrews, Israelites, and Jews, compared with the respective historic periods of Christian martyrdom, the deliverance of believers from the persecutions of heathen Rome, the time of great apostacy in the form of imperial Christianity, and the restoration of a remnant at the Reformation.

Moreover, Rome is not only carnal, but is also superhuman, the masterpiece of Satan, who was a liar and a murderer from the beginning. To contend against such a power the whole armour of God is needful. The soul-destroying consequences of neglecting the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, are clearly seen in the life of Cardinal Newman, who, by his own showing, allowed himself to be guided in the most important matters of life by men who hated the Bible. Striking examples of Rome's wicked exaltation of human nature, even above God Himself, are seen in her errors concerning the immaculate conception of a woman and the infallibility of a man.

The lecture concluded with a graphic sketch of the personal experiences upon which Dr. GUINNESS has founded his latest book, "The City of the Seven Hills," of which publication he has prepared a cheap edition at 1s., for sale at Protestant meetings.

ISLINGTON CLERICAL MEETING.

There was a large attendance at the Islington Clerical Meeting on Tuesday last week, under the presidency of the Vicar of Islington, Rev. W. H. Barlow.

The Dean of Norwich read a very instructive paper on the importance of declaring all the counsel of God in public ministration. Having shown that rich as well as poor, learned as well as ignorant, stand in need of evangelisation, he said: The acceptance of the counsel of God vitalises the spirit, rectifies the conscience, regenerates the inner being, and, by restraining the power of sin, turns the forces of the soul to higher and nobler ends, which are assuredly expressed in conditions which prove the right of Christianity to be regarded as the only scheme by which social regeneration can be secured.

Referring to "the sameness of sermons," he showed that the themes available to the preacher are innumerable. Dealing with modern criticism of the Old Testament, he said: One cannot but be impressed with the constancy and the thoroughness with which destructive criticism assails the Pentateuch, which, singularly enough, records the first sceptical criticism upon the Word of God, in the inquiry, "Hath God said?" and from which our Blessed Lord drew the power-words with which the same assailant was overcome when he said, "It is written." We must patiently and lovingly declare all the counsel of God. We must show the inter-relativity of the Old and the New Testaments, the organic oneness of Scripture, and consequently that—supposing the conclusions of yesterday were beyond challenge, were free of bias, and did not rest in nineteenth-century impatience of the supernatural—to surrender verses and chapters and sections of this book or of that does not mean that alone; it means the disintegration of the whole.

Think calmly, as we must, of what the mythical theory of the early chapters of the Bible means. The Mosaic account of creation; its relativity to the opening words of the Fourth Gospel; the anticipations of modern science which are seen in the first page of the Book of Genesis; the preparedness of the world for the appearance of man made in the image of God; the Divine Sabbath; the institution of marriage; the fall of our first parents; its consequences to them, to nature, to the human race; the promise of deliverance in the seed of the woman; the dual offering of Cain and Abel—the naturalism of the one, and the "more acceptableness" of the other; the longevity of the Adamic patriarchs; the birth, life, death of Enoch, the primary prophet of the Second Advent of Christ; Noah, the Ark, his deliverance, his fall, and the renewal of the covenant; the confusion of tongues, and so forth—these are some of the facts which, at the bidding of good and studious men, we are asked to regard as mythical. But the whole counsel of God warns us that many of these newly-designated "myths" are treated as history by the Holy Spirit, are cited as history by Jesus Christ, and it is not too much to say that the noble structure of Pauline theology reposes upon the historical reality of the Fall of Man. If the third of Genesis is a myth, the fifth of Romans is an Apostolic hallucination. If the Mosaic history of creation is mythical, how shall we regard its repetition on Mount Sinai, amid every conceivable solemnity, at the conclusion of the Fourth Commandment—"For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the seventh day and hallowed it"? And remember, these words are prefaced by others, "God spake these words, and said." The address was listened to with great profit.

Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe, in an address on the importance of personal and individual dealing with souls, said: It is just as much as a man knows of God that that man will display of God; and it is just as much as a man really lives Christ that he will carry the Christ to others wherever he goes. A man who is really exhibiting the Christ must be one who is perfectly conscious of having received the Christ life, and there must be no question whatever. Whether we have to deal with the poor troubled souls that come to seek us in the privacy of our homes, or whether it be those with whom we have to deal in the daily routine of our pastoral visitation, in either case all that we ministers of the Gospel have to discover is the need of the souls at that moment, the condition of disease that exists within; to show, to display the remedy that is found in Christ Jesus, and there and then to offer to the sinner the perfection of God's pardon, without any intermediary, simply in and through the Lord Jesus Christ, the perfection of the power of Christ, to enable him for the future, if he will trust himself to the Saviour.

A paper, by Rev. H. C. G. Moule, on "Personal Consecration," was read in the absence of the writer through illness. Rev. Hubert Brooke followed on the same subject. Addresses of a helpful character, reported at length in last week's Record, were also delivered by Revs. W. H. Barlow, E. A. Knox, and H. W. Dearden, Canon Hoare, and F. E. Wigram.

FROM DR. E. P. GOODWIN, CHICAGO.

Pastor Frank H. White has received the following letter from the faithful brother who was so ill-received here last year:—

My dear brother White,—I regret sincerely that I was unable to preach for your people. I spent but one Sabbath in London on my return, and devoted that to the examination of mission work in the eastern part of the city. I trust your health has been fully restored, or that you will soon be able, if not so already, to assume the full duties of your pastorate. The world needs just such testimonies as your pulpit gives, and all the more that so many in the pulpits far and wide are preaching another gospel. I have no reason to be discouraged, nor have you. So long as He in whom our hope is is with us, there must be always abundant cheer. If He owns our testimony little matter what men may think of it.

It is a matter of great regret that so many have lost their confidence in the authority of God's Word. It seems to me that the tendency of our times is to weaken very greatly the faith of the Lord's people in the Bible as the Word of God. Certainly they cannot be taught to discriminate between portions of it without losing much faith in it as being a revelation from God. It will only speak to them with the voice of God when it is accepted as the direct utterance of God, fully inspired divinely infallible, authoritative. I believe fully, as I said in the Council, that the Holy Spirit who gave us the word knew all truth—knew it as well in the day of Moses as in the day of John, or as He knows it now; and therefore, although He was not giving us a book on science, or chronology, or history, &c., that whenever He gave any testimony to those whom He inspired, He gave the truth, and the infallible truth, and upon that foundation I believe we may stand, and without fear of all the disclosures of science or all the reasonings of philosophy. Certainly, I expect to stand there so long as I am permitted to testify.

And one thing impresses me more and more, that the human heart needs just this old Gospel, not one jot or tittle of its testimonies of any kind modified. Men are to be saved by the truth in its fulness, just as they were saved in the day of Paul and of Christ. The human heart is just as deceitful and desperately wicked to-day as it ever was. There is no difference; all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God, and the only hope is to preach to them the truth that, for all ages, is the wisdom and the power of God unto salvation. May your life long be spared to testify to these things.—With affectionate regards, sincerely yours,

Edward P. Goodwin,
Pastor First Congregational Church.
Chicago.

LEWES, SUSSEX.—The Railway Mission has completed its first year's work, and the results are highly satisfactory. Great help has been rendered to the railway men who have needed aid.

SAFFRON WALDEN.—It is proposed to start a branch of the Y.M.C.A. at Saffron Walden, and nearly 130 names have been given in for membership. By the kindness of three friends £130 has been secured.

ITALIANS IN LONDON.—Services in the Italian language were started on Sunday, January 10, in the Church of the Holy Trinity, 260, Gray's Inn-road; and they will be held every Sunday afternoon at 4.30. The minister in charge is Rev. Dr. Constantine Stauder, an Italian by birth, but, for several years past, a clergyman of the Church of England. Of the large number of Italians residing in the vicinity of Holborn, Gray's Inn-road, and Clerkenwell, only a few are in sympathy with the Church of Rome. Signor Constantine Stauder hopes to unite the parochial work and the educational care of the Italian children. A school home is needed to shelter them, and bring them up in the Protestant faith.

WORK IN SOUTH AMERICA.

THE INTERIOR OF BRAZIL.

As to the work of the Brazil Inland Mission, we have received the following from Juiz de Fora, Minas Geraes, Brazil:—

Political affairs here are far from satisfactory, but so far it has not hindered the work of the Gospel, although it has caused much suffering and dissatisfaction amongst the mass of the people, owing to the exhorbitant price of all eatables, fuel, and clothing. We are pushing out our work here, "but the labourers are few." More men is our great need, and until we get them we cannot reach the thousands who are crying out for the "Bread of Life." We have regular preaching at three different parts of the city. Our members are all working, and some of them holding little meetings among their neighbours, and the good seed is being scattered all over this city. We have mapped out the city in lots, and each member takes a lot, a square of so many streets, and visits it often enough to reach every house once a month, giving tracts, books, and invitations to the meetings. We have also started open-air work again, and so far have had no trouble. Still I am not satisfied, being convinced that we should push out and visit the towns along the Central Railroad, where the Gospel has never yet been preached. To start the New Year we hope to make a trip of weeks, and perhaps months, going from here to the end of the line, and then following the River S. Francisco to Bahia. To make this trip we need a boat of our own so as to stop where we like, and stay as long as we like. I have seen a "Berthon Collapsable Boat" at Morro Velho, and the owner told me that it was the best and safest for these rivers. With a boat of that sort we could visit every town and village along the river, preach the Gospel, and scatter the written Word of God. Should any of the readers of The Christian desire to help us get a boat, we shall be glad to receive their contributions. We are rejoiced to know that Mr. Maxwell Wright is to return to Brazil. We hope other workers will come with him. E. H. Sofer.

THE RIO DE LA PLATA.

We are favoured with the following extracts translated from the last annual Spanish address of the Superintendent of the American Methodist Episcopal Mission in South America. Many will be glad to read such notes on the Lord's work in the Spanish Republics:—

The outward conditions under which our work goes forward have suffered few changes during the past year. The crisis continues without any sign of termination. Commerce at a low ebb, industries languishing, and public works paralysed, have produced scarceness of work.

The revelations of corruption and bad administration have destroyed the faith of the people in their governors, and many say "Who will show us any good?" In the middle of this general disquietude resulting from the want of the fear of God and respect of the law, our evangelical work has continued its upward march. Our brotherhood have participated in the general trouble, but even in this is shown the truth of the Scripture which says (1 Tim. iv. 8) "Godliness . . . hath promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come," for they have suffered less than the people in general. In the midst of troubles through loss of work these have been assisted by their brethren.

In general it may be affirmed that the year has been one of great prosperity for the Lord's work, and it will be remembered by the triumph of the cause in the acquittal and liberation of our Brother Pensotti; the extension to a new country by the appointment of Dr. Woods to the charge of the works in Peru; the establishment of new centres in San Juan, Balcarce, and Chacabuco, and extensions in the provinces of Buenos Ayres, Mendoza, and Entre Rios.

There have been numerous conversions, in which the power of Christ to save those who believe in Him has been shown. The following figures will show the extent of the work:—Members in communion and candidates, 2,232, increase, 367; Sunday-schools, 44, increase 7; scholars, 2,587, increase 474; day-schools, 23, increase, 1; scholars, 1,740, increase, 343; printed at the Mission press, books (including tracts) 34,985. These figures point to an aggressive Gospel work among the nominal Romanist populations of three South American Republics, viz. Argentina, Uruguay, and Paraguay for which we feel sure Christians interested in the spread of the Gospel in South America will praise God.

DR. JOSEPH EDWARD CRANAGE,

Founder of the Old Hall School and New Hall Mission.

THE influence of a godly, praying mother has full oft been exemplified in Christian biography, but in the subject of our present sketch we observe that the Apostle's loving reference, when writing to Timothy, to the faith "which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother, Eunice," finds fresh illustration; as amongst the earliest religious impressions were those made by a faithful grandmother, connected with the Society of Friends, who was wont to train the boy in the fear of God, and when some fault had been committed, "would take him aside, and, without uttering a word, would pray earnestly—often with tears—for the young life over which she watched so tenderly." Nor was the mother less earnest and faithful. Who shall say how much in the subsequent character and career was due to the prayers and precepts of these godly women?

JOSEPH EDWARD CRANAGE, who came of an old Cheshire family, was born, in 1826, in the town of Wellington, Shropshire, in which his busy life was spent. His father, a solicitor, died when he, the eldest son, was but nine years old; and his mother, left with slender means, supported her young family by carrying on a girls' school. Thus the lad's youthful associations lay in the very direction in which his own mind bent so strongly that at the age of nineteen he founded the now famous Old Hall School. This he started in 1845 with five boys, and to fit himself for teaching he laboured hard at self-education and reading. He put himself in connection with the University of Jena, pursuing his studies so successfully that, when examined in London, he not only received his degree of M.A., but was also made a Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.). Carried on in an earnest spirit, the school prospered, and had to be enlarged during the first few years of its existence. He entered heartily into all the boys' occupations, and had the rare faculty of inspiring his pupils with enthusiasm for their studies.

The great turning-point in Dr. Cranage's life came in the Irish revival of 1859, that remarkable awakening which gave to the Church so many noble workers. His first experience of the movement was near Belfast. Although, like many, inclined at first to view it with some suspicion and dislike, he soon became convinced of its Divine origin, and threw himself heartily into the work. He himself dated his conversion from childhood's days, but looked back on 1859 as the time when he received assurance of salvation, and became possessed of a fulness of life, which compelled him to work for God as never before. He was in the habit of saying that from that period he had never for one moment had a doubt about his own salvation. Pressed, on his return to Wellington, to give some account of what he had seen in Ireland, he consented, with no thought of ever becoming a preacher; but one meeting led to another, and ere long the scenes of the Irish revival were being repeated in the Shropshire town. Out of this unsought-for service came the Mission, which resulted in the building of the New Hall in 1862, and open (according to the Deeds) to any Evangelical Christian Church or denomination professing and preaching faith in our Lord Jesus Christ as God and Saviour. In the present day there are many such halls, but, so far as we know, this was the first opened on such a basis in the country. From the very outset the work at this hall was owned and blessed of God in the conversion of sinners.

Towards the close of 1859 Dr. Cranage was married to Lucy Anne Pickin, who for so many years proved a true helpmate, and who has endeared herself to many generations of boys in the school-house. They were blessed with three sons and two daughters, all of whom survive their father, with the exception of the eldest daughter, who died in infancy.

For many years Dr. Cranage, when at home, preached regularly in the New Hall each Sunday evening. Children's services were also started, and around these there grew up a whole network of mission agency and effort, such as is now commonly associated with thoroughly-equipped missions. Industrial shows were started to encourage the children in home industry, and in these the great Earl of Shaftesbury took an interest. The children's services became by-and-by so attractive that parents and friends crowded in, delighting in the Scripture and Object lessons given by "the Doctor," as he was familiarly termed; and as this went on, the difficulty of holding simultaneously an adult and juvenile congregation became increasingly felt; consequently, after much prayer and effort, a Children's Hall was resolved on. The foundation stone was laid by the Marchioness of Stafford in 1889, and since its opening this has been devoted to the little ones, services for adults being still held in the larger hall.

Nor must we omit to mention the loving labours carried on among the poor, and for their relief in times of distress. Thousands of free meals, for example, were provided at such seasons by the help of friends. Indeed, as those who knew him best know well, he was generous to a fault, and often gave away to others more than he could really spare. As has been noted, "the man who goes amongst God's poor is likely to become an able minister of the New Covenant," and certainly the training so gained proved most helpful to Dr. Cranage. Moreover, we should remark that he became a total abstainer "for others' sake," and lest by using his liberty he should cause a brother to stumble. Special missions were held in the New Hall from time to time, and many were turned "from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God." Dr. Cranage sometimes received letters telling of blessing received through his preaching many years before.

We may relate one incident, out of very many, of his work in Wellington. On one occasion he had large texts placarded in various parts of the town, and it happened that "Thou God seest me" was put on a wall opposite the house of a man who was noted for his wicked life, and who had a bitter hatred to the Doctor. The man was in a terrible rage, and swore that the text was put there by the Doctor specially to annoy him. His wife asked him why he didn't tear it down, but he dared not do that, and the paper remained there, and was gradually destroyed by the weather. About the same time in the following year, Dr. Cranage gave another bundle of texts to the bill poster to put up, and, strange to relate, utterly ignorant of the effect it had produced, he posted "Thou God seest me" on the same wall. This time the man's rage knew no bounds, he cursed and swore like a madman, and vowed he'd be revenged on the Doctor for his spite. Still he wouldn't pull it down, and it made him uncomfortable for months. Some time after this the man became very ill, and thought he was going to die. He immediately told his wife that Dr. Cranage must be sent for at once. The Doctor went down, and found the strong man turned into a little child. He repented of his sins, and received forgiveness through faith in Christ. He recovered from his illness, and lived for some years a happy Christian life.

Out of the Object lessons mentioned above came the "Lectures on the Tabernacle," illustrated by a beautiful model on a small scale. Afterwards, in addition to this, full-sized models of the Ark of the Covenant, the Golden Candlestick, the Table of Shewbread, and the Altar of Incense were constructed under his supervision. These lectures—amongst the first of their kind—were given at Mildmay Conference Hall, Stafford House, Lilleshall

Hall, the residence of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, and many other places, and opened out such a fruitful line of instruction that many others have profitably followed on the same plan.

Then it must be remembered that, with all his genial kindness and large-heartedness, Dr. Cranage was a man of strong convictions. He was a staunch Protestant, and, when need be, a stout controversialist, being reasonably convinced of the unscriptural character of the Church of Rome, and the danger to England lying in the Romeward drift of so many within the Established Church. But while opposed to Romanism on the one hand with its allied Ritualism, he was equally firm in resisting Rationalism on the other hand, avowing boldly his belief in the absolute inspiration and authority of Scripture, in the Divinity and Substitutionary work of Christ, and in justification by faith. There were three important factors in his teaching. These were:—heaven, hell, and escape; and these three constituted the theme of his always earnest appeals, and proved very effectual weapons in his warfare with sin. Of these verities he was a fearless exponent.

He was a regular attendant at Church, and firmly convinced of the principle of Establishment, but differed from Church teaching on some points, and worked heartily with all Evangelical bodies.

In view of his varied undertakings, many feared the Doctor was overtaxing himself, and attempting more than he ought for his own sake; and, indeed, the state of his health gave him repeated warnings, which, however, were ignored, for no sooner did he recover than he was as busy as ever. Meanwhile, he was "diligent in business," while "fervent in spirit, serving the Lord"; throwing his energies into the school, which accordingly prospered and grew, becoming recognised by many Christian parents as a place where they could send their sons, in the full assurance that, while the best possible was done for their education, their deeper spiritual needs would not be overlooked. Hence repeated enlargements of the school became necessary. One who writes from personal knowledge of the school, speaks of Dr. Cranage as a master in the art of teaching, and recalls his addresses to the boys on self-improvement and mental training. Morning and evening prayers were no perfunctory and formal matter, but real spiritual services. In the mornings he would give an instructive exposition, and in the evening an exhortation or Gospel appeal. Long will his earnest addresses on these occasions remain in the minds and hearts of many, now engaged in Christian work at home or abroad, who look back on them as the starting-point of their spiritual life.

His later years were clouded, to some extent, by feebleness of health, and in 1890 he gave up the management of the Old Hall School, which he had held for forty-five years, to his eldest son (by whom it is now continued on similar lines with efficiency and success). He did not, however, long survive to enjoy repose, for on November 12, 1891, he passed in perfect peace to the presence of Him he had loved so long and served so well.

As a friend of thirty-five years' standing wrote when his death was made known:—

> A standard-bearer of the truth has fallen; a more unflinching defender could hardly be found; ever ready to go into the thickest of the fight, and, forgetful of all personal interests, seek at all costs to hew down the foe without halting or hesitating. The friendships he formed in all ranks of life were almost innumbered. He had a magnetic nature, which attracted friends of a like character to it, and thus all over the world was he known and loved. Above all, the person and work of the Saviour were ever uppermost in his thoughts, and most prominent in his converse and preaching.

The Mission Hall is under the care of trustees, who are determined to carry it on upon the lines followed by Dr. Cranage. Mr. Robert Weston, for so many years associated with the late Doctor, both in the Mission and school work, and himself one of the trustees, has been appointed superintendent of the Mission.

THE RECLAMATION OF WOMEN.

As many are already aware, the managers of the St. Giles's Christian Mission took advantage of the sensation that was caused by the Whitechapel murders, to found a branch for the reclamation of such women as had, in any way, become victims of wrong-doing. The work has now gone on for about three years; the police have co-operated in the most cordial manner, and the results have probably exceeded all expectations. As three Homes have to be maintained—one in Drury-lane, one at Seven Dials, and one of a more semi-rural character at Kentish-town—the current expenses are, of course, considerable; but no Christian heart, who has ever had an opportunity of seeing what has been attempted and done, would ever wish any of the operations to be curtailed. During the year, ending on October 31st, over sixteen hundred cases were admitted to the three Homes for longer or shorter terms; and, as a rule, those who thus surrender become changed in their lives, and not a few are, by the grace of God, changed in heart also. Indeed, it is a very reassuring fact that, however low down in the mire of sin these poor women and girls may be found, they seem to be peculiarly amenable to the influences of Christian friends who seek them out, to give them one more chance of obtaining a respectable footing in the world. The transformations we have been privileged to look upon from time to time among these women and girls, have been such as excite wonder and gratitude.

This is especially the case when we take into account the deplorable condition from which many of these young creatures have been reclaimed. Vice and crime do not walk in silver slippers in St. Giles's; the portrayal of the Prodigal Son as he lived among swine in "a far country," whither he had strayed in his blindness and folly, being no inapt picture of what many of these outlawed sinners are in modern London to-day, when first taken in hand. Their condition is such, in many instances, that they could not with propriety be allowed even to enter an ordinary house, so completely does the outward defilement correspond with the moral degradation. All this, however, only makes the transformation of the sinner the more wonderful to us, who see, in such conversions, direct evidence of the divine power of the Gospel.

A case typical of many others was that of a girl who came from Seven Dials, and who has been in the Home at Kentish Town for nearly three months. When received, a black eye, her extremely disgraceful condition, and the fear she entertained of her old companions, told only too plainly what kind of company she had been keeping. As a housemaid, she had once received £24 a year; but she fell so low, that when she first entered the Seven Dials Refuge, it appeared to be a palace to her. Now, even after five years of such a life, she is so thoroughly transformed, that the matron regards her as really a converted character, and she will take a domestic servant's situation in the country. Girls of this class fall into the lowest possible depths; but in the course of three years a large company indeed of such have been won back for something better.

Some who are rescued for lives of honour and usefulness, are of a different class, being subjects of crime. Occasionally these are very young, and are thus the more tractable, but at the same time their expert mastery of criminal arts painfully suggests what their attainments would be in the school of crime if left to themselves. Thus one child of fifteen, who is now a promising member of the Bible-class in the Home at Kentish-town, had actually commenced life as a burglar, having broken a pane of glass seven feet from the ground, to enter a house she had "put up" for the purpose. Another, who was a mere child, had stood in the dock with her mother, for stealing jewellery, and even the prosecutor had shown true Christian anxiety to have her rescued rather than punished. Another was a servant-girl who had robbed her employers; but whatever the offence might be, what was true of one seemed to be true of all, they showed true penitence, and learned that only in God's strength could they expect to stand in the future.

Thus, this mission to women in St. Giles's is a far-reaching work, and not a merely local one; for as many of the subjects it seeks migrate from the East-end, and elsewhere, to the West, its influence extends to other quarters. It is a work of genuine mercy and should call forth the compassion of all. Many whom it reaches are too young to understand the nature of the path of ruin on which they are entering, while the fact that others, who are older, show an ardent desire to be saved, gives them an irresistible claim on our pity. Though still partially invalided, Mr. George Hatton (4, Ampton-street, Regent's-square, W.C.) is still able to give some attention to the work as hon. superintendent; and the growing number of those who have been rescued, is the best recompense and encouragement still to go forward.

OXFORD NOTES.

(From Our Correspondent.)

Mr. Henry Thorne is at present holding a Mission in Oxford in connection with the Y.M.C.A. Bible-readings are given in the afternoon in the Hall, and Evangelistic meetings are conducted every evening in the Corn Exchange. The severe weather and the epidemic, now so prevalent in Oxford, combined to lessen the attendance during the first week, but it is hoped that the meetings of the concluding week will be more largely attended. The Mission is being cordially supported by the various Evangelical churches of the city.

The influenza has been busy among the Christian workers of Oxford, very many being laid aside and some having died; while meetings, also, have been postponed on account of the general sickness. A prominent worker among the Wesleyans has been removed by death—Mr. Joseph Richardson, the headmaster of the Wesleyan School, and an active member of the Wesley Memorial Church. A cordial testimony to his life and work was given at the funeral by Rev. James Chapman, senior minister of the Oxford circuit.

A very well-known Churchman, too, has passed away in the person of Rev. Canon Freeling. As Rural Dean of Oxford, and as vicar of Holywell Church, he was to the front in church-work, while his connection with Merton College, as Fellow and Chaplain, gave him considerable influence in the University.

Recognition services, in connection with the pastorate of Rev. F. W. Collyer at the Cowley-road Congregational Church, were recently held. Dr. Fairbairn, of Mansfield College, and other prominent Oxford Congregationalists, supported the new pastor, whose coming, it is believed, will do much to increase the prosperity of this church.

The proposal to erect a statue in Oxford to Cardinal Newman is causing much feeling among local Protestants, especially as the site suggested for the statue is in the same street as, and very near to, the cross which marks the spot where Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer were martyred. The committee of the City Council have unanimously accepted the proposal, and urge its acceptance by the Council itself; but it is hoped that the scheme may yet be defeated, or, at any rate, modified, so as to prevent the public and general recognition of a man who, necessarily, is admired by but a comparatively few in the city.

The Oxford Church Sunday-school Association held its annual New Year's meeting on January 15, when the subject of "A Model Sunday-school" was discussed. Helpful contributions were made by several speakers, including Rev. G. C. Bowring, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, and Rev. J. Hewetson, vice-Principal of Wycliffe Hall.

MR. HERMANN WARSZAWIAK'S work among Jews in New York is causing some stir. A recent issue of The Jewish Messenger, a paper devoted to Hebrew interests, contained an article entitled, "At our Doors—a Call for Action," in which the following sentences occurred:—"At the De Witt Memorial Church, in Rivington-street, a curious sight is witnessed on Saturday afternoons. A converted Hebrew delivers German lectures to a mass of Russians, and his addresses have proved so attractive that in the course of a year his audiences have increased from twenty to five hundred and more." The writer concluded that the audiences are made up of poor Jews who have no where else to go, and he, therefore, called upon the synagogue rulers to do more for the moral, intellectual, and physical welfare of the people.

The Revival in Scotland.

(BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

MR. MOODY AND THE BIBLE.

It used to be a favourite expression with Mr. Moody that he received and believed the Bible "back to back." He has kept well out of the currents of negative criticism that flow so freely in these days, and his faith in the authenticity and veracity of the good old Book in its entirety is as unswerving as ever it was. There can be no doubt that this explains the wonderful success with which God everywhere crowns his preaching. Since coming to Scotland this time he has been so busy declaring and expounding the contents of the Book, that no opportunity has seemed to present itself for an address on the claims of the Bible, till last week. On Friday, at Forfar, he spoke three times. At the first meeting, at eleven o'clock, held in one of the Free Churches, he gave a lecture on "The Bible: is it true, and can we rely on it?" This is a subject after the evangelist's own heart, and he appeared to get as much refreshment out of its treatment as his hearers did in listening.

The successful minister of the future, he said, will be the man who takes up the truths contained in the Scripture and makes them real to the people. What we need in these times is to get away from human theories back to the Word of God. The people have got perfectly tired of the logical and critical speculation. One reason why so many flock to hear Rev. John McNeill is because he takes up the Bible and makes its pages live. Let our teachers feed upon the Word and give it out to the people. Then we shall have a generation of healthy Christians. What is needed is more daily study of the Bible. A man said in one of our special meetings he hoped he had got such a blessing as would last him all his life. Why, he might as well try to make one day's breakfast last a whole lifetime.

It is quite fashionable for people to say that they believe in the New Testament, but not in the Old. I believe we make a great mistake in distinguishing thus between them. As long as a Christian minister or worker is in doubt about the weapon he uses he will be a poor soldier of Jesus Christ. When Paul wrote to Timothy that all Scripture was given by inspiration of God the New Testament was not then in existence, therefore the reference was to the Old Testament Scriptures. When a man begins to cut and slash away at the Bible, throwing out this or that part because he does not understand it, he does more harm than Satan himself can do. A man in our country went to his minister and said he wanted to show him his Bible. "That is not my Bible," replied the minister. "Well, I have been under your ministry for some time, and when you have said that that part and this other part is not authentic I have gone home and cut out the part you referred to, and this is what is left." After you hear some men preach, about all you would think you had left is the covers.

To show the unreasonableness of rejecting the Old Testament, while accepting the New, Mr. Moody showed how frequent are the quotations from the former which are contained in the latter, especially in the four Gospels and the Epistles to the Hebrews, the Romans, &c. The Bible, he said, must stand or fall as one undivided book. It is very striking to notice how the things that unbelieving men cavil at most in the Old Testament are the very things that Christ set his seal to in his utterances, e.g., the narratives of Noah and the flood, the destruction of the cities of the plain, the manna in the desert, the healing of the bitten Israelites by erecting a brazen serpent, the story of Jonah and the whale, &c.

Many people's objection to parts of the Bible is really a desire to do away with the supernatural. But there is not a book in the Bible that has not got the supernatural in it. Every writer who recorded the supernatural, and did not believe what he wrote, must have been telling a lie. There are more supernatural things in the four Gospels than anywhere else, yet men usually begin at Genesis and cut out and leave the four Gospels. What is the worth of the Bible if we do not believe that everything in it is authentic? Christ said that heaven and earth would pass away, but his words would not pass away. If one of our modern philosophers living in those days had heard this Jewish peasant make that remark, he would have turned away and said, "Did you ever hear such conceit?" Yet, was there ever a time in the history of the world when the words of Jesus Christ were so well known as they are to-day?

A great part of the Bible was written by prophets, and yet we seldom hear a sermon on prophecy. People seem to be as afraid of prophecy as they are of lightning, or some contagious disease. The reason we have got so many one-sided Christians is that they live on some particular portion of Scripture. There is nothing more convincing than the prophecies. There are portions of the Bible that have not been explored any more than Central Africa. It seems as if men were paid nowadays for what they do not know, rather than for what they do know. A man once said it was time they had got a new Bible. "Well," was the reply, "let's see what you know of the old before you cast it away. Which is the first book—Genesis or Revelation?" He could not say, but he knew they wanted a new Bible, because the old was worn out.

On the question of prophecy, Mr. Moody instanced Babylon, Nineveh, Egypt, Tyre, and Jerusalem, and showed how the things that had been written of them had come to be literally fulfilled. He strongly advised people to study the Word of God for themselves. It is a good thing to have a good minister, but suppose they had not, or suppose they went off into the wilds of America, it was a good thing to learn to feed themselves. He pitied the man that needed to be fed with an ecclesiastical spoon. There are many professing Christians forty years old who cannot feed themselves. They should go to the fountain-head.

A good way to study the Bible was to take up a subject. There are fundamental doctrines which, if we get them into our being, will make us as strong as the Rock of Gibraltar. These include repentance, faith, assurance, atonement, justification, resurrection, &c. Let us take up any one of these great subjects, and try to master them by the help of what other men have written, even if we take six months to do it. The trouble with many people is that they are ready to read all the infidel books that come out, rather than the Bible. No wonder they lack peace and joy and assurance. The world can get on very well without the theories of our modern philosophers, but it cannot get on without Christ. At the close of his address, Mr. Moody declared that the hour had been to him a good time, and he had enjoyed it. Judging from the demeanour of his hearers, they could have said the same thing.

GREAT SERMONS IN THE ACTS.

To a large gathering on Sabbath morning, in Bethelfield U.P. Church, Kirkcaldy, Mr. Moody gave a Bible reading on the Book of Acts; it illustrated vividly the way in which he handles the Word of God and brings out of it things new and old. If all those present were real "Christian workers," according to the advertisement, they must have got a "good square" strengthening meal to fit them for the service of the day. Speaking of the writer of the book, Mr. Moody remarked that both in his Gospel and in the Acts Luke never mentions his own name; so the true Christian worker will always hide himself that he may exalt his Master. Luke's Gospel tells of the deeds of Christ in the body; Acts records his deeds in and through his Church. The one book speaks of his humiliation; the other, of his exaltation. Instead of being called the Acts of the Apostles, it might properly be called the Acts of the exalted and glorified Christ.

Mr. Moody dwelt some time on verse eight of the first chapter:—"Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto Me." If the disciples who had heard the sermons and parables of our Lord, and had seen his miracles, needed still to be endowed with power from on high, how much more do we? The Apostles would never have left all and followed the Saviour unless they had been moved by Divine power; but they needed a fresh and special anointing before they went out to be witnesses for the risen Christ, whether in Jerusalem or elsewhere. If they had not waited for this power, we may be sure there would have been no results from their testimony. If our work as Christians is not successful, let us pause and ask ourselves whether or not we have received the unction from the Holy One.

In some of the large American cities you will see bills put up in shop windows:—"This shop to let, with or without power." There is engine power somewhere on or near the premises, and the occupant can have the power hitched on so that he can carry on the manufacture in which he may be engaged. When people come to join our churches it would be a good thing if the elders asked whether they wished to be members "with or without power." If they wish to join the church "without power," let the reply be, "We have got plenty of that kind just now."

In the Book of Acts, said Mr. Moody, we have eight great beginnings:—The first apostolical miracle, the first sermon under the new Dispensation, the first ecclesiastical organisation, the first persecution, the first martyr, the first Gentile convert, the first missionary tour, and the first European Church. The preacher passed on to point out the characteristics of the which are recorded in the Book, and which show the whole sweep of its teaching. Here we discover what sort of preaching it was that moved the world in those early days. There could be no harder people to reach than those Jews in Jerusalem, so many of whom were convicted and converted through the preaching of the Apostles.

Of the ten sermons five were by Peter, one by Stephen, and four by Paul. In the first sermon by Peter (Acts ii. 36) we find that it was the Holy Ghost bearing witness to the fact that Jesus Christ had risen from the dead, and was at the right hand of God, that produced such wonderful results. When that truth flashed into the minds of the Jews, three thousand of them were convicted and converted. There are many who say they are not qualified to speak for Christ; let the Word of God speak through them. If men are to be convicted of sin, it will be through the living Word, and not through our opinions and theories. Would to God we could get out of our churches! If the other Apostles had been criticising Peter all the time he was preaching on the Day of Pentecost, do you think any would have been converted? But the hundred and twenty were holding him right up to God, and that was how he had power over the people. If we examine the history we will find that every time the Holy Ghost came down in mighty manifestations on the disciples or on Christ, it was during prayer and in answer to prayer. Let us pray for preachers of the Gospel rather than be criticising them and finding fault all the time.

Peter's second sermon is recorded in Acts iii. 12-26. Here, again, we find it was the death and resurrection of Christ that was the burden of the discourse. And this sermon was even more successful than at Pentecost, for we read that there were 5,000 converted. These were wonderful results, but why should there not be as great results now if all our preachers kept to the truth of God, depending on the power of the Holy Ghost. I do not believe that Pentecost was a miracle that is never to be repeated; I am firmly persuaded it was only a specimen day. If we get on our faces before God, and are filled with the Holy Ghost, we will have results.

In the third sermon (iv. 8-12) we see again how these unlearned men from Galilee had turned Jerusalem upside down.

HOW SUBLIME WERE THE WORDS of Peter in answer to the question of the rulers:—"By what power, or by what name, have ye done thus?" "Be it known unto you all, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, doth this man stand before you whole." What a grand privilege it was for Peter to stand before the members of the Sanhedrim and preach this blessed Gospel! In chapter 5 we find Peter, with his fellow-apostles, again brought before the council, after God had delivered them from prison. It was the same Gospel of a crucified, risen, and exalted Saviour that was preached. They had no other Gospel; they knew nothing of rhetoric or metaphysics. They were simply witnesses that Jesus Christ had lived and died and risen. They went away and held another prayer-meeting, and again the Holy Ghost descended on them. They must either have lost some of their power, or they had greater capacity. And if they needed to be re-baptized with the Holy Ghost, don't you think that we need to be filled with his power once in a while? Have you not met with preachers who have lost power? Some were filled with the Holy Ghost five years ago, but now they are dry and powerless.

The fifth sermon was by Stephen, whom we would call a layman. Nearly the whole of chapter vii. is taken up in it. Some one has said that God lit up Stephen's face with the same glory that He lit up the face of Jesus Christ on the day of his transfiguration. The man who is filled with the Spirit of God will have a shining face. Do you know that?

Then we have the sermon in the centurion's house at Cæsarea by Peter—the only meeting, I believe, that was ever planned in heaven in all its details. If we want to see what an enquiry meeting should be, we have it here. While Peter spake, the Holy Ghost fell on the company, and the whole audience was converted. It is important to see what kind of preaching it was that brought about such a result. "We are witnesses of all things which He did, whom they slew and hanged on a tree; Him God raised up the third day and showed Him openly . . . to Him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth on Him receiveth remission of sins." As Peter spake, the Holy Ghost fell on all them that heard. Why should not the Holy Ghost fall on the Christians in Scotland to-day? When we are looking for the Spirit to fall upon the people, then we may expect to see results.

Little time remained for Mr. Moody to refer to the four discourses by Paul of Antioch, at Athens, at Jerusalem, and before Agrippa. He pointed out, however, that it was the same old Gospel of the death and resurrection and exaltation of Jesus Christ that was the theme of the great apostle of the Gentiles. Paul did not change his tone or his text for those cultured Athenians. When he spoke of the resurrection some believed and some mocked. So it will be to-day. Some will scoff and ridicule and others will believe. God nevers tell us that we must be successful. We have got to be faithful; results belong to God.

THE WEEK IN FORFAR.

The second and closing day at Montrose was a not unworthy successor to the first. Having a few days to spare before beginning a mission in Glasgow, Mr. J. M. Scroggie, of Haddington, joined the Evangelists on Monday, and lent a hand. Considering the severe weather, the company that gathered in the afternoon in the parish church was very large. Mr. Moody was led to choose a subject that he has not preached on before during this campaign—the parable of the rich man who essayed to build bigger barns for the storage of his much goods just when he was about to leave them all, and give an account of his stewardship to God. The discourse, delivered in unusually subdued tones, was a powerful exposure of the folly of straining every nerve to accumulate the perishing and vanishing possessions of this world, while the greater riches of the heavenly life are utterly neglected. By illustration and by example this truth was pressed home very closely, and the hour was a very solemn one.

In the evening, before beginning his farewell discourse to a gigantic congregation, Mr. Moody made a warm appeal to the rich citizens of Montrose to support the local Y.M.C.A., and furnish it with a suitable building. He said he hoped the time would soon come when Scotland's wealthy Christians would invest their money in such institutions that would live after them as streams of blessing to society rather than accumulate great fortunes, perhaps to be squandered by and to cause the ruin of those who inherit them.

The last after meeting in the Congregational church was a time of busy and joyous ingathering. The Montrose friends are taking some steps to perpetuate the interest. A week's mission is being held in one of the churches during the present week by Mr. Smith, an Aberdeen evangelist.

ARBROATH AND BRECHIN

were the scene of the evangelists' labours on Tuesday and Wednesday. There is not much to be said about Brechin, where a single meeting in the Cathedral on Wednesday morning was all that could be given. There was a large attendance. It is an interesting fact that many employers of labour in the town permitted their workers to attend the meeting without any loss of payment. Mr. Moody's address was chiefly directed to stirring up the Christians in the district to united effort in the power of the Holy Spirit.

The work at Arbroath was of an exceptionally encouraging kind. The ground had been well prepared, and the people flocked to the meeting in great numbers. So great was the interest that separate services were arranged in the evening for men and women, so as to draw as many as possible within the circle of influence. Mr. Sankey, Mr. Scroggie, and Mr. Robertson all took their share in the conduct of the meetings, and in the inquiry-room work, which was extensive, speaking by comparison with some other places. If the visit of the evangelists could have been longer there is no doubt the mission would quickly have broadened and deepened in volume and in results. It remains for the local friends to follow up and to garner the fruit that may yet appear.

was visited on the two closing days of the working week. Since the days of Duncan Matheson, at any rate, this community seems to have been regarded as an exceptionally difficult and flinty-hearted one in the matter of Gospel effort. Indeed, there is a current saying to the effect that however remiss the enemy of souls might be in regard to other places, he has "kept his thumb on Forfar." What malign or deadening influences may be at work it is impossible for a passing stranger to say. At any rate, the two evening meetings in the Established Church were very large, and the spirit of hearing was manifest. The after meetings in the Congregational Church were not, perhaps, so large, in proportion, as in some other places, but God was evidently owning the faithful messages of his servants, and the workers had to deal with some very interesting cases of soul anxiety and decision.

Reference has been made in an earlier part of this report to Mr. Moody's talk on the Bible, on Friday morning, In the afternoon of the same day a large company met in the First Free Church, when a prayer-meeting followed the usual Gospel service. The evangelists had barely arrived in Forfar, after travelling from Arbroath, when the sad and sudden news reached them of the death of the Duke of Clarence. They were deeply affected by the event, so tragic in some respects, and so calculated to "eclipse the gaiety of nations." Though much attached to their fatherland, Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey have great respect for the British Crown and Constitution, and they do not scruple to say that no existing form of government the wide world over is more conducive to the general good of the governed, and the purity of the governing class. At the opening of the evening meeting on Thursday, Mr. Moody made a pathetic and feeling reference to the blow that had so unexpectedly fallen on the reigning house of these realms, and he bespoke the sympathy of the congregation for the bereaved parents and bride-elect. Prayer was made by one of the ministers, the assembly rising en masse.

SABBATH AT KIRKCALDY.

The County, or "Kingdom," of Fife has been very earnest in its desire to obtain a visit from the American brethren, and it will not be possible for them to comply with nearly all the requisitions sent in, as one brief week only can be given to the shire. As the largest centre of population, Kirkcaldy had the two opening days of the week assigned to it, and the meetings of Sabbath showed every indication of universal and genuine interest. At 9.30 in the morning the Bethelfield United Presbyterian Church was the scene of a splendid gathering of Christian workers, to whom Mr. Moody gave the address which is briefly reported in a preceding column. During the forenoon the evangelists rested, and in the afternoon they spoke and sang to a large congregation in the parish church of Dysart, which is at the northern end of "the lang toon."

Sabbath evening services are not customary in the churches of Kirkcaldy, and so all the people were free to be present, so far as space would allow, at the special Gospel meetings arranged for in the parish church and in the St. Brycedale Free Church close by. Soon after six o'clock the parish church, where Mr. Moody was to speak, was crowded out, and the overflow very speedily filled St. Brycedale's to the doors. Probably many hundreds went away disappointed. Mr. Sankey, having sung his couple of solos to Mr. Moody's vast audience, proceeded to the Free Church, where he sang again and also addressed the congregation, several ministers also taking part. At the close Mr. Sankey conversed with a number in the church, and found not a few who had either decided for Christ or were anxiously seeking the way.

In the course of his powerful address, Mr. Moody caused some sensation by his strong remarks on the whisky curse. He cried aloud and spared not, and when he saw that some of his audience "looked very strange," he did not hesitate to say so. Would to God Scotchmen had some of the patriotism of which Mr. Moody speaks, and which ought alone to prompt them to fight this national evil that seems to have laid its evil hands on every community in the old land of Bibles and covenants.

A great proportion of the audience stayed for the second meeting, and to them Mr. Moody declared the way of life as plainly as words could make it. Then the workers (who were very few) spent some time in personal converse with those who were in soul anxiety. The Kirkcaldy friends, in concert with the Edinburgh committee, had been having special preparatory meetings, some of which are said to have been very fruitful. They have also arranged for following up by a week of services, conducted by Rev. John Robertson, of Glasgow. Mr. Robertson, in the days before he was known to fame, was for some time engaged in school teaching in the "lang toon," and there are many who remember him in that capacity. Much interest will attach to his meetings.

MR. McNEILL IN ABERDEEN.

Throughout the past week Mr. McNeill has kept the fire of spiritual interest well alight in the northern city, by his remarkable addresses given twice a day during the week. Large crowds continued to go and hear him, and at the evening meetings in the Music Hall numbers have manifested spiritual concern by rising for prayer. On Wednesday evening last week Mr. McNeill preached in the North Parish Church in the east-end of the city. A good proportion of the congregation were apparently of the genuine bourgeois type, and the preacher's words were such as would appeal to their peculiar difficulties and surroundings. The influence of this special effort is being very widely felt throughout the city. District visitors and Bible women say from personal knowledge that in almost every house they visit there is a deep interest awakened, and it can truthfully be said, as of old, that "there is great joy in the city." One case has a peculiar interest. A man was present in the Music Hall one evening and decided to accept Christ. When he went home he found that his wife had attended a kitchen meeting that evening, and had also experienced the beginning of a new life. The joy in that humble home that night may be "better imagined than described."

Last Sabbath Mr. McNeill preached three times, in the forenoon in Rev. G. Adam Smith's Free Church at Queen's-cross, and in the Music Hall afternoon and evening. This week the meetings will be dispersed more throughout the city, Mr. McNeill's desire being to break through the crust of sleepy indifference in the churches and stir them up to take hold on the irreligious masses around them.

continues to be cheered by hearing of the blessing that has resulted from the singing of his Gospel songs in past years. Some of the hymns from which little result of this kind had been expected have been channels of power to the hearers. Thus the Gospel singer is encouraged to go on singing the Gospel, with heart and voice, leaving the full results to God aad to the day when the books shall be opened and the secrets of all hearts revealed.

DUBLIN.—For some time past many Christian workers in Ireland have felt convinced that Dublin should have a Medical Mission at work amongst its poor, and to this end a committee has been formed, who state that the Medical Mission will supplement, and not in any sense compete, with existing agencies for healing, or evangelistic work; and will commend itself to Christians of all denominations as affording a valuable opportunity for showing sympathy with and interest in the poor of Dublin, while at the same time commending, by practical action, the love of God in Christ Jesus. The hon. secretaries are Mrs. E. J. Figgis, jun., 30, Lansdowne-road, and J. Marshall Butler, 4, Victoria-terrace, Terenure-road, Dublin.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION is organising a trip to Rome for Sunday-school teachers, and those interested in Sunday-schools. The party will leave London about February 22, and reach home again on March 5. The proposed route is from London to Paris, via Newhaven and Dieppe, thence by the Mont Cenis Tunnel and Turin to Rome; returning via Venice and Milan, through the St. Gothard Tunnel to Lucerne, thence by way of Paris to London. All this is to be accomplished for £13 13s., which will cover all travelling and hotel expenses. A number of ladies and gentlemen have already signified their intention of joining the party. Full particulars will be supplied to those wishing to accompany them, on application to the Secretaries, 56, Old Bailey, London, E.C.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which, of course, are entirely different from these.

Spiritual rectitude is followed by material blessings. May we not claim the fulfilment of these promises? 4. "The chastening and admonition of the Lord" (R.V.). There is a chastening which is in Christ.

Servants and Masters (5-9).—These servants were almost invariably slaves. But their obedience to the imperious and selfish demands of their masters was to be as to Christ, and was accepted by him. Servants of men because slaves of Christ. To do all for Jesus is to do the best for the earthly employer. Apparently they were to discover God's will in men's commands. 8. No noble and unselfish act on the part of the believer escapes the notice or reward of Christ. 9. "Their Master and yours." The greatest are after all but slaves to the Divine Master. We are set to rule others in his name and for the doing of his will. To shirk responsibility, and not to see that the work of subordinates is properly done, is to fail in duty to Him.

The Daily Fight (10-20).—Many are strong in their own resolves, but they soon tire and fail. We must get his strength into us by a faith momentarily exercised. When we are strong in the Lord He is strong in us. 11. We cannot overcome our enemies without, unless we are thoroughly right within, and this is compared to the girding on of armour, each part of which represents a new element in the secret temple of the soul. 12. "Against the world-rulers of this darkness, against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places" (R.V.). Christ is in the heavenlies, and the nearer we get to Him the more shall we be tempted. Satan wants to injure Christ through those who are nearest Him. It appears probable that heathen darkness is the direct result of Satanic agency. 13. It is often the greatest victory just to stand. 14. Be true in your most secret parts. Be righteous in your thoughts and hearts. 15. Be peaceful in your goings. 16. Insert the Lord Jesus between yourself and temptation by the uplook of faith. 18. Count the alls of this verse.

Farewell (21-24).—Peace, love, faith—a precious trio. Peace, the element; love, the deposit; faith, the channel. And all due to the grace of God. 24. "In incorruptness" (R.V.). Let us see that no jealousy or envy corrodes or corrupts our love in Christ and to the brethren.

THE EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

Philippi was the chief city of the western part of Macedonia, and a Roman colony (Acts xvi. 21). The Apostle suffered much there (1 Thess. ii. 2). But he gathered around him a very attached band of friends and disciples, who seem to have given him every ground for encouragement and comfort. They had apparently sent him a present in his confinement through Epaphroditus, their pastor, which he acknowledges in pleasing terms. This is one of the prison epistles, dictated to an amanuensis, whilst a soldier was bound to his wrist. It abounds in the tenderest expressions of goodwill and kindness. Nothing to condemn, everything to commend.

MONDAY, JAN. 25—PHILIPPIANS I.

Inscription (1, 2).—Servants, i.e., slaves. Bishops, several in one church. The R.V. marg. gives Overseers.

Loving Expressions and Desires (3-11).—This is the only epistle in which there is no trace of chiding or rebuke. All remembrances with thankfulness, all supplications with joy. 5. "Your fellowship in furtherance of the Gospel." 6. "Will perfect." God's beginnings always involve their endings. 7. We may be absent from each other on different parts of the battlefield, and yet engaged in the same war, and moving in close conformity to the same commands. 8. "In the tender mercies of Christ Jesus" (R.V.). How much this loving nature must have suffered in its absences from the objects of its love. 9. Each of these prison epistles has its collect. Abounding love leading to increased knowledge; this to discrimination between things that differ, however outwardly similar; that to freedom from blame and offence, and all resulting in the fruit which is sweet to Jesus and to the praise of God.

The Heroism of Suffering (12-30).—Prisoner as he was, his one thought was of the effect of what he was suffering on the cause of the Master whom he loved. 13. "Throughout the whole Pretorian guard!" (R.V.), the soldiers of which may have taken it in turn to be chained to him. 14. The sight of that patient and noble sufferer made "most of the brethren" brave. 18. So good is the Gospel seed that it will bear fruit, even when scattered by the hands of partizans. 20. The only thing that could have shamed the Apostle would have been that he had failed to magnify Christ. If only that were secured he cared for nought else. 21. If life is Christ and death a gain, this must lead to more of Christ. 22. "If to live in the flesh be my lot" (R.V.). If life were to be his lot, he desired that it might be full of fruit: if death, then he could not be other than glad, since it was to be, not a state of unconscious sleep, but of face to face fellowship with Jesus. 25. Our own desire for rest and relief from the daily strain of service must be subordinated to the needs of others. 27. "Manner of life" (R.V.). What a test for us all. 29. What a legacy is this; one with Him in suffering, and in glory, in his cross and in his crown. Do not be startled if it comes to you.

TUESDAY, JAN. 26.—PHILIPPIANS II.

The Meekness of Christ (1 11).—Because there are these resources of tenderness and gentleness in Jesus they may be also in us; let us draw on them. 3. Do not compare your best with others' worst, but your worst with their best. If they had but had your advantages, how much better had they been than you. 4. Always think of what would promote another's weal. 6. There was no need for Jesus to aspire after equality with God; it was his by inherent right. 7. "Emptied Himself"—i.e., laid aside the use of his attributes as God, that He might live a truly human life. 8. Deeper, deeper, deeper yet. 9. In proportion to his descent has been his ascent. 10. Heaven, earth, hell, own the supremacy of Christ. And whenever the tongue confesses it, God is glorified. But none can say that He is Lord, save by the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. xii. 3). If we will dare to imitate Him in his descent, we shall resemble Him in his ascension and power to help and bless others.

Working out Salvation (12-18).—Man's soul is the workshop of God. We must work out what He is ever working in, and so co-operate with Him to become saints. He never wills in us that which he will not enable us to work. We must take care, with fear and trembling, not to lose by friction aught of his blessed impulses, so shall He be pleased. 14. Murmurings against God, disputings with each other, 16. We can only illuminate the world in proportion as we are filled with the word of eternal life. 17. The metaphor here is a touching one, their sufferings for the cause of Christ the sacrifice, on which the Apostle was willing that his life should be poured forth as a libation.

Timothy and Epaphroditus (19-30).—21. Oh, to live always seeking the things of Jesus Christ! 24. This hope was probably fulfilled, so that He escaped from this imprisonment, and visited again for the last time the churches he loved so well. 27. God never gives more sorrow than we can carry. His hand is always on our pulses during his operations. 30. "Hazarding his life" (R.V.); such a man was meet to be the Apostle's fellow-soldier (25). This hazarding of life was frequent in those great days in the story of Christ's Church (xv. 26). All honour to the roll-call of her martyr-band!

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 27.—PHILIPPIANS III.

What He had left Behind (1-7).—2. Notice that he distinguishes between the counterfeit and the reality, applying a new name to those who contended for the mere rite, apart from its spiritual significance. One of the concisest epitomes of true religion. But the last item takes much learning. For even when we have renounced our own efforts for justification, we cling to then for sanctification. 5, 6. Saul of Tarsus might have been that young man who came running to Jesus, and whom He loved. But none of these things availed to satisfy his yearnings after the real life. 7. And when he came to Christ he had to put them all aside, and begin on the lowest rung of the ladder, alongside of such a man as the dying thief. The man who has become heir to millions thinks lightly of the farthings which made him feel rich when a child.

What He had Gained (8-11).—The knowledge of Jesus, the winning of Jesus, the righteousness of God, besides other things enumerated in 10th verse. 10. We first learn the power of his resurrection, or we could never endure the fellowship of his sufferings. 11. The daily conformity to the death of Christ, in acts of self-denial, involves a daily conformity to him in his Resurrection life, not hereafter only, but here and now.

What He looked for (12-21).—The nearer we get to the soaring Alps, the loftier and more inaccessible their peaks appear. It is for us to realise day by day that ideal, lovely life which lay in the mind of Christ when He first called us to Himself.

13. Let us forget past attainments, past successes, and even past sins, and on our dead selves, as stepping-stones, climb to higher things. The men that do one thing are almost certain to succeed in doing it. And we may pursue the one aim of attaining a lovely character, amid the many things of daily living. We may choose the one thing of sitting at Christ's feet, even when we are engaged in waiting on Him. 14. The goal is the perfected life, the prize is blessedness. 15. Perfect, i.e., mature (Heb. v. 14). 16. Live up to all you know to be right, and more will be revealed to you. 19. They are the worst enemies of the cross, whose life is unworthy of its sacred demands. 20. In the French version this reads, "We are burgesses of the skies." "We wait for a Saviour" (R.V.). 21. "Who shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation....He is able to subject all things unto Himself" (R.V.). If He can do so much, surely He is able to cope with our rebellious hearts and wills.

THURSDAY, JAN. 28.—PHILIPPIANS IV.

Final Exhortations.—1. Another allusion to their stability of character. 2. Two Christian women, who had laboured with the Apostle, but were at variance with each other. 3. "These women" (R.V.). What need to mention names which the Lamb has already chronicled? 4. "Always," in winter as summer; in storm, as sun. 5. Forbearance or gentleness. 6. In nothing be anxious, in everything prayerful and thankful. 7. The very act of telling brings relief to the overpressed soul. The peace of God is here compared to a sentinel pacing to and fro before the soul, keeping watch over affections and thinkings. 8. What a theme for devout meditation. As we think, so we become. 9. Just now we had the Peace of God, now the God of Peace. 11. This art is one which cannot be acquired by hearsay, and only by experience, that may cost deep pain. 12. It is easier to be abased than it is to abound. "In everything and in all things have I learned the secret" (R.V.). What is that secret other than accepting all things from the will and by the permission of God? 13. Notice how the words, "all things," recur again and again in this chapter. When we are in Him, He is in us. 18. A prison, a chain, a meagre, scanty lot, how could he be said to abound? Yet so it was, because his heart rested in the will and love of God. Let us so live as to make God well-pleased, to render heaven sweeter. 19. What we give in our poverty returns to us multiplied according to the glorious riches of God.

THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

Colosse was a large city in Asia Minor, not far from Laodicea and Hierapolis. The church there had been planted by Epaphras, and was now a flourishing one. The Apostle had never visited it himself (ii. 1), but was probably deeply interested in it through the report of his friend.

The Epistle was directed against the teachings of certain who diligently inculcated, not only the observance of the ceremonialism of Judaism, but the fantastic gnostic heresies which were beginning to invade the Church, and amongst which were the worship of angels, the mortification of the body, and other superstitions of the same kind.

This Epistle also emanated from that prison whence so many living streams flowed out to water both the Church and the world.

FRIDAY, JAN. 29.—COLOSSIANS I.

The Inscription (1, 2).—Saints, i.e., those who are wholly yielded to God are they who, beyond all others, can believe. 2. Grace to help, peace to solace.

Commendation (3-8).—We can do a good deal with those whom we wish to correct or instruct, if we will commend all that is capable of being praised. 4. The trinity of Christian grace, Faith, Hope, Love, here as so often. 6. "Bearing fruit and increasing." The handful of corn on the top of the mountains was already beginning to shake like Lebanon. 7. How charming it was for the Apostle to class himself with Epaphas as a fellow-servant.

Holy Prayers and Ascriptions (9-23).—Here is a paragraph which might well form part of our daily intercession for ourselves and others. We need quicker insight into his will, always on the alert to read it in the impulses of his Spirit, in his word and circumstances. 10. But the knowledge and the walk must be parallel each with the other, then fruit-bearing, increased knowledge and strength are inevitable. 11. How often it happens that our strength has to find its sufficient outlet in patience and long-suffering. To manifest these with joy is the loftiest use to which God's power can be put. 12. We are made meet directly we believe in Jesus. It is a past act. 13. Let us live in this kingdom. 14 Mark the definition of redemption. 15. He who images the invisible God must be equal to God. The first born is heir; our Brother is heir; and we joint heirs of all things. 16. There was a tendency in the Colossian Church to interpose a chain of angelic and other beings, of which Christ was thought to be one, between man and God. The Apostle sweeps all these away, or if any are permitted to exist their very being is attributed to the creatorship of Jesus. 17. And their continued existence is said to be due to Him. 18. All believers together can only make a body worthy of such a head. All that is good in any one and in anything begins in Him. Death is a birth into the eternal sphere. Pre-eminent in dignity, in glory, in the love of the Father, in creation and his Church. 19. See ii. 9. 20. Peace was made at the cross, which ultimately is to pervade and pacify the whole universe, wherever troubled through moral evil. 21. We have been reconciled judicially, we must now yield unconditionally and absolutely. 23. Oh, for the steadfast heart!

The Mystery Revealed (24-29).—"Now," i.e., as a chained prisoner. The sacrificial sufferings of Christ cannot be shared in by any, though they be the most devoted of his followers; but those that are behind, and which touch his sympathies with suffering and sorrow, are within our reach. 25. Dispensation, i.e., stewardship. 26. That Jesus Christ should be an indwelling presence, not to Jews only, but to Gentiles also, was never realised as within the Divine programme till it was made known to and by the Apostle. 27. Is He in us, filling us with the sure presentiment and essence of glory? 28. Notice the individuality of the Apostle's interests. 29. When God mightily works within the spirit, it is not so difficult to labour. May our outward life ever keep pace with his inner strivings!

SATURDAY, JAN. 30.—PHILIPPIANS II.

Conflict (1-7).—Already that process was at work which brought the Church at Laodicea to the state described (Rev. iii. 14). 2. It is possible for the believer to be fully assured in his understanding, as well as his heart, of the truth of revelation. 3. "That they may know the mystery of God, even Christ." To have Christ is to possess the keys of knowledge. 6. As our Christian life began by faith, so by a daily exercise of faith it must be maintained. 7. Our only source of stability is by abiding fellowship with Him.

The Circumcision of Christ (8-15).—We need nothing outside of Christ. The philosophy and traditions of men are needless in the case of those who love and trust Him. The R.V. brings out a very beautiful and important meaning, in Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead, and in Him ye are made full. As if God stored his fulness in Jesus, so that it might be accessible to each member of his Church. The analogue of Circumcision is the putting away of sin. We must all have our Gilgals if we would cross the Jordan into the Land of Promise. 12. The baptism of believers, plunged into the burial of a grave of water, symbolises the death and burial of Christ, and their desire to be conformed to both in daily behaviour. But this life of death and resurrection is only possible through his grace, who is the spirit of resurrection. 14. The ceremonial law was fulfilled in Jesus, and its ordinances had no binding effect on Gentiles. It was like a legal document cancelled by having a nail driven through it. 15. On his cross our Lord led in triumphal procession the principalities of powers of darkness, which sought to stay him with their battalions. He overcame them by suffering.

Ceremonialism (16-23).—The Apostle beheld with dismay a tendency amongst his converts to observe the rites of Judaism, as a necessary appendage to the faith in Christ, and as constituting a further claim on the mercy of God. 17. Of what use to follow the shadows, when the body is possessed in having Jesus? 18, 19. The only source of spiritual life is in the fellowship of the risen Jesus; it was a great mistake, therefore, to dwell so much on inferior beings, even though there was an appearance of humility in their worship. Some are for supply as ducts and arteries, some for binding as muscles. 20. Going back to that death in Christ, which in baptism they had professed. 21. The ordinances consisted in the prohibitions, hereinafter named, such as Touch not, &c. 23. "Severity of the body, but are not of any value against the indulgence of the flesh." This is very instructive. We shall never be able to conquer moral evil merely by dieting ourselves. Only spirit can subdue the evil in our members.

Evangelistic Notes.

Faversham.—A series of highly successful evangelistic services have this week been brought to a close at Faversham by the Gospel Band.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith began a promising evangelistic mission at Cavendish Baptist Church, Ramsgate, on Saturday week. Up to the present the meetings have been well attended, and several persons have professed to have received benefit.

Spalding.—A five days' mission has been conducted at the Baptist Chapel, Spalding, by Mr. S. D. Richards, of the London Children's Special Service Mission. The mission has been productive of much spiritual benefit, both amongst the adults and children.

Sheepwash.—Mr. W. Harry Dawe has concluded a fourteen days' mission in the Baptist Chapel, Sheepwash. Many of the Lord's people have been stirred up to more vigorous work, and careless and undecided ones have been led to think of their "latter end."

Mr. J. E. Taylor begins this week a series of special meetings in Fifeshire, for which he will be glad of prayer. The Bucks Evangelistic Mission has been much blessed of late in the town, while special services are being held at the out stations and surrounding villages.

Mr. Charles Inglis has recently been holding a nine days' special mission at the Wesleyan Mission, Bromley, Kent. His earnest and powerful addresses have been greatly owned of God to the salvation of many. The services were well attended, the numbers increasing as the mission continued, and the result has been most gratifying. The gathering at the afternoon Bible Readings showed how helpful and appreciated these meetings were.

Ireland. — Evangelistic services have just been held by Messrs. Peatt and Crozier, of the Irish Evangelisation Society, in a moveable wooden hall, at Portaferry. Similar services have been held in Salem Church, Belfast, by Rev. H. Smith, of Staffordshire, and in Portstewart Methodist Church, by Mr. Peter Donnelly, a convert from Romanism. The prevalent epidemic interfered with the attendance, but in each case good was effected.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 31.

The Suffering Saviour.—Isa. liii.

Golden Text: Isa. liii. 6.

Chapters xlix.-lvii. of Isaiah set forth the work of the Servant of Jehovah as Prophet, Priest, and King, his exaltation after the deepest humiliation. The Prophet addresses some rousing calls to the people, asking them to "awake," give attention, and "seek the Lord," but to these the majority are deaf; his revelation of God's plan of providing a Saviour for sinful men was delivered to no purpose to such as were walking in the ways of unbelief and rebellion (l. 10, liii. 1). The sub-section, chap. lii. 13—liii. to end, describes the Servant as both priest and sacrifice, as "despised and rejected" yet "exalted and lifted up." Of all the prophetical books Isaiah is most frequently quoted in the New Testament, and there are more references to this than to any other division. It is made abundantly clear that the prophet depicted beforehand the sufferings of Christ (Luke xxii. 37, Acts viii. 32, 35), who took upon Himself the form of a servant before He was "highly exalted" as Head over all things to the Church (Phil. ii. 7, 9; Eph. i. 22). The chapter under notice is not without allusion (10, 12) to "the glory that should follow" (1 Pet. i. 11).

Christ was Rejected of Men (1-3).—The "report" or message of the Saviour was not believed; therefore the wondrous purpose of Divine wisdom and power was not realised. Thus the Saviour was misunderstood; being lowly he was disregarded, and, indeed, held in contempt. It is the same to-day. Men who have no disposition Godward see nothing to desire in Christ; and so they put Him from their thoughts. Let us set our hearts upon God; then we shall see grace and glory in Him who revealed God to lost men (John i. 17, 18).

Christ Saves Men (4-9).—In the days of his public ministry, Christ relieved men of griefs and diseases (Matt. viii. 14-17), and when He died He bore their sins and carried their sorrows in a still deeper sense. Wayward man, without restraining grace from God, goes headlong into sin (6); and to reconcile the sinner to the Holy God is beyond human power. Divine love "designed the way to save rebellious man," and this was by the voluntary sacrifice of God's well-beloved Son, who died "the Just for the unjust" (1 Peter iii. 18). Chastisement leading to our peace was endured by Christ; "with his stripes we are healed," for "the Lord hath made to light on Him the iniquity of us all" (6. R.V. marg.). By being "cut off out of the land of the living," He came under the power of death, which He conquered; and his victory is effectual to all whom He justifies, and for whom He makes intercession (11, 12). If this way of salvation shows the love of God, its history shows the wickedness of man, for one who "had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth" was rebelliously and cruelly treated as a usurper and an enemy of men. This exhibits the corruption of the human heart, which cannot endure holiness, and so compassed the murder of the Holy One and the Just (Acts. iii. 14; vii. 52). Boys and girls should look at both aspects of the crucifixion.

Christ will be Satisfied (10-12).—In suffering for sin Christ did the will of God, for which express purpose He came into the world. What seemed to righteous men in Jerusalem to be a disaster, and to evil men to be cause for congratulation, was differently regarded by the only wise God, who rules and overrules throughout the universe. He looked upon Christ as a consecrated offering for human sin, and his submission to death as an act enabling the Righteous God to pardon repentant sinners. The Saviour was raised from the dead to a life of triumph and glory, and shall yet in the diffusion of blessing throughout the world, and the bringing of men into fellowship with God, "see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied." God's will is still Christ's work, and in vv. 11, 12, the Divine verdict is pronounced; it is a full recompense for the condescension and suffering which Christ assumed in compassion for man.

The "Golden Text" (6) is the Gospel in a nutshell, so to speak, setting forth the fruit of sin and the means whereby sin, with its fearful results, has been put away. Let us not reject Christ, thus crucifying Him afresh (Heb. vi. 6); but, accepting Him, let us have his humility of mind (Phil. ii. 5-11), and so share his salvation and victory.

THE SABBATH IN GERMANY.—A correspondent writes:—"The Sabbath can hardly be called a day of rest in Germany. The services in the Lutheran churches are held very early in the day, after which there is little more done in the matter of religion. There are exceptions; e.g., in the town where I stayed there would be service at 4 p.m. in a little church, and one or two services in hospitals or convalescent homes, and places not particularly inviting to attend. Sunday is a great day for attending the theatre, and so one cannot be surprised that the common places of amusement are also open. It is not merely a matter of pleasure, as about midday down go nearly all the shop shutters, and one sees very little difference from the other days.

Personalia.

Rev. W. S. Swanson has been, during the past week, among the sufferers from influenza.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, now in North Africa, has arrived at Biskra, 150 miles south of Constantine.

Consett.—Mr. G. S. Meek, of Glasgow, has concluded a most useful mission in the Primitive Methodist schoolroom in this Durham town.

Rev. Thomas Macpherson, whose work at Everton Valley, Liverpool, is well and widely known, has felt compelled, by reason of ill-health, to resign his pastoral charge.

Rev. W. J. Dawson, preaching at Westminster Chapel on Sunday week, chose in the evening the subject of the Prodigal Son—"a parable," he said, "in which the whole Gospel is condensed."

Rev. S. H. Booth, D.D., the Secretary of the Baptist Union, who has been visiting Egypt for the sake of his health, is now on his way home from Cairo, feeling much the better for his tour.

Dr. Knox, Primate of Ireland, and Lord Plunket, Archbishop of Dublin, are recovering from influenza; but the Bishop of Meath is still suffering from a severe attack of bronchitis.

Dr. Pierson, we regret to hear, was unable to preach on Sunday, being laid up at Bournemouth with a severe cold. His place was taken at the Metropolitan Tabernacle by Rev. H. O. Mackay.

Mr. Spurgeon, in the letter read from him on Lord's-day morning, refers to the broken, uncertain weather at Mentone as retarding his recovery. He is, however, free from pain, and feels hopeful as to the ultimate result.

Rev. David Baron, with his wife, has returned to London after more than thirteen months' travels in Bible lands and on the Continent, testifying to Jews that Jesus is indeed the Christ. His present address is 23, Grove-road, Highgate-road, N.W.

Mr. J. S. Harrison, the well-known Australian evangelist, who has been laid aside for sixteen months, is now so far recovered as to undertake Sunday work and occasional week-night services. He is now preaching at the Great Assembly Hall, and letters may be addressed to him, care of Mr. F. N. Charrington.

Of Dr. Valentine, of Agra Medical Missionary Training Institution, an Indian contemporary says:—"We are glad to be able to put to rest a report that Dr. Valentine, on account of ill-health, is on the eve of leaving India. His health is now better than it has been for a long time, and his work in India never seemed more important or more promising."

Rev. William Stott bade farewell on the evening of Monday week to many warm friends he has made at the Metropolitan Tabernacle during his twelve months' work as assistant pastor. It is not his intention to accept any pastorate, but to give himself to visiting among the home churches. He commenced on Thursday (14th) a week's mission in Battersea-park-road Chapel.

Rev. Robert Wallace, of the Marchmont Home, Belleville, Canada, is again in England making arrangements to take out the usual boys' party in the early spring. He writes: "Our work is prospering. We placed out 282 boys and girls in comfortable houses during the year." Communications to Mr. Wallace should be addressed care of Mr. B. P. Bilbrough, 92, Wellesley-road, Croydon.

Mr. Charles Edwards, well known as an Evangelist and Superintendent of the Winchester Soldiers' Home Mission, is laid up with an attack of rheumatic fever following influenza. His wife thanks God for raising her up from a recent illness in time to nurse her beloved husband. The members of the Mission are much in prayer that God will graciously restore his servant, whose ministry amongst them has been so marvellously blessed for many years. Many doubtless will unite in these petitions.

Orphans at Bangalore.

Allow me to thank the few unknown friends who have so readily responded to my appeal. The response has not yet been adequate to our need. The British resident, Sir H. Prendergast, visited the Home on November 12, and writes as follows: "I visited the Children's Home, and was much pleased with all that I saw at this interesting institution, which seems admirably conducted and calculated to ensure the welfare and happiness of our waifs and strays."—

THE PERSECUTION OF STUNDISTS.—An Odessa correspondent says:—"A party of ten Stundists have passed through Tiflis on their way to Gerusi, on the Persian frontier. These unfortunate sectaries have been sent from Orenburg, a province contiguous to Siberia. Caucasian Protestants who have become obnoxious to the police are forwarded to Orenburg, and doubtless the object of these transfers is to prevent the possibility of union and organisation among the Stundists. Yet another Baptist preacher has been banished to the Trans-Caucasian provinces from the Don Cossack country."

Letters to the Editor.

THE RELIGIOUS CONDITION OF THE PEOPLE.

Dear Sir,—I have read with much interest Dr. Elder Cumming's two articles on "The Religious Condition of the People." The picture is all too true, and it is well that it should be exhibited to the public to stir them up to renewed exertions in behalf of a world lying in wickedness. But although I agree with almost everything that he says, I cannot discover anything in it that ought either to surprise or alarm us, as if the battle were lost and the Church helpless, and as if our only hope lay in the coming of our Lord to judgment.

Dr. Cumming speaks of the religious condition of "the people"—a phrase which, of course, includes both the Church and the world; but as he describes the religious condition, not of the Church, but of the world, it is necessary to amend the title, and call it "the moral condition of the world," because the world has no religion. The moment we do so the subject presents itself in a new light, because the wickedness of the world can never be to the Church the cause either of surprise or alarm. What else do we expect? The corrupt tree cannot bring forth anything but bad fruit. The skin of the negro is very black; but if it were anything else, he would not be a negro; and so unless the world be wicked, as Dr. Cumming describes it, it would not be the world.

But it will be said that it is very bad. Well, was it only the little sinners that Christ came to save? or must the world reform itself a little before the Gospel can undertake to do the rest? When the disciples brought the sick to Jesus they never troubled themselves whether the case was very bad or no. Christ healed them all, and He can do so still.

For thirty-four years I have been preaching that the present state of society is not the fault of the world, but the fault of the Church, and I have never seen cause to recant. The world will never be converted until the Church is both reformed and revived. Christ tells us that the Church is the salt of the earth, and He very plainly warns us that if the earth is not salted it is not the fault of the earth, but the fault of the salt. It has lost its savour. If Dr. Cumming were now to turn the canvas, and tell us the sins of the Church, the picture would be complete.

The only thing in which I do not agree with Dr. Cumming is his regarding it as a calamity that the world has fallen away from the Church of Christ. Would that it were so. If the Church will not come out from the world, the next best thing is that the world would come out from the Church.—Yours faithfully,

JAMES GALL.

Edinburgh, Jan. 8, 1892.

Dear Sir,—The question to which the Rev. Dr. Elder Cumming has drawn attention is the most important of our time. But it is to be wished that he had stated definitely what he means by "the Church of Christ," for if he means to use that phrase as a synonym for the churches, as he seems to do in the seventh and eleventh paragraphs of his first article, then, as one who must identify himself with the lapsed multitudes, I humbly, respectfully, but very sincerely beg his attention and the attention of your readers to the following considerations.

In the fifth paragraph of the first article Dr. Cumming leads us to hope that he is about to show the origin and explanation of the falling away of multitudes of the people everywhere from the churches, but in the end he does nothing more than dwell on certain special evils which he conceives mark this falling away. It may be, however, that he considers these evils are themselves the origin and explanation of the problem in question. If so, I beg him, and those who think with him, not to take it ill if I say that most of the evils to which he alludes have existed in former times, and some to a far greater extent than to-day, while the one or two which may perhaps rightly be regarded as forming part of the origin and explanation of the problem are quite insufficient to explain its magnitude and persistent growth.

Intemperance and immorality, compared to the increase of population, are nothing like the gigantic evils they were in the days of our fathers and grandfathers. In this assertion I feel that I am well backed historically, and also in the memories of those who, like myself, can go back to the earlier half of this century. History again shows us that in every age and country where the Sabbath has been represented as a Christian institution its desecration has been ceaselessly deplored. Neglect of Church ordinances, again, is rather a result than an explanation of the origin of the problem. Nor can it be found in the extraordinary and mysterious indifference to the prevalence and power of Rome, grave a symptom as that is of the state of religion in England. The only points that can be spoken of as in some degree an explanation of the problem are unbelief and scepticism and the revolt against authority, these features, though existing in other times, being undoubtedly far more thorough and widespread to-day than at any previous period.

Dr. Cumming has had before him one consideration which might have led him farther, and enabled him to see that evils peculiar to this country could not be the origin and explanation of this falling away of the people. He notes that it is common to all the churches in England; he might have extended his observations, and he would then have found that it was common to all the churches in Europe, and that in a far greater degree than in England.

But what renders the portent so peculiarly striking is that this great and ever-increasing falling away of the people from the churches has taken place concurrently with a religious propaganda never before equalled for its vigour and widespread activity. Under such circumstances, does it not seem more probable that the origin and explanation of a falling away so general lies rather in some evil common to all the churches in Christendom than in the special and peculiar wickedness of the people in our age and in this particular generation?

The people of this, as the people of other European countries, are becoming more and more convinced that the churches of all denominations, together with their allied institutions, are unfaithful, insincere, and unreal. On the very day Dr. Cumming's last article appeared the Church of England began to read in our national temples the words which, above all others, express the doctrine of Jesus Christ, so opposed to human wisdom, and therefore exactly calculated to test the real faith, obedience, and Christ-likeness of English Christianity. Few who listened, from the 7th to the 12th of January, to the New Testament morning lessons but must mournfully admit that they act on quite the opposite doctrine to that taught in the Sermon on the Mount, justifying themselves in the thought that, however difficult it may be to prove their practice is in harmony with the doctrine of Christ, it is certainly in harmony with the doctrine and practice of all the churches.

This illustration shows that our churches do not so much set forth the religion of Jesus Christ as the religion of England. And it is the same on the Continent, the churches being rather maintainers of a traditional Christianity adapted to the prevalent national ideas than of the never-changing, universally true doctrine of Jesus Christ. And thus it comes to pass in the various wars which have desolated Europe, and threaten in the near future greater desolation still, the various churches always sympathise with their own nation, right or wrong, rather than with the kingdom of Christ.

What the people feel is that the churches are world-like—that is to say, they think as the world thinks and do as the world does. There may be much that is right, true, and noble in this, for there is much that is right, true, and noble in the world's teaching and practice; but in the struggle of life the people feel they want something more than this—something that shall help them, not only in their individual trials, but shall assure the triumph of justice, truth, and love upon the earth.

This falling away of the peoples of Europe does not imply a falling away from Christ, as would be proved should the Stundists, who from all accounts preach and practise a more Christlike religion than that for a long time prevalent in Europe, be able to send missionaries to us who sit in darkness and the shadow of death.

ONE OF THE LAPSED MULTITUDE.

Palmer-Place Mission.

THIS growing Mission has for several years been carried on at Palmer-place, Holloway-road, in a rented hall, which is now about to be demolished, as it stands in the way of some local alterations. The work of the Mission is varied and extensive. On Sunday mornings, from November to March, a free breakfast—the expense borne by Mr. M. H. Rackstraw—is provided for the very poor. These gatherings are enlivened by Gospel singing, and closed by a brief address. The Sunday afternoon school numbers 300 scholars. On Sunday evenings services for children and adults are held. Volunteer workers from a Bible-class Aid Society, in connection with Mr. Rackstraw's establishment, visit the necessitous poor at their homes, and dispense relief by tickets.

The threatened stoppage of all this work, through the demolition of the Mission premises, and the lack of suitable accommodation elsewhere, has been causing very serious anxiety, the more so that three somewhat similar North London Missions have lately been closed in this way.

The Palmer-place Mission friends have, however, at last, after considerable difficulty, secured convenient premises nearly opposite those they occupied—viz., Gordon Hall, at the corner of Drayton-park, thereby also putting an end to much that had been carried on there, objectionable from a Christian point of view, and derogatory to the noble Christian hero's name it bears. This step involves increased expenditure, but the working committee have ventured upon it in the faith that the Lord will provide the additional funds that are needed. Communications should be sent to Mr. E. W. Jones, 57, Park-street, Islington.

DEVOTIONAL MEETINGS FOR THE DEEPENING OF SPIRITUAL LIFE, PORTMAN ROOMS.—These meetings are now resumed every Friday at 3.30 p.m. The following are the speakers for the next three Fridays:—Revs. A. E. Barnes-Lawrence, F. B. Meyer, and Dr. Donald Fraser.

The Book World.

THE OLD HOUSE AND ITS LITTLE INMATES. By Mrs. Bevan. (2s. 6d. Holness.) The pathos and point of this pretty narrative will charm juvenile readers, and also impress them with the love of Jesus.

THE METHODIST FAMILY, a well-known monthly illustrated magazine, is now in its twenty-third volume. The parts for last year make a very readable book, which will be welcome in many a home. (2s. Elliot Stock.)

THE PLATFORM RECITER, edited by Alfred H. Miles. (2s. 6d. Hutchinson and Co.) This volume of 650 pages, printed in good plain type, contains a large and varied collection, from which all tastes and ages may make choice for recitation.

THE BEAUTIFUL LIFE OF CHRIST AND OTHER STUDIES. By G. B. Johnson. (5s. Alexander and Shepheard.) Here are twenty-three discourses, many of them very thoughtful and inspiring. They come from the pen of a pastor of many years' experience, and embody sound and robust evangelical teaching.

ROGER WENTWOOD'S BIBLE (C. H. Kelly) is a story of absorbing interest, from the facile pen of Charles R. Parsons. The follies of unbelief and intellectual pride are laid bare, and the story ends with the once infidel lecturer receiving and loving the Bible he had refused at the hands of a dying Christian mother.

ROMANS VII: WHAT DOES IT TEACH? By Frederic Bishop. (2s. 6d. Nisbet.) The thoughtful writer of this little work holds that the Apostle describes in this passage his experience as a Jew under the law, so that it does not conflict with the truth he loved to proclaim, of victory over sin being attainable through faith in the power of Christ.

HYMNS ON THE SECOND ADVENT OF THE LORD JESUS, edited by Rev. Dr. Bullinger, is a collection which will be welcome to many for use on special occasions. The hymns are admirably classified, and some of the best will be new to most Christian people. An index completes a beautiful contribution to a glorious literature. (6d. The Author, 7, St. Paul's-churchyard, E.C.)

QUAKER PICTURES, by Wilfred Whitten, is a charming quarto publication by Edward Hicks, jun., 14, Bishopsgate Without. (3s. 6d.) Many great painters have worked on Quaker subjects, and some of their pictures are here produced by engraving. Famous faces and historic scenes, accompanied by succinct letterpress descriptions, constitute this a book which will have attractions for many beyond the limits of the Society of Friends.

BEHRAMJI M. MALABARI. A Biographical Sketch. By Dayaram Gidumal, LL.B., C.S., Acting District Judge, Shikarpur. (6s. T. Fisher Unwin.) Florence Nightingale writes an introduction to this very interesting book, which is valuable for the large amount of information it affords regarding the infant marriage and enforced widowhood evils of India, rather than for its statement of the peculiar theological opinions of the well-known "Pilgrim Reformer."

RICHARD DE LACY, a Tale of the Later Lollards, by C. Edmund Maurice, is eminently readable. The pages depict life in Oxford and London in the fifteenth century, showing the risks a young man had to run because he held strong opinions on religious matters. A prominent character in the story is Jack Cade, whose political position and movements are forcibly delineated. The book is obviously the work of one who has endeavoured to do justice to a subject he has carefully studied. (Wells Gardner, Darton, and Co.)

THE GREAT REST GIVER. By Wm. Haig Miller. (2s. 6d. Religious Tract Society.) Right grandly does this volume show that Christ has power to give relief under all the various troubles that assail humanity. The sections are brief and numerous; they not only set forth the glories of Christ, but offer tender counsels to those who feel their need of Him. Bright with anecdotes and historical allusions, the pages are worthy of their versatile author, whose departure many do not cease to mourn. The book will afford acceptable reading to distressed and afflicted Christians.

THE SABBATH IN NEW ENGLAND. By Alice Morse Earle. (6s. Hodder and Stoughton.) The worship of the Pilgrim Fathers and their successors in New England is laid bare in this attractive volume. The buildings and meetings, the ministers and deacons, with the various appointments and officers of religious life, are described in a very readable manner, and with a great wealth of anecdote. The book should not be overlooked by those who study Puritan history. The pages are very entertaining, the author having a strong sense of humour. Many will think that this latter faculty might with advantage have been held under firmer control.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

From Sampson Low and Co.:—THE RECTOR OF AMESTY. A novel in three volumes. By John Ryce. 31s. 6d.

From H. Alabaster, Gatehouse, and Co., 22, Paternoster-row:—THE STRANGE HISTORY OF A DYNAMO. By T. E. Gatehouse. 1s.

From James Clarke and Co.:—THE CHRIST OF THE HEART AND THE CHRIST OF HISTORY, and Other Sermons. By Rev. Z. Mather, 5s.

OBITUARY.

MRS. J. R. CHEYSE.

We announce, with deep regret, the death, on January 11, of Elizabeth J. Cheyse, aged sixty-five, who succumbed to influenza followed by bronchitis. She was the wife of Mr. J. R.Cheyse,who for twenty-seven years held a responsible position in the office of The Christian.

MR. JOHN CHAPMAN, OF HARROW.

On Lord's Day morning, January 10, Mr. John Chapman, of Suffolk House, Harrow-on-the-Hill, passed away after a few days' illness, to the great sorrow of the loved ones left behind. His loss will be felt by all, especially the poor, whose cause he was ever ready to help. Since 1834 he has been actively engaged in his Master's work, and he leaves behind him a memory to be cherished.

LADY CAVAN.

We much regret to learn that the Countess of Cavan died in Ottawa on Monday last, from illness caused by a severe chill. She was on a visit to her son, Viscount Kilcoursie, who is a lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards and an Aide-de-Camp to the Governor-General of Canada. The Countess was the only daughter of the Rev. John Olive, Rector of Ayot St. Lawrence, Herts. She took an active interest in various forms of Christian work.

MR. JAMES WILSON, OF WALTON, LIVERPOOL.

In the closing days of the old year there passed away, after a painful illness, an aged believer who was remarkably blessed of God, and the brightest and happiest of Christians. Since his conversion in 1879, Mr. Wilson had set himself resolutely to bring personal persuasion and influence to bear on all with whom he came in contact. His pastor at Walton traces three distinct stages in his spiritual life, each leading him into a deeper and fuller experience of the things of God; and fitting him for peculiarly fruitful service. In August last he ruptured a blood vessel, and although he rallied to some small extent the pain returned, and he suffered intensely, but without murmuring. Amongst his latest utterances was, "Oh, that men would accept Christ."

MR. B. SCOTT, CITY CHAMBERLAIN.

While many will deeply regret the loss sustained in the falling asleep of the City Chamberlain, Mr. Benjamin Scott, F.R.S.A., the mournful circumstances attending his death will be felt, far and near, to add a singular touch of pathos to the sad event. His golden wedding was about to be celebrated, and at the beginning of his last illness his wife devoted herself to nursing. In a few days, however, she was struck by influenza, from which she died last Thursday, the faithful nurse thus going home before the sick patient. Mr. Scott, who had been City Chamberlain since 1859, was highly respected in City circles, being one of the most active and influential of City officials. As a faithful and devoted Christian he was loved by many, being ever ready to further by every means in his power the Lord's work. The position he has firmly taken and eloquently defended for years, in regard to the Opium Question, the Contagious Diseases Acts, and similar evils, is well known. He has published several works of importance on City matters, while his books on "The Catacombs of Rome," and on "A State Iniquity," were able and useful contributions to Christian literature.

MR. WILLIAM TAYLOR, THE NAVVY EVANGELIST.

All who are interested in the evangelising of the masses will regret to hear of the death of this veteran in the service of the King, which occurred at his residence at Fulwell on January 12, after only ten hours' illness. The immediate cause of death was apoplexy, though he had been suffering from cardiac debility for some years past. He had been connected with the London Evangelisation Society for upwards of twenty-five years, was their oldest and most successful evangelist, and God has greatly owned and blessed his efforts. He was probably the most successful working-man preacher of his day. The secret of his success, under the Divine blessing, lay in the simplicity and clearness with which he preached the saving truths of the everlasting Gospel. He was also richly endowed with a large share of native eloquence and homeliness which found its way to the hearts of his audiences.

RIGHT REV. DR. REEVES, BISHOP OF DOWN.

Much regret is felt throughout Ireland generally at the unexpected death of Dr. Reeves, Protestant Bishop of Down, Connor, and Dromore. He died in Dublin on Tuesday week of influenza after a few days' illness. He was a native of Charlville, co. Cork. He was born in 1815, and after a brilliant course in Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated both in arts and medicine, he was ordained in 1838 for the curacy of Lisburn. He became Dean of Armagh in 1875, and was elected Bishop of Down, Connor, and Dromore in 1886. He was also an honorary Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, Ireland, and President of the Royal Irish Academy. He was the most eminent Celtic scholar of the day, and the greatest authority upon Irish antiquarian matters. He was an able speaker, a conscientious and upright man, and the Church has lost by his death one of her best and most gifted prelates.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Archdeaconry of Bristol, vacant through the death of Canon Norris, has been filled by Canon H. Robertson, of Tewkesbury.

The new chapel which has been erected at Ridley Hall, Cambridge, at the expense of a former member of the Hall, who desires to conceal his name, will be opened on the 27th inst.

At St. Luke's, Liverpool, Rev. J. T. Madden is giving, on Friday afternoons, important series of lectures on the Epistle to the Hebrews, which are attracting some attention.

Bishop Bardsley, the other day, signalised his approaching departure from the Isle of Man by entertaining to supper the postal and telegraph staff at the head post-office, Douglas, addressing them at the close in earnest terms.

It is understood, says The Manchester Guardian, that Archdeacon Straton will be consecrated Bishop of Sodor and Man by the Archbishop of York on February 24 (St. Matthias's day), and that the ceremony will take place in Wakefield Cathedral.

The Bishop of Sydney has made a request that a representative should be sent out from this country to Australia for the purpose of testing and of accepting candidates for the missionary field. It is expected that ere long the Church Missionary Society will respond to the appeal thus made.

Lady Clarke, wife of the Solicitor-General, has given £5,900 for the purpose of raising a permanent church in St. Peter's district, Staines, and Sir Edward Clarke has promised to arrange for an endowment of the building. A fund for the erection of such a church had previously received the support of Princess Christian.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The P.S.A. movement seems to be spreading widely in Liverpool.

It may be noted as a matter of general interest that The Evangelical Magazine has now entered on its hundredth volume.

The Congregational Union announces an examination of young people in religious knowledge, to be held on Tuesday, 9th February.

A series of addresses on "Truths for the Times" are being delivered on Sunday evenings, by various preachers, in Christ Church, Teddington.

With the object of promoting the social and spiritual welfare of the young a Christian Band has been formed in connection with Oakham Church.

Rev. W. H. Hill, pastor of Faversham, was suddenly seized with illness whilst preaching on Sunday week, and the service was abruptly closed. He has, however, now recovered.

On the morning of Sunday week a fire broke out in the vestry of the Congregational Church, Newport, Dundee. The block containing the schoolroom and offices was totally destroyed, and considerable damage was done to the interior of the church.

Rev. Newman Hall's New Year's sermon was from the motto text of the church for the year, "Keep yourselves in the love of God" (Jude 21). At the Communion service Mr. Hall announced that though the weather of the past month had been very severe, no members of the church had died during that period.

BAPTIST.

The good results of Messrs. Fullerton and Smith' s labours at Ashford continue to appear.

Brentwood Church Young Men's Society have started a series of Pleasant Sunday Evenings for the people.

Riga papers mention that many of the persecuted Baptists in Russia are emigrating to Brazil.

The pastor of the Tunbridge Wells Tabernacle announces that there were forty-three additions to the church last year.

Rev. G. Anderson Miller, of Rochester, has commenced a series of bright, homely services for the people on Sundays.

The Baptist, we observe, has a capital portrait and sketch of Rev. Hugh D. Brown, whose devoted work in Dublin is so well known.

Brief and bright Sunday afternoon services were commenced in the Vines Christian Institute, Rochester, on Sunday, by Rev. W. J. Andrew.

At a meeting of the Baptist Social Union, held on Friday week, Rev. F. B. Meyer gave an informative address on "Women's Work in Our Church."

Rev. G. T. Ennals, pastor of Cann Hall Baptist Church, Leytonstone, E., has celebrated simultaneously his silver wedding and the semi-jubilee of his ministerial life. In his manifold and earnest labours, which are continually and increasingly blessed, he enjoys the help and encouragement of a devoted wife. In his general work he is cheered by the hearty co-operation of a united church.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. Mr. Norwell, of Dunblane, has resolved to accept the call to Islington.

Haverstock-hill is to lose Rev. Duncan Sillars, who has accepted the call to Merchiston, Edinburgh.

It has been decided to prosecute the work in Drury-lane on new and vigorous lines, under the care of Rev. Courthope Todd.

Messrs. Duffus and Gregory, whose illness in China we noticed lately, have been ordered home, and are now on their return voyage.

The South London Presbytery has had an animated discussion on the new "Articles of Faith," it being maintained that these were of the nature of a popular exposition, and not of a subordinate standard.

Active steps are being taken throughout the Presbyteries for the purpose of attracting attention to the foreign mission work of the Presbyterian Church of England, and raising £10,000 to place the missionary fund on a satisfactory basis.

Dr. Edmond, as Convenor of the Jewish Committee, has issued a letter on the work in Whitechapel-road and in Morocco, both of which have been owned of God. He feels that prophecy and providence alike emphasize the present importance of missions to Israel.

The Oldham congregation held its annual meeting on Saturday, the minister (Rev. Thos. Boyd, M.A.) in the chair. The reports, financial and otherwise, were cheering. Despite many deaths, the membership, Sunday-school, and choir had all increased during the year, and the sum raised for all purposes was also enhanced. The church is free from debt, and the congregation are addressing themselves to the clearing of their buildings from ground rent.

METHODIST.

The Wilts and Somerset Mission has opened a new station at Sutton Veney.

The work at Green-lanes and Mildmay-park has of late made most cheering progress.

At Chatham the new chapel and school for soldiers are progressing, and a very good work is going on.

The work at St. Peter's, Leeds, under the care of Rev. G. Denton, has been remarkably blessed of late.

Special services are being conducted during the present week by Rev. T. Waugh at the Wesleyan Chapel, St John's-wood.

The work at the New Surrey Chapel has, during the past year, been remarkably successful, and Mr. Senior feels greatly encouraged.

The Victoria Wesleyan Chapel at Kingswood, Bristol, is building a new Sunday-school, of which the memorial-stones were laid on Monday week.

The Methodist work in the Mendi country has now been commenced, and much is expected from this Forward Movement work in Africa.

Rev. Charles Garrett preached the Trust sermons at Longsight on Sunday week and distributed the juvenile missionary prizes on Saturday. This society has raised £228 during the year.

Dr. Rigg has a valuable paper on the three years' circuit system in The Connexional Magazine for the month. While admitting that certain advantage might attend some relaxation of the rule, he claims there is no general desire for its alteration.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Isaac Sharp has reached Busawal on his ministering journey.

The Friends in Glasgow have an interesting shelter work among young women.

An interesting series of drawing-room meetings has just been held in Sunderland for the deepening of spiritual life among the Friends.

Messrs. Brooks and Fox, the delegates deputed by the Society of Friends of Great Britain to visit the famine-striken districts in Russia, have returned here from their tour in those regions. From what these gentlemen saw and heard they are convinced that the distress is spread over a vast extent of country, and they express the hope that all nations will give proof of their sympathy for the people of Russia in its present distressed condition.

Mr. J. B. Braithwaite, in a paper read lately, held that Friends have six weapons qualifying them particularly for the evangelisation of the masses—(1) Their belief that God had a witness for Himself in the soul of every human being; (2) their belief in the immediate and direct guidance of the Holy Spirit; (3) their belief that salvation may be obtained through Christ alone; (4) their disuse of outward rites and ceremonies; (5) the absence of a paid ministry; and (6) their democratic form of Church government.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The Women's Missionary Association, connected with Eakenhead Presbyterian Church has raised during the past year £160 for missions.

An Irish Presbyterian minister has offered £100 a year for three years towards the cost of an additional Presbyterian missionary for India.

A Christian Workers' Association has been formed in connection with the Congregational churches in Belfast, and specially aims at the training of local preachers.

A meeting to bid farewell to Revs. W. C. Radcliffe and A. Wilson, who are about to leave for work in Queensland, was held on Monday evening week in the Assembly's College, Belfast.

There are now in connection with the Baptist Mission in Ireland, seventeen churches, twenty-two agents, and 1175 members, against twelve churches, seventeen agents, and 958 members three years ago.

The influenza epidemic is at present very severe in the South of Ireland. Many ministers of various denominations are suffering from it; several schools in Cork are closed on account of it; and the Bishop of Killaloe has issued a special form of prayer to be used in the churches in reference to it.

Rev. W. F. Carstin, incumbent of St. Luke's Church, Belfast, who is opposed to the pew-rent system as a hindrance to God's work, has taken the bold step of throwing himself, as to his stipend, upon the liberality of his congregation, provided they are willing to abandon the system.

The correspondent of an English weekly having stated that Protestantism was nearly extinct in the dioceses of Cashel and Limerick, it turns out that there are in the former diocese eighty ministers, with an average of 127 persons under their care, and a salary of £186; while in the latter there are sixty ministers with an average of 208 persons, and an average salary of £233. There are also several Methodist and Presbyterian congregations in the districts referred to.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

Mr. T. Willand, an old and valued member of Uffculme Congregational Church: Rev. Mr. Watkins, of Cardiff, one of the most useful and energetic of South Wales Wesleyan Methodist pastors; George Nelson Haden, one of the oldest members of Tabernacle Church, Trowbridge; at Houghton-le-Spring on Jan. 6, aged sixty-three, Rev. James Milligan, D.D., well known as a successful Presbyterian minister and author; at Inverurie, on Jan. 8th, Rev. John Davidson, D.D., aged seventy-six, after forty-eight years' faithful ministry; at Hawick, on Jan. 8th, Rev. Dr. Macrae, who has laboured in the Gospel forty-nine years; Mr. W. Rouse, an old and valued member of Liskeard Primitive Methodist Circuit; Miss Gray, for twenty-two years a member of Herne Bay Congregational Church; at Moville, co. Donegal, Rev. John Bell, Presbyterian minister; at Dunmanway, co. Cork, Mr. Thos. Hollins, a zealous and successful Christian worker; at Hillsborough co. Down, Rev. Wm. Robinson, rector of Kilwarlin, aged seventy-seven years; Mr. Roger Horner, a Methodist class leader for many years in Dublin.

Special Religious Services in Theatres and Town Halls.

These Services were commenced more than thirty-two years ago and have been held every winter with great success. The Committee have recently added to their labours by building Mission Halls in memory of their late president, the seventh Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G., while some hundreds of smaller halls have been assisted by grants of money. The majority of these buildings are in the very poorest parts of London, where it is utterly impossible to raise funds locally.—Contributions will be gratefully received by the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, or by the Secretary, Mr. C. M. Sawell, 3, Bridewell-place, E.C.

LONDON CITY MISSION.

500 MISSIONARIES now employed in beseeching the masses in the Metropolis to be reconciled to God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

House-to-House visitation. Personal dealing.
Work purely undenominational.

For the last two years the expenditure has exceeded the income by £3500. To meet this deficit of £7000 the Committee have been compelled to draw upon their comparatively small reserve fund.

Unless there is an immediate increase in the income of the Mission they fear they will be obliged, most reluctantly, to reduce their staff of Missionaries.

To avert this calamity they ask all friends to come, without loss of time, to the help of the Mission. The need is urgent.

PEPSONYMIN TONIC

THIS is a Genuine Remedy. It cures INDIGESTION. This is not mere assertion. It is a fact. Experience has proved it. DR. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., says:—"The many martyrs to the ignorant use of unsuitable and crude drugs will benefit largely by from use." MRS. HENRY KING-PARKES, F.R.S.A., says:—"I have had its efficacy tested in several severe cases of dyspepsia, and invariably with beneficial results." One patient says:—"I have derived more benefit from Pepsonymin Tonic than from any of the remedies so much advertised." Another writes:—"The headache, dizziness, and drowsiness have entirely, and, I hope, permanently left me." Try it. Ask your Chemist for it. If he does not keep it in stock, ask him to order it for you. If difficult to obtain, order direct from FRANCIS SPITE & Co., Ltd., St. ENOCH SQUARE, GLASGOW, who will send it post free for 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., or 4s. 6d. per bottle. The trade supplied with Pepsonymin Tonic by LYNCH and Co., MAY, ROBERTS and Co., F. NEWBERY and SONS, London, E.C.; GOODHALL, BACKHOUSE and Co., Leeds, &c.

DONATIONS
RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1892.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O.Orders, not by stamps.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders should be made payable to Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C., and crossed "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss.

J. C.—Please say if amount is for "Social Scheme" or S. A.

S. M. P.—Please say whether C. I. M. or C. T. M.

BOOKS USEFUL TO Bible Students.
"Here we have gold dust."—Rev. C. H. SPURGEON.

CHOICE SAYINGS.
Consisting of over 800 striking and profitable comments on almost every subject relating to Christian faith and practice. By ROBERT C. CHAPMAN, of Barnstaple. Tinted Covers, 9d.; Cloth Limp, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Editions:
Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.; Morocco, 3s.
"It contains a large variety of notes and expositions of the Scriptures, presented in the terse manner which is known to characterise the Author in his preaching and teaching of the Word of Life. There is both manna and old corn of the land here in rich variety."
Footsteps of Truth.

"An excellent gift for young people."—RECORD.
"OUT OF EGYPT."
A SERIES OF DISCOURSES AND BIBLE READINGS ON THE EXODUS OF ISRAEL AND ITS SPIRITUAL LESSONS. By Rev. Dr. G. F. PENTECOST. Tinted Covers, 2s.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.
"A powerful and brilliant work. Dr. PENTECOST is not only a man of marked ability and scholarship; he is also a pulpit orator of the highest order. He at once arrests the attention, penetrates the heart, moves the affections, fires the imagination, bends the will, and directs the conduct. There is no escaping the spell of his voice, the charm of his style, and the power of his utterances. Anything from his pen may be bought with eagerness. He is equally at home in addressing saint and sinner, as this volume amply proves."—Oldham Chronicle.

CHRIST AND THE SCRIPTURES.
THE LIVING WORD AND THE WRITTEN WORD. By Rev. Dr. ADOLPH SAPHIR, B.A. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Editions:
Cloth extra, 3s.; with Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.
"We know of no volume that we more earnestly desire to see in the hands of persons of every age who are pondering the religious question of momentous importance, so much agitating men's minds at the present time. It is admirably adapted for the mature and thoughtful; and also peculiarly fitted to give a right direction to the lives and thoughts of the young, and to mould them into Christians of a high type of character."
The Newcastle Daily Chronicle.

Trinitarian Bible Society

FOR THE CIRCULATION OF UNCORRUPTED VERSIONS OF THE WORD OF GOD.

THIS SOCIETY WAS INSTITUTED IN 1831.

IT IS A DISTINCTIVELY

PROTESTANT BIBLE SOCIETY.

It witnesses for the SON OF GOD, by excluding from governing membership Socinians, who deny the Deity and Atonement of Christ.

It witnesses for the TRUTH OF GOD, by excluding all corrupted Roman Catholic Versions from its circulation.

It witnesses for the GRACE OF GOD, by a Free Distribution of only the best translations that can be obtained. "Whether men will hear or whether they will forbear." During the past year its circulation was 227,036 Bibles, Testaments, and Portions in 21 languages.

It made free grants to Forty Missionary Societies at home and abroad.

The New Hebrew Testament has reached its fourth edition, and two hundred and twelfth thousand. It is being freely distributed amongst Jews in all parts of the world by the MILDMAY MISSION TO THE JEWS. This work is so extraordinary that it is one of the most remarkable signs of the times. See the Society's Quarterly Record.

The Society is producing a Judeo-German Bible. Six parts (355,000) have been published, and have been warmly welcomed.

The Society is actively engaged in freely distributing the first and only Protestant Bible in Brittany. It is also sending large and free grants to India, Brazil, Argentina, Italy, Spain, &c., &c.

DEPOSITORY, 7, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, LONDON, E.C.

Treasurer, JAMES MADEN HOLT, Esq; Chairman of Committee, HARRY CURTIS NISBET, Esq.; Secretary, Rev. E. W. BULLINGER, D.D., who will be glad to receive CONTRIBUTIONS for this important work.

THE ANCHORAGE.

SPECIAL HOUSE OF SHELTER FOR THE MORE RESPECTABLE CLASS OF YOUNG WOMEN.

Trustees:—REV. H. E. FOX & GEORGE HANBURY, Esq.

NINETY-SIX per cent. of the Mothers sheltered last year are now known to be leading respectable lives. The Committee therefore confidently appeal for funds to maintain the work, full particulars of which will be found in the Annual Report, which will be forwarded on application to the SECRETARY, 32, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

Orders for garments made at the ANCHORAGE will be thankfully received by the SECRETARY as above, from whom price list may be obtained.

Contributions may be paid to Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; or, to the SECRETARY OF THE ANCHORAGE, 32, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

ADDRESSES BY D. L. MOODY.
132nd Thousand.

DELIVERED IN ENGLAND AND REVISED BY HIMSELF. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s.

Presentation Edition: Cloth Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Primitive Methodist:—"With the effect of these Addresses when spoken the whole land is acquainted; and now that they are written, they will tend to keep in force the impression they have already made."

THE FAITHFUL SAYING:
19th Thousand.

A SERIES OF GOSPEL ADDRESSES. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The King's Highway:—"These discourses are full of power and homely beauty, and exemplify very fully the strong points of the great Evangelist. His anecdotes are so fresh, so pointed, and so touching."

HEAVEN:

Temperance Notes.

A conference of Friends interested in temperance has been called, February 3, in Devonshire.

The Bishop of London, speaking last week in Hackney, held that the strength of the temperance cause lies in the Bands of Hope.

A number of pledges were recently taken by the Penge Tabernacle Total Abstinence Society at a tea provided for two hundred of the labouring classes.

Since the commencement of an Undenominational Christian work at Rainham, Essex, over 350 have signed the Temperance pledge and donned "the Blue."

During the year some excellent aggressive work has been carried on in connection with Brighton Thomas-street Gospel Temperance Society. As many as 184 pledges have been taken.

The Temperance secretaries of the various Methodist districts in Ireland have earnestly taken up "The Million More Scheme," and are hoping to secure the enrolment of a very large number of new names in the various Sabbath schools on the first Sunday of the New Year.

Mr. Benson, of Southwark and Lambeth Mission, reports that during his sixteen years' work he has ta ken 2138 Temperance pledges. These are taken at the various indoor and outdoor Meetings—often at the homes of the people—and occasionally at his own house.

On a recent Saturday evening at Upper Norwood, it was found that at eight public-houses within one hundred yards of the St. Aubyn's-road lecture hall, 3104 persons entered within two hours—1984 men, 914 women, and 206 children, 1202 having entered one public-house.

An Ottawa despatch of the 8th inst. to The Times states that "the policy of prohibition in the North-West Territories received a death-blow on Thursday, when the Legislature passed an ordinance respecting the sale of intoxicating liquors, and providing for the issue of licences with that object."

The Annual Prayer Meeting of the Manchester Women's Christian Temperance Association and Police-court Mission was held on Wednesday, 13th inst. Canon Hicks and Rev. James McDougall spoke encouragingly of the future of the Temperance cause. There was a good attendance.

The Free Church of Scotland Temperance Society issue a very satisfactory report for 1891, stating that of ministers in charges 681 are abstainers, and of 36 ministers ordained during the year 35 are abstainers. At the New College, Edinburgh, out of 130 regular students, 110 are total abstainers. The figures show that the cause is steadily progressing in Scotland.

A German paper states that the Bill now before the Reichstag for the prevention of drunkenness is of a most sweeping character, and in all probability it will be carried. The most notable of its provisions is that which would give power to local authorities to confine all persons known to be habitual drunkards until such time as they should be certified to be cured. The spread of habits of intoxication is said to be serious in many parts of Germany; and the Emperor says it shall be put a stop to by the strong arm of the law, just as shop-lifting, or rioting, or burglaries have to be dealt with.

Madame Antoinette Sterling attended a Band of Hope conversazione at the Morley Hall, Hackney. When asked to sing she said she would like to give a few words of personal testimony. She had been nearly all her life a total abstainer. When on long tours with members of her profession it had been rather an aggravation to them to see, when they were pretty well prostrated, that she was almost or quite as fresh at the end of the journey as at the beginning. They also complained of the quality of the wine furnished them, as well as of the water. She took milk and cocoa, and also water, of which she did not complain, and had scarcely missed one engagement in the year. She had never had a day's bad health, and had not suffered from those aches and pains of which she had heard other people complaining continually.—Dr. Richardson said that this lady's testimony was as strong physiologically as any individual could give, and was most valuable, coming from a member of her profession.

The Native Races and the Liquor Traffic United Committee have just received a letter from Gunguyana, King of Gazaland, in answer to a letter sent to him from the Committee by the hands of his envoys, with whom the Committee had a long interview last June. He writes:—"Nondwengo Kraal, November 16, 1891. I have been strengthened in my endeavours to suppress 'Liquor Traffic' in my country by this communication from you on the subject, and if it were possible for your committee to influence the Governments of England and Portugal towards preventing the introduction of intoxicants to my country they would be conferring lasting favour on me and the Gaza nation. The difficulty of my stopping my people purchasing drink from the white man is small. It would be a great matter, however, for me to close my country to white traders. Now, if you two powerful white nations, who are both my friends, would unite your influence to stop this introduction of liquor—then the curse of drunkenness would pass from my land. I thank you for your efforts amongst the peoples of my brother kings—and the noble aims of your Society will have with the men of Gaza the support of their King, Gunguyana X (his mark)."

Failing Health.

However much the world of medicine is at variance on other treatments, both Physicians and Surgeons are agreed that diseases in this age of great debility, delicacy of constitution, and little stamina, yield only to remedies which, like Guy's Tonic, increase the appetite, strengthen the stomach, regulate the liver, give tone to the nervous organisation, and by imparting vitality, strength, and energy to the entire muscular and mental systems, make the feeble and delicate vigorous, robust, and strong.

IT IS NOT CLAIMED

That Guy's Tonic will infallibly cure every ill under the sun, but we do say, here and now, that it should immediately be resorted to—

When digestion is accompanied by flatulency.

When pain, weight, fulness or distension is felt after eating.

When there is drowsiness after meals—a very common symptom.

When there is distaste for food of all kinds, or,

When there is a dull weak, failing, or pining appetite.

TO ANY ONE DESIRING to test our remedies, we will send, securely packed in a special box, a bottle of Guy's Tonic, together with a free sample box of Guy's Fruit Pills and complete "Guide to Digestion," containing simple instructions as to the Guy's Tonic Treatment, post paid, for 2s. 9d. Address all letters to Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C. Guy's Tonic is sold retail of all Chemists, at 2s. 9d. per bottle, and Guy's Fruit Pills at 1s. 1½d. per box.

To Ministers, Evangelists, Sabbath School Superintendents and Teachers, and Christian Workers.

"GOLDEN TREASURY" BIRTHDAY BOOK.

With Beautifully Illuminated Frontispiece.

Elegantly bound in Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d. Presentation Editions: French Morocco, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.; Rich Coloured Leather, Padded, Gilt Edges, 4s. 6d.

In this country very few books, except the "Pilgrim's Progress," have been so largely appreciated as

"BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY."

In this Edition—Arranged as a Birthday Book—four additional pages are introduced at the close of each month's portions. These extra pages are arranged with blank square spaces, one for every day. Each space is adapted for receiving four entries, consequently the total number of names which can be inscribed in the "Birthday" Edition amounts to Over Fifteen Hundred.

"Anna Shipton occupies a niche all her own; for, while all her chapters could be described as sermons, they are unique sermons—after the order of those of Frances Ridley Havergal. The volumes embraced in the 'Library' are simple, cultured, persuasive. They are gems; and no single reading can reveal their many and varied excellences. No more helpful present could be made to a young lady, a Sunday-school teacher, or a Sunday-school library."—Oldham Chronicle.

THIRTY-EIGHTH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

DISEASED LUNGS and THROAT—CASE at DUBLIN.

Mr. Congreve has received a communication from an old patient connected with the GOSPEL BOOK MISSION,

Salisbury. (If the reader will refer to Mr. G. T. Congreve's book on "Consumption, &c., &c.," on page 55, case No. 96, he will find the remarkable recovery of Mrs. BRIDER. In the year 1879 Mr. Congreve's attention was called to this case. Rev. C. BRIDER then wrote on behalf of his wife, who was suffering from chronic phthisis—a slow, progressing form of Consumption. She recovered under Mr. Congreve's treatment, and in recording this result Mr. B. wrote:—"Her case is very marvellous, and appears a miracle to friends who have known her for years. We can only trace the arresting the disease to the timely use of your means.")

Since the death of her husband, Mrs. Brider has carried on the "Gospel Book Mission" with good results at the Mission House, Wilton-place, Salisbury.

In a letter to Mr. Congreve, dated May 28th, she says: "I enclose you a letter relative to your medicine, of which you can make any use you like. I cannot thank you enough for the good I experienced through your treatment (under God) some years ago. I am now carrying on the work that my dear husband loved so well."

The letter Mrs. Brider refers to is from Miss M. M. R., of Dublin. She says:—"Seeing an account of your case, and of the benefit Mr. Congreve's medicine had been to you, I obtained it for a young friend who suffered greatly from her lungs and throat. It had a marvellous effect, with God's blessing. She had taken sixteen bottles of other medicines this winter and was worse, but the first few doses of this relieved her. I have recommended it since to several."

LAKOLA

(THOMPSON'S PRIZE MEDAL KOLA)
STRENGTH-GIVING, SUSTAINING, TONIC, AND DIGESTIVE.

Owing to the many worthless imitations of his Prize Medal Preparations of the West African Kola Nut, M. F. THOMPSON has been compelled to register the above name as a distinctive Trade Mark, without which none are genuine.

LAKOLA is prepared from the finest picked Kola Nuts, imported direct from the West Coast of Africa. They have long been used by the natives to ward off fatigue and sustain them when on long journeys. It has recently been put through very severe tests by several eminent French and German Professors, with such good results that the German Government have decided to use it in the food of their army, and have placed a first order for 30 tons. It has also been tested in Alpine climbing, and in India, last year, one of the regiments accomplished a march of 72 Kilometres in 15½ hours, with no other sustenance than a dose of Kola before starting.

LAKOLA PASTE. A Delicious Beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper. Five times more strengthening and nourishing than Cocoa.

LAKOLA CHOCOLATE. A small piece eaten occasionally will Prevent Hunger and Invigorate the System.

LAKOLA ESSENCE. A Quick, Reviving, Digestive, and Restorative Tonic.
Prices 1s., 2s., and 3s. 6d., from all respectable Grocers and Chemists.
Wholesale from LAKOLA, LIMITED, GLASGOW. Ask for LAKOLA, and beware of Imitations.

IS IT POSSIBLE?

St. Giles' Christian Mission.

WORK AMONG DISCHARGED PRISONERS.

TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN."

DEAR FRIENDS,

During the Fifteen years this Branch of our work has been in existence, besides 153,000 Discharged Prisoners having been met at the Prison Gates and urged to live a new life, 42,000 Men and Boys have been placed in the way of earning an honest living; and the daily applicants for help are still increasing in number.

Is it possible that a work such as this, which God has been pleased to bless in so marked a manner, and which is admitted on all sides to be largely responsible for the great decrease of crime, and the consequent closing of several large prisons, should be in danger of curtailment for want of means?

Never during the whole thirty-two years that have elapsed since our Mission was first started have we been so pressed for money to carry on our efforts, and the difficulty of raising our income is causing Mr. WHEATLEY and myself the greatest possible anxiety.

The response to our Appeal at Christmas was fully £1000 less than last year, and we are at the close of the year this amount in debt. Towards this deficiency one old friend of the Mission has given £100, and we are making strenuous efforts to raise the remainder.

May we earnestly beg your kind and prompt help?

Donations will be most gratefully acknowledged if sent to our Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard Street, E.C.; to our Secretary, Mr. W. WHEATLEY, 29, Brooke Street, Holborn, E.C.; or to

Yours sincerely,

MISSIONARY NURSES' TRAINING HOME

IN CO-OPERATION WITH THE GLASGOW MEDICAL MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

All seeking admission to the above Home are reminded that the next medical session begins in April, 1892. Previous to their medical course all are recommended to spend the three months' probation—from January to April—in the evangelistic branch (the Lady Missionaries' Training Home), where a regular course of Biblical lectures will be delivered by ministers of the various evangelical denominations, and others interested in the training of missionaries, and where they will have supervision in evangelistic work. The above lectures will be free to any ladies in Glasgow who may wish to attend. (For days and hours see future advertisements.)

The Lady Missionaries' Training Home will also be used as a training home for any who desire one or two years' Biblical instruction with evangelistic work, &c., before engaging as missionaries. For such arrangements are being made whereby any who wish dispensary and ambulance instruction, &c., can have this upon payment of an additional fee.

For terms and full particulars of both Homes, applicants are requested to communicate at earliest convenience with the Hon. Secy., Miss FORRESTER PATON, Mars-hill House, Alloa.

500 MISSIONARIES now employed in beseeching the masses in the Metropolis to be reconciled to God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

House-to-House visitation. Personal dealing.
Work purely undenominational.

For the last two years the expenditure has exceeded the income by £3500. To meet this deficit of £7000 the Committee have been compelled to draw upon their comparatively small reserve fund.

Unless there is an immediate increase in the income of the Mission they fear they will be obliged, most reluctantly, to reduce their staff of Missionaries.

To avert this calamity they ask all friends to come, without loss of time, to the help of the Mission. The need is urgent.

HOW THE GOSPEL REACHES CHINA'S MILLIONS THROUGH THE GREAT PORTS.

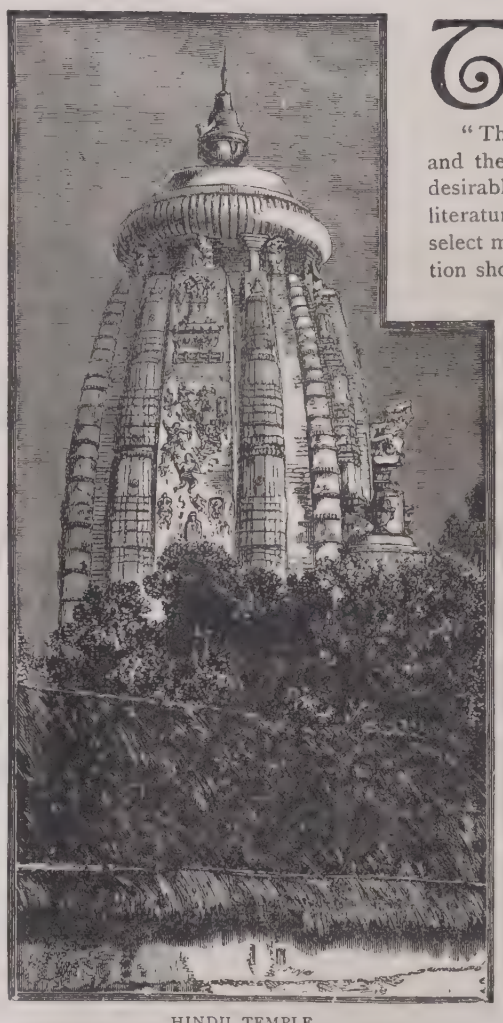
Missionary Literature for the World.

The Religious Tract Society

FOUNDED 92 YEARS AGO,

Has become a great Pioneer of Gospel Literature in the various Languages of the Mission Field. Already no less than

TWO HUNDRED AND FOUR



Languages, Dialects, and Characters have been used in making known the SAVING TRUTHS OF THE GOSPEL.

Widening Work and Greater Needs.

THE field for the operation of the Religious Tract Society becomes daily larger—the appeals made for its help more pressing and numerous. The spread of Education—the increase at home and abroad in the number of Readers—the prevailing sense of the importance of a Christian, pure, and wholesome Literature—the progress of Foreign Missions—the growth of Native Churches—all combine to cause this; and the Committee invite attention here to the more recent examples of these fresh calls for help.

Offices: 56 PATERNOSTER ROW, LONDON, E.C.

I.—Christian Literature for India.

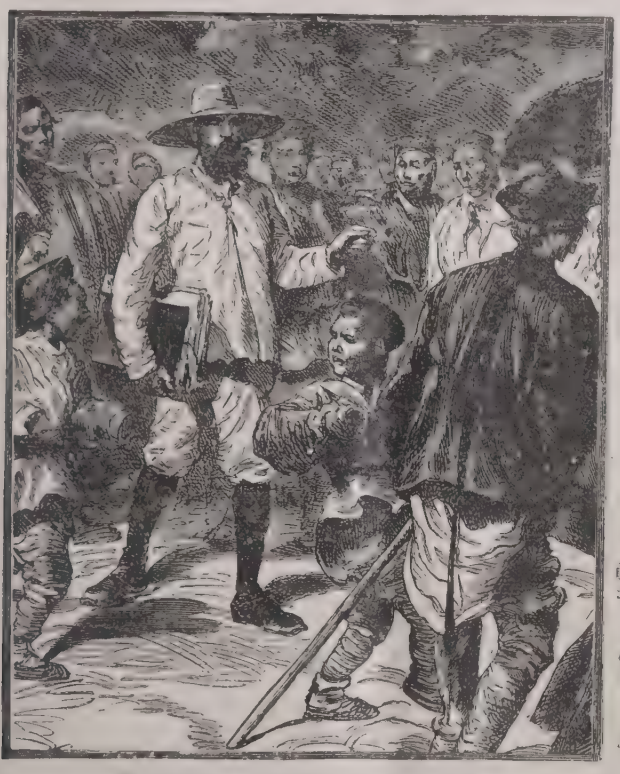
HINDU TEMPLE.

THREE important Missionary Conferences held at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, respectively, have passed the following resolution:—

"That in view of the spread of Education in India, and the growing need of the Indian Churches, it is highly desirable that Missionary Societies should recognise Christian literature as a department of Evangelistic effort, and that select men who have shown the requisite ability and inclination should be set apart for it, being supported, as before, by their respective Societies, and reporting to them, but working in connection with Christian Publishing Societies."

This is enough to show how the help of these Societies will be sought more and more. It is with this conviction that the Committee have been for long seeking a suitable Agent to superintend and promote the work of the Religious Tract Society in India.

Meanwhile, in conjunction with the Christian Vernacular Education Society, they have arranged that the Rev. A. W. Prautch, of Bombay, who has been distinguished already by his zeal and successful work in the circulation of religious literature, should, at the cost of the two Societies, visit some of the principal cities of India, and confer with Missionaries as to the best method of infusing life and energy into such circulation.



In India, both the Mohammedans and Hindus, realising the power of the Christian Press, have started their own Tract Societies, and are incessant in their efforts to overturn new-found faith in the hearts of converts, and to steel the minds of the natives against the entrance of the glorious Gospel.

Publication and Distribution have long been conducted from the following centres:—

CALCUTTA.	LAHORE.	Lucknow.	Surat.	Bangalore.
BOMBAY.	Mozufferpore.	Fategarh.	Lohardagga.	Loodhiania.
MADRAS.	Ahmednagar.	Chota Nagpore.	Mangalore.	Masulipatam.
ALLAHABAD.	Monghyr.	Cuttack.	Neycor.	Poona.
	Benares.

Twenty years ago the total circulation of all the Tract Societies in India was only about half a million a year; it is now eight-fold that amount.

Still, contrasted with the wants of the case, the supply is quite inadequate. Not only are Hindu and Mohammedan readers multiplying, but the Native Churches demand a much larger supply of Christian literature to fit them for taking an active part in the great work of evangelising India.

THE CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY IN CHINA.

II.—China.

IN the great Missionary Conference lately held in Shanghai, attended by 432 Missionaries, representatives of almost all the Protestant Churches and Missionary bodies in China, much attention was given to this subject. Along with the consideration of the great subject of the New Version of the Chinese Bible, the question of Explanatory Notes to help to its better understanding was considered.

A Committee was appointed to prepare such notes and comments, and it was resolved that the help of the Religious Tract Society should be asked in their production and publication.

THE BUDDHIST PRIEST IN JAPAN.

III.—Japan.

A FORWARD step has been taken in connection with the work of Christian Literature in Japan, from which the Committee trust it will receive great encouragement. The Rev. W. J. White, who has taken a leading and active part in the work of the Corresponding Committee at Tokio, now devotes himself wholly to it, as the Agent in Japan of the Religious Tract Society and the American Tract Society, who will be responsible for his salary. The work is carried on by a Joint Committee, of which Mr. White acts as Secretary, managed by representative Missionaries and others, both British and American.

IV.—Corea.

THE Committee have received from Seoul, the capital of Corea, a letter announcing the formation of a KOREAN TRACT SOCIETY, and earnestly asking help from London. The Committee have asked for fuller information, and are awaiting a reply to their letter. There is no doubt that they will be urged to enter on this almost untrodden and interesting field.

The Religious Tract Society.

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF ABERDEEN:

"I have alluded to the width and the scope of the operations of the Society. It reminds us of the words of the sacred parable, 'The field is the world,' the field for sowing the good seed which is so abundantly cast forth by its operations."

WHAT THE REV. C. H. SPURGEON SAYS:

"I am growingly impressed with the great services which your Society renders to our common cause, and with the extent and variety of its influences. It is one of the best allies of the Christian ministry .... I rejoice in its earnest evangelising spirit .... I wish the Society ever-growing success."

WHAT THE REV. E. A. STUART, OF HOLLOWAY, SAYS:

"With regard to the Religious Tract Society I think we need have no fear, for they are always perfectly safe. It is not only that they are safe in doctrine, and pure in the truth that they convey, but I thank God also that, so far as I have come across them, they are loving, gentle, and Christlike in their spirit."

MORE HELP NEEDED.

IT will be easily seen from the appeals on the other pages that widening work requires an increase of means. INCREASED EXPENDITURE to a considerable amount will be necessarily involved. Can the Committee, while thankfully acknowledging these new and important openings for the Society's work, report that large funds are likely to be at their disposal for entering into them? They regret to say that is not the case. The contributions to the Society's missionary work do not increase as the Committee feel they should, if the increase of expenditure demanded by such extension of work as has been mentioned above is to be met.

It is, therefore, to increased support for the specially Missionary Operations of the Society that the Committee must look, if they are to respond as they would wish, and as the state of the case requires, to these URGENT APPEALS from the Mission Field.

It is evident that the field for work is ever extending. It is plain that the needs are becoming greater and greater. If the Committee so earnestly call the attention of the friends of Missions to the facts, and press for larger help, it is because they feel that the LORD IS CALLING THEM to occupy the widening field and to supply the greater needs.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of Miss E. SANDES, of the Soldiers' Home, Cork.

The tide of public sympathy with the Royal Family, which has flown so heartily ever since the death of the beloved Heir Presumptive to the throne of England, took a special and appropriate form on Sunday last, when, in the churches and chapels throughout the land, the compassions of the Gospel were emphasized and the lessons of the sad event presented. It is a pleasing recollection that His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence was amiable in disposition, and showed great promise of a life of usefulness and honour. Our cordial sympathy has been combined with much prayer that, in this painful affliction, the members of the Royal House will all be supported by Divine consolations, and brought nearer to the God of all grace.

In the Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, on Wednesday last week, when the Royal bereavement was a subject of universal grief and conversation, a telegram of sympathy was sent to the Princess of Wales in the following terms:—

"Conference of two thousand Christians meeting in Edinburgh to-day pray for you, and send verse of a hymn sung in memory of your beloved son—

"'Not now, but in the coming years,
It may be in the Better Land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears,
And there some time we'll understand.'"

The Princess sent a kind and grateful reply. The lines are from a piece in Mr. Sankey's NEW HYMNS AND SOLOS, which we give in full, with music, on p. 16.

"Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein, for the time is at hand." Such is the declaration which prefaces the book which is the climax and consummation of the Scripture, which cannot be broken, and which is able to make wise unto salvation.

In the days of David there were men who had understanding of the times to know what Israel ought to do." Second to the knowledge of the only true God and of Jesus Christ whom He hath sent, which is eternal life, there is no knowledge more needful than the understanding of the times. The Pharisees and Sadducees were sternly rebuked because they could not discern the signs of their time, and Jesus wept over Jerusalem because she knew not the time of her visitation. To give this knowledge is one great end for which the Scriptures were written. "O, fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. Ought not the Christ to have suffered and to enter into his glory?" Did not all the Scriptures say so?

There is nothing in history or experience so calculated to give understanding of the times as the reading of the Revelation of Jesus Christ. Its successive visions rehearse the great drama of the ages during which Jesus sits at the right hand of God until his enemies be made his footstool.

To read this book, prayerfully and constantly, without note or comment, free from the confusion and contradiction of human systems of interpretation, is to sit at Jesus' feet and hear his word. No one can thus read without acquiring an understanding of the times. In these days of optimism and pessimism, of the enthusiasm of humanity and the revival of paganism, of intellectual boastfulness and spiritual poverty, the Revelation, the Unveiling, is as a light shining in a dark place, whereunto we do well to take heed in our hearts, until the day-dawn and the day-star arise. For it is the outcome and essence of all Old Testament prophecy and of all New Testament teaching, and is, therefore, the Divine corrector of error and director in the truth.

The friends of national righteousness will learn with joy that the public indignation, in view of Britain's responsibility in the matter of the opium traffic in India, is growing both in intensity and volume. The various reports from official sources, just now appearing in the daily papers, require to be received with great caution. It is difficult, in fact, to get coherent and consistent information from these sources. In answer to a question in Parliament last June, Sir J. Gorst stated that there were 8834 opium shops in British India in 1890; in a despatch of December 17, by Lord Cross, it is stated that the Viceroy reports that there were 10,100; in the Blue Books, published under the auspices of both the Viceroy and the India Office, it is stated that there were 11,244 licensed shops in 1890. There is a fourth statement, that of missionaries and others on the spot, which is to the effect that the highest figures are much below the actual number of places in which the soul-destroying drug is sold.

The urgency of the agitation for the abolition of this wicked traffic is not appreciated as it should be. The reason is because Christian people are generally ignorant of the fearful wrongs for which Britain is responsible. The Committee of Urgency, appointed by the National Christian Anti-Opium Convention last March, is making a supreme effort to diffuse knowledge and stir up public sympathy. It is labouring in the faith of coming victory, and it is hoped that much-needed encouragement will not now be withheld. We understand that for the operations of the next ten weeks about £3000 will be required. We sincerely trust that many of our readers will have a hand in this courageous endeavour at once to free Britain from an alliance with evil, and to do something to emancipate millions of Asiatics from a truly accursed bondage. Mr. A. S. Dyer, hon. secretary of the Committee, may be addressed: 31, Paternoster-square, E.C.

"As the twig is bent, the tree's inclined." A child who is allowed to grow up to boyhood or girlhood without religious instruction is not likely to develop into a good and useful citizen. It is satisfactory to note that the German Government is recognising this fact. The new Education Bill about to be introduced provides that every child shall of necessity receive religious instruction according to the teaching of the communion to which the pupil belongs, and there are no loopholes provided whereby parents may escape by the device of declaring themselves without religious belief. The object of the Bill is to prevent any child from being brought up as an atheist. It is true that religious teaching is the only solid foundation of that much-abused word, education. But to be really salutary and lasting, great care must be taken to guard against its degenerating into a mere perfunctory form, or becoming a medium for party interests.

The Bishop of Wakefield, who seems to owe much to his East-end of London training, has lately given utterance to some opinions in regard to the Church in its relation to labour problems, and it is interesting to note that he expresses himself as being quite unable to imagine a church, > commissioned to preach a Gospel to the poor, remaining indifferent to the problems difficult though they may, hopeless of solution as they may seem to some) concerned with the startling inequality in the distribution of wealth and comfort, and the general raising of the condition of the poorest class of labourers.

After pointing out that all great and beneficial social changes are of slow growth, and that it is madness to hope for any real amelioration of the conditions of labour or of society from sudden subversive changes, Dr. Walsham How, adds:—

> I am quite sure of this, that the great duty of the Church at all times and in all cases is to set forth and enforce high and holy motives. I am quite sure one is bound to point out that Christianity is meant to govern all spheres and phases of life; and that religion is concerned not only with prayer, Bible-reading, and church-going, but is a thing for strong men to take with them into all the business and work and trials and temptations of their daily life... I desire to see Christianity interpenetrating more and more the whole life of the nation, and I do not think the Church ought to rest satisfied until social and political problems are handled and treated upon Christian principles, and in obedience to the laws of God.

The old opposition, based on tradition, and fostered by the devil, is dying, and the beautiful spouse of Christ is being seen as she really is—Divine and Godlike.

So spoke the Roman Catholic Bishop of Nottingham, a few days ago; and not without some show of reason did he congratulate Romanists upon the cooling down of the old Protestant fervour. We are living in strange times, as all will admit, in view of the fact that a list of subscribers to a statue, which it is proposed to erect at Oxford in honour of the late Cardinal Newman, contains the names of Dr. Allon of London, and Dr. Dale of Birmingham. It is not surprising that singular things are done under the sun in days when men of light and leading are, by a spirit of false liberality, beguiled into acts whereby Popery is aided and Evangelical religion injured. Nominal successors of the Puritans might be expected to see through any such endeavour as that which Romanists are trying to carry forward in Oxford.

The site proposed for the statue is in Broad-street, close to the spot where the most prominent martyrs of the Reformation laid down their lives to free England from the yoke of Rome. A memorial to the Town Council contains the following sentences:—

> However estimable in character or eminent in learning Cardinal Newman may have been, Oxford is not the place for exhibiting practical approval of a theologian who, by his writings and his example, has led more people into the Roman Communion than any man who has lived since the Reformation. A public monument on a public site, granted by any municipality, ought to carry with it the general approval of the citizens. To persist in giving an honour, unique in Oxford, to Cardinal Newman, will be to engender bitter strife and offend the religious sentiments of multitudes who glory in the great traditions of the University city.

Needless to say, the controversy is causing much discussion in the city. Canon Christopher, in last Saturday's Oxford Times, writes:—

> We give the fullest toleration to Romanists, but should those who desire to be faithful to the glorious Gospel of God assist in glorifying the intolerant Church of Rome, the opponent of all Protestant churches and of the truths which they maintain in opposition to her own errors—the Church which cruelly burned alive our faithful Reformers for protesting against the errors which Newman did all he could to promote? It is impossible to set up in Oxford on public ground a statue to a cardinal of the Church of Rome without thereby glorifying to all future generations the church which he represents.

Doubtless a sentiment that is widely prevalent is dominating the municipality—that one form of religion is about as good as another. The fallacy of this was well shown by Dr. Ince, Regius Professor of Divinity, in a recent letter to The Times, when he said: "It is an abuse of the modern spirit of toleration to act as if all religious opinions were to be considered equally true if only they are held sincerely."

The Romeward tendency of Ritualism is so obvious that we do not require the testimony of a Papist to impress us with the fact. Yet Monsignor Munro, in a lecture at Glasgow a few days ago, criticising all kinds of "irregular" religious work, referred to "a small, but able, earnest, and not uninfluential knot of ministers of the Established Church who think to popularise religion by multiplying the public services," and added:—

They would throw the churches open every day, give short daily service, beautify the church itself with the creations of art in form and colour, have music of high order; have, too, such ceremony and ritual as will show that public worship is a great and solemn act. Our sympathy must be largely with these men. They are working on right lines, for they are working towards the Catholic Church. They have come to feel—possibly they may yet come to see and believe—that the fundamental, the dominant idea of a church is the Catholic idea—viz., that it is a temple, not a meeting house—that worship is the essential reason of its existence.

There are too many centres of this erroneous and corrupt teaching. True spirituality of worship leaves no room for Popery, whether licensed from the Vatican, or practised irregularly in churches which are Protestant in name though not in active influence.

The "Catholic Directory" for 1892, just published, furnishes some very striking statistics in regard to Romanism in Great Britain. The total number of priests in England and Scotland is given as 2,929, only 356 of them being stationed in the latter country. The Roman Catholic population of the United Kingdom is stated to be about five and a-quarter millions, including 3,549,956 in Ireland, and 343,000 in Scotland. The hierarchy in England has seventeen members, and that in Scotland six. Of the fifty-eight Cardinals only four are British subjects. There are forty Roman Catholic members of the Upper House, five Roman Catholic Members of Parliament for English constituencies, and seventy-two for Irish.

We note with pleasure the signal failure of Mr. Gordon Bennett's attempt to graft a hurtful branch upon the tree of British journalism. His seven-days-a-week publication of the New York Herald in London gave place, after a very short time, to a single Sunday edition, and this has now ceased to appear. There is already, in our large towns, a deplorable amount of trading on the Lord's Day, so we rejoice at the non-success of this irreligious enterprise.

The high death-rate throughout the country due to the epidemic, points to the fact that for some years back we appear to have been claiming too high a prerogative in regard to the eradication of disease. Some of our scientists have been speaking and writing as though in a few years' time, at the alleged rate of progress in discovery, disease would be quite a thing of the past; but in the midst of these assurances and hopes comes a mysterious scourge that shows us how weak we are, and how little we know.

Many will have read with deep pity the accounts published of the burning down of an American hospital, the National Surgical Institute, at Indianapolis, which was destroyed after midnight on Friday morning. Every effort was made to save the helpless patients; but, unhappily, at least twenty, chiefly children, perished. The lesson will, we trust, be laid well to heart by hospital authorities generally, who will surely see to it that of none of the institutions under their care could it truthfully be said: "There were no conveniences in case of fire."

Last week we noted the return of the two delegates sent by the Society of Friends to investigate the state of affairs in Russia. These gentlemen have now reported to the Committee of Sufferings, who have issued a circular setting forth the appalling ravages of famine, disease, and death in the stricken districts.

Mr. E. W. Brooks, one of the delegates, gives the following comprehensive indication of the area within which the famine is most severe:—

The distressed districts comprise no less than twenty-two provinces or governments, as they are called, situated in the eastern and south-eastern portions of European Russia and the south-western limit of Siberia. Each of these governments is as large or larger than England, and contains an average population of about two millions. It is stated that one-half of the entire population of that area is destitute, and one-quarter on the verge of actual starvation. The cause of the destitution is partial failure of the harvest for five or six years past (varying with different localities), ending with total failure of the last. So absolute was the failure in 1891, that even the seed sown was not recovered, and the straw, so necessary in a country where a mixture of it with animal excreta constitutes the only fuel, was wanting also.

The Friend devotes its issue for January 22 largely to this pressing matter, and calls earnestly for instant aid, not from Friends only (though these are coming forward nobly), but from all, of every name, who have hearts to feel for the destitute millions. As we mentioned in our last, subscriptions should be sent to Joseph Gurney Barclay, care of Barclay and Co., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.

"Old Testament Criticism" is still the subject of vigorous discussion in The Record. It having been claimed that the attitude of Christ to the Law and the Prophets settles for ever questions of inspiration, canonicity, and authorship, several correspondents have argued that the manhood of Christ involved Him in limitations of knowledge, even as regards these matters of fundamental importance. We have already pointed out that, in taking this position, criticism arrogates to itself a wisdom which it denies to the Divine Teacher. It is not as a child, nor as one "increasing in wisdom and stature" that Christ is presented to our notice in the Gospels, "preaching the Kingdom of God;" but as the Son of God—"My Servant, whom I uphold"—the Prophet like unto Moses, whom all are commanded to obey in all things. This point is well stated by Rev. Osmond Dobree, of Colwich, as follows:—

I do not for a moment allow that there was any limitation whatever in our Lord's power or knowledge after his baptism. Then it was that the Holy Ghost came upon Him; then it was the humanity reached its perfection according to the Divine idea, becoming the temple of God, and so, being in union with the Eternal Word, became the perfect instrument for the manifestation of God. Whatever He did thenceforward, whatever He said thenceforward, and, wonderful to say, whatever He suffered thenceforward, was in the power of the Holy Ghost. Are we going to assert ignorance, or imperfection, or limitation there?

In our judgment the appeal to Christ is legitimate and decisive. The Living Word and the Written Word both declare the will of the Eternal God. Trust in the inspired page helps our confidence in the Divine Revealer, and of both is testimony borne in the souls of such as are "led by the Spirit of God."

Our special correspondent in Scotland has already referred to the running fire of newspaper criticism, frequently degenerating into un-Christian abuse, through which Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey have had to pass in their evangelistic campaign in Scotland. If they had been at all unpleasantly affected by these attacks (which, we believe, they have not), more than ample compensation would have been found in the very remarkable gathering that filled the Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, on Wednesday morning of last week. That meeting and the ulterior proceedings of the same day were the best possible proof that our American brethren possess the confidence and the affection of the great mass of living working Christians throughout the country. The meeting was also a very noteworthy sign that the old-fashioned theology is still the great uniting and working force of Scottish Christianity in its aggressive aspects.

News has been received of the death of Rev. W. D. Dalrymple, a Presbyterian missionary at Rampur Beauleah, in Bengal, from leprosy, contracted about two years ago while attending upon the lepers. Rev. W. D. Dalrymple had devoted himself to the service of the wretched sufferers, and he had only been six months in their midst before signs of the disease made themselves evident in his own frame. Surely this is a noble martyrdom.

THE LATE DUKE OF CLARENCE.

In a sermon on Sunday last on Isaiah liii. ("Surely He hath borne our griefs," &c.), Dr Vaughan, Master of the Temple, dwelt upon the sympathy of Christ as one of the unique evidences of the Gospel. He said: Sickness and sorrow, these two, lie heavy upon us to-day. A subtle and mysterious influence—so impalpable that we are content to make "influence" its proper name—is darting hither and thither, i domesticating itself in one place and one region after another, catching its victims as they wall the streets, transact their business, or take their journeys, slaying its thousands, and crippling its ten thousands, sparing neither youth nor age neither cottage nor palace, giving no account o itself to skill or science, and making all men hold their life in their hands with a precarious ness which renders all promises peradventures and all engagements guesses.

After drawing some of the lessons which such a visitation ought to suggest, Dr. Vaughan proceeded:—A great sorrow has fallen upon us—suddenly, like a thunder-bolt out of a clear sky We ought always to have imprinted in our re membrance the great sorrow, public as well a private, which has fallen in these last days upon the land and upon its families. For a sorrow a all like it in its peculiar features we must go back in thought exactly three-quarters of a century Then, in the year 1817, the Heir Apparent's Heir Apparent—a Princess then, as a Prince now—was cut off, together with the child of many hopes who should have carried on the direct line of the succession into a third generation—cut off in one hour, and men knew not which way to look for a possible heir to the throne. A few elderly men and childless women were all that stood on the steps of it. That feature of anxiety is wanting to-day. Princes and Princesses sprung from the best of Queens, are not lacking to us now.

The death of a young man is always pathetic So much that is immature behind, so much that is unaccomplished before him, it is a picture (on its earthly side) of mere disappointment. And if that young man was a Prince, heir to the loftiest (as we count it) and most august of thrones, who shall say that there is nothing of pathos added to that premature death? When we think what was apparently before him, what of dignity, what of influence, what of opportunity, what, in due time, of history made by him, we cannot but weep, as he lies there in his coffin, over so much of baffled hope, of broken promise, of buried possibility.

And who shall have no tear of respectful and reverent sympathy, as for the Royal mother "in bitterness for her firstborn," so also for one young mourner beside her, standing (as it were but yesterday) on the threshold of a splendid future, with a throne, the throne of thrones we reckon it, in the far distance indeed, but in full view and clear prospect before her, now cast back into the shadow of a maiden widowhood, a widowhood inaugurated, we had almost said mocked by an unexampled profusion of meaningless bridal gifts? It is not the prospective crown that she mourns to-day—it is the one young love, snatched from her by a chill, cold hand before it was quite hers, and deaf already, as she hung over the deathbed, to her passionate cry for one, one response to the sound of the sweet name.

The sermon ended with the mention of the one only topic of earthly consolation at all worthy of a moment's thought.

THE LONDON JEWS' SOCIETY.—The Annual Prayer-meeting of the London Society for Promoting Christianity Among the Jews was held on Thursday last at the Inns of Court Hotel, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Mr. W Nowell West presiding. The exercises were of a deeply devotional character, and the large audience gave evidence of warm sympathy with the objects of the Society, and of the necessity of constantly imploring the blessing of the Almighty upon the efforts put forth. Leave was taken on the occasion of the following missionaries:—Mr. P. C. D'Erf Wheeler and Miss Lindsay, who are returning to Jerusalem; Rev and Mrs. B. Z. Friedman, returning to Safed, Palestine; and Dr. H. A. Hallen, who is going out to Safed for the first time. In relation to this circumstance Rev. Mr. Painter led in prayer for all missionaries of the Lord Jesus Christ, and for an increasing interest of the Church of Christ in the Lord's Advent and in the House of Israel. Rev. Gilbert Karney followed with some words of counsel and encouragement to the outgoing missionaries.

Gathering God's Gifts.

By Rev. JAMES STALKER, D.D.*

That thou givest unto them they gather.—Ps. civ. 28.

This text refers to the animals mentioned the preceding verses of this psalm of nature. e birds and beasts are set forth by our rd as examples of the providence of God. Your heavenly Father feedeth them," says He. d perhaps to our minds they supply the most rfect illustration of dependence. God supplies eir wants; He gives them everything; and if did not feed them they would perish.

Yet, though He gives all, they have to gather . Not a mouthful does one of them get which it s not worked for. The birds lead a busy life. You ink you are busy; but are you up as early as ey? You have your household cares, but so ve the birds. Many an anxiety has the mother d about her housekeeping and the bringing of her family. And the bee—do you think it ds an idle life and gets everything done for it? t at all. God gives it the honey in the blossom d the flower, but the bee has to gather it eily. And besides, it has the cells of its comb make, with the skill of a mathematician and nicety of an artist. And, if it did not do its rk, what would the honey in the flowers tter?

Now, there is a great principle of the divine ocedure here, which God observes not only in ovidence but in grace. He gives, but we must ther. He is able to make his grace abound to , so that we, always having all sufficiency in all ings, may abound unto every good work. It is is fulness of the divine grace, accessible and ailable to us, that we must think of first ien we are speaking about the deepening of e spiritual life. But the other side is not to forgotten, or the good of it all may be lost that which He giveth we must gather.

Often you hear it put in this way. It is said, have the organisation of the Christian e and of Christian work perfect. There it lies, readiness and in order, and what we need the power from on high to fill it. You ve often heard it illustrated by the image a railway train. There are the rails, provid- g the track, and on them is lying the huge gine, with its wheels ready to revolve, and e carriages and trucks behind it. But why es it not move? It is lying heavy and inert. hat it needs is warmth; it must get the steam ; then the piston will begin to act, and the ole mass, obeying its impulse, will go.

Now, this is perfectly true; yet I think the se is often just the other way. God's power is ere, but we are not in a position to use it. d is giving, but we are not gathering.

Take even the illustration of the steam- gine. You say, What would the engine be thout the steam? Yes; but what would the eam be without the engine? There was plenty steam in the world before James Watt was rn. But it was not gathered. It was only ien he constructed the steam-engine to collect d condense it, to harness it to its work with rong iron bands and direct its force to a ven point, that it became our servant, to carry from place to place and to multiply a thou- ndfold the merchandise of the world.

Take another illustration. Here is a rifle, quisitely constructed, beautifully grooved in- e, and with it cartridges made on the st scientific principles. You might look it and moralise in this way: What a avy thing; what a cold thing; how useless it uld be to hit anything without the power; it the little thimbleful of gunpowder and the sh of fire by which everything is done. Now, is is perfectly true, and it illustrates a grand ritual truth. It is the flash of fire from heaven t does all the execution in the wars of the Lord. t how important also is the other side of the th. What would the powder be if it were not the gun? Why, the puff of it would hardly ge a fly. It is when its force is gathered and ked close in the cartridge, and when the ball directed on its course by the finely-grooved rrel, that it brings down the object at a thou- nd yards.

God's power, I say, is often there; but we not in a position to use it and to retain it. gives, but we do not gather.

* Notes of address at the Conference in Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, Wednesday, January 20.

Why, take the address we heard this morning. Where did it come from? From God, was it not? We are sure it was. God gave it. Yes, but Mr. Moody gathered it. I wish you divinity students could hear him tell how, when a subject strikes him, he writes the name of it on an envelope, and keeps that envelope by him for months, popping into it everything he thinks, or reads, or hears, bearing on the subject; and then, when the time comes, he is ready to make the address with what he has gathered.

This is the grooving of the rifle. God's power flows in the same channel as our honest work. Others may speak for themselves; but my experience is that those sermons and addresses in which God's power is most conveyed are those which have been most honestly prepared. It is when you have cleared other engagements away in order to get to your work, and have studied down and down into your subject till you have touched the central fire, that you obtain the elements which will kindle and inspire those who listen to you.

This is a principle in Christian work of every kind. Mr. Moody has been going from town to town over Scotland. Now, if you meet the ministers of some of these towns a year hence, they may tell you that the meetings were very successful, the district was stirred, the churches were filled, and there were hundreds of inquirers. But it has not come to much. The results that have lasted are small. This may be true, but what is the reason of it? In many cases the reason, I believe, is this: God has given, but his servants have not gathered. They have not followed the work up. They have allowed the smoking flax to be quenched instead of fanning it into flame, and impressions to be slowly dissipated instead of driving them home with one effort after another.

Ah! we all do this. God is in our work; He gives us his Spirit; impressions are made; but we do not follow them up, to see that the decision is made, and the newly consecrated talent fitted to its appropriate work. God gives, but we do not gather.

It is the same with his work in our own souls. He blesses us, but we lose the blessing. For example, I hear a Christian complaining that he is cold and not growing in grace. But I take up his Bible and turn over its leaves. They are as clean as when they came from the printer, and here and there they are actually sticking together. The man might as well construct a zinc covering over the flower-bed in his garden and then complain that the flowers are dying for want of rain. There is plenty of rain, but he has kept it away from the plants.

Or I meet a young man or woman—and this happens often—who is at that period of life when the mind is all awake and alive, reading books, acquiring scientific methods of research, and entering into the glorious heritage of the knowledge of the past. The man complains that he is not enjoying his Bible; and the fact his Bible is distressing him. I ask him how he reads it, and he says: "Oh, just as I have always done." "That is," I say, "you read a chapter a-day, and you give five minutes to it?" "Yes." "You never spend the time on it that you do on an ode of Horace or a paragraph of Thucydides; you never study a book of it as you would a play of Shakspeare?" "Oh no, I never thought of such a thing." "Then no wonder you are getting no good out of your Bible. You will never get the good of it till you use upon it the same methods of reading and the same concentration of all your powers as you make use of in reading other books. God's manna is there, but you are not gathering it."

Men and brethren, we are not straintened in God; his blessing is not far off; his Spirit is not restrained; his power and his peace are ours in Jesus Christ. But we must gather them, and, when we get them, we must keep them. In many an Eastern country on the edge of the desert there are spots to be seen side by side, the one of which is a garden and the other a wilderness. Yet the soil is the same, and the amount of rain falling on them is exactly the same. But in the one place the rain is gathered. When it comes it is stored up in tanks, and from these a system of canals is organised to every corner of the garden, by which, as it is required, each spot is refreshed just as it needs it, and the place smiles in everlasting beauty and fruitfulness. Is our life a garden or a wilderness? It is not that the heavens are as brass. No; the river of God is full of water, and He gives showers of blessing. But do we gather; and do we know how to keep and use?

Universal Peace:

IS IT A POSSIBILITY?

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

Do not think it only a vision and a dream that wars will utterly cease. Do not think it impossible so long as the selfishness and pride of man endure. Even if it were only a vision and a dream, yet is universal peace so fair a vision that the Churches may well give up one Sunday in the year to longing for it. Many a thing which is now a solid possession began by being the dream of some visionary who would not rest until he set other people dreaming his dreams.

Universal peace might have been impossible when all State affairs were settled by the king and his armed counsellors, who sent forth the people to fight for them and to kill or be killed. But now that the people make the Government and unmake it, surely peace ought not only to be possible, but war ought to be an impossibility. We who hold the purse-strings and who elect men to Parliament can and must demand that not until an attempt at arbitration has been made, and until the voice of the nation has been heard, shall England be committed to any war. Thank God, the conscience of the nation is being enlightened in this matter. Just think that there was a time in the history of this land of ours when all private and personal disputes were settled, not by trial by jury, but by trial by combat, as it was called. A man's innocence or guilt was decided by the issue of a fight, and the unhappy wretch who got the worst of the encounter was forthwith hanged or otherwise punished. No matter how innocent he might be, if defeated in combat he was counted guilty. Can anything more utterly absurd or wicked be conceived of?

Green, in his history of the English people, tells a very interesting story of how the people of Leicester got the privilege of trial by jury. (Green's Short History of the English People, p. 189.) It chanced, says a charter of the time, that two kinsmen, Nicholas and Geoffrey, waged a duel about a certain piece of land concerning which a dispute had arisen between them; and they fought from the first to the ninth hour, each conquering by turns. Then one of them fleeing from the other till he came to a certain little pit; as he stood on the brink of the pit, and was about to fall therein, his kinsman said to him, "Take care of the pit, turn back lest thou shouldest fall into it." Thereat so much clamour and noise was made by the bystanders and those who were sitting around that the Earl heard these clamours as far off as the castle, and he inquired of some how it was there was such a clamour, and answer was made to him that two kinsmen were fighting about a certain piece of ground, and that one had fled till he reached a certain little pit, and that as he stood over the pit, and was about to fall into it, the other warned him. Then the townsmen, being moved with pity, made a covenant with the Earl that they should give him threepence yearly for each house in the High-street that had a gable, on condition that he should grant to them that the twenty-four jurors who were in Leicester from ancient times should from that time forward discuss and decide all pleas they might have among themselves.

Now, as combat is no more the test to which personal disputants appeal, why should not we hope that nations, above all, Christian nations, will come to learn how foolish and how wicked it is to appeal to arms to settle national disputes? Why should the people not demand the appointment of a Court of Arbitration, to which national disputes should be carried, and by whose decision the nations should abide? Men are not always going to be fools, especially when the folly is so cruel and so costly, and when they who pay and suffer have the control of the nation. If only the Christian conscience and vote of this country and of Germany were solidly one in antagonism to war it would be safe to say that the other nations of Europe would be speedily guided to the same happy decision. Nothing else will secure universal peace but the aroused Christian conscience of Christian nations. Family alliances and Great Exhibitions are not strong enough to restrain the greed and lust of emperors and kings. But the people have this power, and when they find that they can, assuredly it will not be long before they will. Let us every one use our citizenship for this sublime purpose. Whatever we call ourselves in politics let us demand that war shall be the very last possibility to which this nation shall be committed.

Moses, the Servant of God.

THE GIFT OF MANNA.

Exodus xvi.

We may encamp at Elim, and stay for long happy days in its green bowers, but we may not live there; at least, the majority cannot. It is so much harder, and needs so much more grace, to remain devoted and earnest, to retain the girt loin and the soldier-like bearing, in its soft, enervating climate, than on the bare and sterile sand of the desert, with its rare and stimulating air. Few characters are able to reach their highest and noblest excellence amid the genial conditions through which at times each life is permitted to pass. Therefore it is that, though the cloud of the Divine Guidance broods at Elim long enough to recruit us, it soon gathers up its folds, and commences its majestic progress over the desert expanse, leaving us no alternative but to strike our tents and follow. So it is said that "they took their journey from Elim; and all the congregation of the children of Israel came to the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai."

Farewell to the seventy palm-trees and the twelve water-springs! Farewell to the brief, bright hours of respite from the blinding glare of the desert marl! Farewell to the sense of plenty suggested by the scenery of their camp! But He whose nature was mirrored in that exquisite beauty, who contained in Himself the reality of which its component parts were transient emblems, who was able to reproduce any number of Elims if He chose, and who could give such blessings straight from his hand that all the essential parts of the Elim blessedness could be repeated even amid the sand wastes, He could never be left behind, but always must accompany his people. Whom He had led forth, He could not desert. Whom He had redeemed, He could not forsake.

"I have made, and I will bear," is a sentence that may be written over all lives, all experiences, all goings-forth in which God's hand and will are concerned, so that when once we are sure that He is guiding us we become indifferent to the appearances of things. It is immaterial whether He locates us amid verdure or desert. He is responsible to make up from his own resources for that which is lacking in outward circumstance. What if there are no palm trees? The shadow of the Almighty must be our shelter from the sultry heat. What if there are no crops waving over the waste? He must Himself provide the manna for the host. What if there be no water gushing down the torrent bed, heaped with stones? From Him, stricken and smitten, must flow the rivers of water that make the desert to rejoice and sing.

There are things about God, and his ability to supply all needs of the soul of man, which could not be learnt in any Elim with all its beauty, and can only be acquired where its bowers are exchanged for those long corridors of rock which lead to the foot of Sinai, as the ancient approaches of obelisks conducted to the pillared halls of Karnak. The eagle wings on which God bears his people are only spread beneath them when the nest is broken up and left. The supremacy of God over all natural laws is only learnt when they are seen to stand before Him as the angels who do his bidding, hearkening unto the voice of his word. The patient tenderness of God, the mother side of his nature, is only apparent where a whole host breaks out into the sobbings of a querulous child. The punctuality of God is more easily discerned in the spread breakfast-table of the wilderness than in the procession of the seasons or the march of worlds. It is well, then, to leave Elim; beyond it lie Sinai, Pisgah, and Canaan.

I. The Desert Murmurings.—It was a great aggravation of the responsibilities which already lay heavily on the heart of Moses, to have to encounter the perpetual murmurings of the people whom he loved so well. It only drove him continually back on his Almighty Friend and Helper, to pour into his most tender and sympathising ear the entire tale of sorrow. But the repeated outbreak of these murmurings all along the wilderness route only sets into more conspicuous prominence the beauty of his gentle meekness, and the glory of his faith, which probably was the one channel through which the power of God wrought for the salvation and blessing of his people.

The race of murmurers is, alas! not extinct. Lips which have joined in singing consecration hymns, sometimes give passage to complaints. And we are none of us so careful as we ought to be to restrain the expression of discontent. How often are murmurings mingled with the food we eat, because we are not exactly pleased with its quality or preparation; with the weather, because it does not quite fit in with our plans; with our daily calling, because it is irksome and distasteful; and with the presence or the absence of certain persons in our lives.

Murmurers are short of Memory. It was only one little month since the people had come forth out of Egypt—a month crowded with the wonders which the right hand of the Lord had wrought. The chronicler specially notes that it was the fifteenth day of the second month, and adds, "The whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron in the wilderness, and the children of Israel said unto them, Would God we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh-pots, when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness to kill this whole assembly with hunger."

They could remember very well the sensual delights of Egypt, but they forgot the lash of the taskmaster, and the anguish of heart with which they wrought at the kneading of the clay. They forgot how graciously God had provided for their needs, ever since they had stood around their tables to eat the flesh of the paschal lamb. They forgot the triumph-song which recorded their undoubting faith, that God would bring them in and plant them in the land of their inheritance. None of these things availed to stay the torrent of their murmuring complaint.

Whenever a murmuring fit threatens, let us review the past, and recount the Lord's dealings with us in bygone years. Did He deliver in six troubles, and is He likely to forsake us in the seventh? Has He ransomed our soul from the power of the grave, and will He not regard the body, which is included in the purchase-money? When David complained, and his spirit was overwhelmed, he tells us that he considered the days of old, the years of ancient times, he called to remembrance his song in the night, he remembered the years of the right hand of the Most High. "I will remember the works of the Lord, surely I will remember thy wonders of old." And as at the summons of memory, the sea of the past gives up its dead, each risen record of God's goodness will condemn the murmur, and rally the wavering faith.

Murmurers are short of Sight. They fail to see that behind all the appearances of things there lie hid the Presence and Providence of God. Moses called the attention of the people to this fact, which enhanced so gravely the magnitude of their offence. They thought that they were only venting their spleen on a man like themselves. Annoyed and apprehensive, it was some relief to expend their annoyance on the one man to whom they owed everything. Ah! how vain it is to trust the populace, which to-day cries Hosanna, to-morrow, Crucify. But their faithful leader showed them that their insults were directed not against himself, but against Him whose servant he was, and at whose bidding everything was being wrought. The Lord heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against Him, and what are we? Your murmurings are not against us, but against the Lord."

It becomes us to ponder well those words. Some of God's children are more willing to admit a general providence than a special particular one. But the former involves the latter. The whole teaching of Jesus compels us to believe in a care which counts the hairs of our heads. The very necessities of our education demand a Divine superintendence of the insignificances and commonplaces of life. God must be in all things, ordaining and permitting them. It is impossible, therefore, to grumble, without the sword of our words cutting through the gauze-like drapery of what we see, and wounding Him whom these things scarcely avail to hide. Grumblings, murmurings, complaints, these are directed against the will and arrangement and plan of God. And their cure is to accept all things from his hand, to acquiesce in his wise appointments, and to believe that he is securing the very best results.

Murmurers are Short of Faith. The pressure of want had begun to make itself felt but very slightly, if at all, on the host. It was not so much the hardship that they were at that moment experiencing, but that which they thought to be imminent. Provisions were running short; supplies were becoming exhausted; the slender store refused to be eked out beyond a comparatively short period. It was thus that they came to Moses and murmured.

God often delays his help. He tarries ere He comes, long enough to bring us to the end of ourselves, and to show the futility of looking for creature aid. At such times we too often evade the lesson which He would teach, and bemoan our hard lot, though it is only a suggestion of our fearful hearts. From the marshy swamps of our inner life arises the miasma of unbelief, in the folds of which our imagination affects to descry gaunt and fearful objects, and immediately we hold that they have, or will have, a real existence, and we fall straightway all along on the earth, and are sore afraid, as Saul before the ghost of Samuel.

Too many of God's children despond because of what they dread, and break out into murmurings that they are going to be killed, when if they were to stop to think for a single moment, they would see that God is pledged by the most solemn obligations to provide for them. Why do you murmur? It is because you doubt. Why do you doubt? It is because you will look out on the future and consider your circumstances, apart from God. But when the eye is single in its stedfast gaze towards Him, his love, his wisdom, his resources, then faith grows strong, and reads his love in his eyes, and reckons on his faithfulness, and realises that He who spared not his own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, will with Him also freely give us all things.

How different to this murmuring life was that of our blessed Lord, who also was led into the wilderness, and was without food for forty days. But He did not complain; no word of murmuring passed his lips, although He might have remonstrated with the Father for dealing thus with one who had always yielded him a prompt and glad obedience. And even when He hungered, and the devil suggested that hunger was not becoming to the newly-designated Son of God, He meekly said that it was enough for Him to have his Father's will. He was prepared for all that it might involve. He insisted that if God withheld bread, He would sustain the body He had made in some other way. The Son never for a moment questioned his Father's right to follow any line of procedure He chose, and was apparently perfectly satisfied. He had learnt the secret of how to be full and to be hungry, how to abound and to suffer need. He did not live by bread only, but by every word that proceeded out of the mouth of God. And in this divine patience He has shown how murmuring may find no foothold, and how the soul may be braced to endure hardship.

II. The Wilderness Food.—It is not for us to tell here the whole story of the manna, with its wealth of spiritual reference to the true Bread, which is Christ. It is enough to remember:—

To look up for our supplies. "He gave them bread from heaven to eat." For the believer there are five sources from which help may come, for in addition to the four quarters of the winds he looks up to the heavens. There came from heaven the sound of the rushing of a mighty wind. Look higher, child of God, to the heart and hand of God.

To feed on the heavenly bread daily and early. "They gathered it every morning, and when the sun waxed hot it melted." There is no time like the early morning hour for feeding on the flesh of Christ by communion with Him, and pondering his words. Once lose that, and the charm is broken by the intrusion of many, though it may be they are all useful and necessary, things. You cannot re-make the broken reflections of a lake swept by wind. How different is that day from all others, the early prime of which is surrendered to fellowship with Christ! Nor is it possible to live to-day on the gathered spoils of yesterday. Each man needs all that the day can yield him of God's grace and comfort. It must be daily bread.

To feed on Christ is the only secret of strength and blessedness. If only believers in Christ would realise and appropriate the lesson so clearly taught in this narrative, as well as in the wonderful discourse which our Lord founded upon it (John vi.), they would find themselves the subjects of a marvellous change. It is almost incredible how great a difference is wrought by the prolonged and loving study of the Bible. To sit down to enjoy it. To read two or three chapters, an epistle, or a book, at a sitting. To let the heart and mind steep in it. To do this before other intruders have noisily entered the heart and distracted its attention. Ah! how this transforms us.

We become purer by the washing of the water of the Word, even though necessarily we cannot retain it all, as the sieve through which the water percolates is cleaner for the process, though it fails to hold a drop. We sit in a very sun-bath of glory, and some of the transient beams linger on our faces. We walk the ivory palaces, scented with myrrh and aloes and cassia, and as we come away our garments are fragrant.

Many a believer, who is now forlorn and strengthless, mourning a dead past, cringing before an untoward and merciless present, dreading a menacing future, would suddenly rise up strong, and calm, and resourceful, and able to play the part of a Christian man; and though he might not himself realise all the glory of the transformation, others would; and in after-days he would come to see that the birthday of his new life was synchronous with his freshened interest in feeding on the Bread of God.

We close, however, by calling attention to the remarkable expression used by our Lord, when He said, "Moses gave you not that bread from heaven" (John vi. 32), intimating that though Moses did not give that eternal Bread of which He was speaking, yet he did give some sort of bread, i.e., the manna, so that there was a sense in which the faithful servant procured and gave daily the provision on which his people fed.

We are not unfamiliar, in these days, with instances in which the faith of one man avails to procure the daily food of hundreds of orphans and of others. God gives to them that they may give to those with whom they are charged. But all these are dwarfed before the stupendous miracle of a faith that was capable of covering the desert place with food for forty years.

No one who reads these words need ever hesitate to enter into partnership with God for any enterprise to which the Almighty may summon him. The only thing that is at all necessary is to be quick to catch the faintest expression of his will, and prompt to obey, and strong to persevere. When these conditions are fulfilled the soul walks with God in blessed companionship, taking pleasure in difficulty, straitness, famine, and peril, because each of these becomes a foil for the display of the Divine resources, who makes even mountains a way. Such an one is perfectly indifferent to murmuring or applause, to censure or praise, since the soul is engrossed with a companionship which is perfect bliss because perfect satisfaction.

Let us, then, unceasingly make our boast in the Lord as we step out on to the unknown and untried. And who shall lament the beauty of Elim, or the fleshpots of Egypt, or the frugal meals of Jethro's tent, when such lessons are to be learnt in the society of our eternal Friend, who can never fail those who dare to trust Him, and who gives to the uttermost capacity of our faith, that we may in turn give as much as they need to those poor friends of ours, with whom we have become entrusted for his sake? (Luke xi. 5-9.)

A RABBI ON JUDAISM.

Rabbi Lichtenstein's new work, "Judaism and Christianity," is attracting much attention among the Jews. It is an examination and comparison of the doctrines of Judaism and Christianity, with several striking passages concerning his own people which, coming from a man who still discharges rabbinic functions, are specially interesting. It is touching to read his allusions to what he has had to suffer for his confession of Christ as the Messiah and Saviour of the Jews. The book appears in German, but the Mildmay Mission to the Jews have been requested to issue an English edition. We append a few extracts:—

"They have been dark, sad, painful, miserable years which I have lived since the publication of my three brochures. Threatened, coerced, attacked by authorities whose shoe latchets I am unworthy to unloose—condemned and cast off by my venerated elder brother, the guide of my youth, the example of my life—scoffed at, hounded, slandered, blackened and condemned for the most part by the Jewish newspapers, held up to suspicion, grieved and wounded in my holiest feelings. One Jewish editor has liberally pardoned me as insane!

"Yes; he is guilty of moral murder and suicide who sells his convictions and conscience, for the sake of money, to deceive others, to lead them astray, while they vacillate in their faith in their holiest feelings. And such a deed is imputed to me when my opponents maintain that not conviction, nor the irresistible force of truth have put the unaccustomed pen into my hand, but that the missionaries have bribed me, bought me. What is there to justify this infamous assumption? Forty years I have worked as a Rabbi. I am old, and have become grey; here am I, tell it against me, before the Eternal One and his Anointed. Whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or of whose hands have I received any bribe to blind my eyes therewith? Is it not an open secret to all my acquaintance that my otherwise favourable circumstances as regards fortune have become rapidly worse since the publication of my books? Certainly, later on, several large-hearted gentlemen and tender-hearted ladies have kindly remembered me; yet this help in the time of need is the most irrefutable proof that I have done this in the sincerity of my heart and with clean hands.

"Everything is in motion, everything awake; only the Jew is still asleep in the vestibule of the Lord, at the entrance to God's treasure. And while the world reforms itself, and nations, lands, seas, mountains, are drawn nearer to one another, while the electric spark brings news—messages from the extreme ends of the isles; while peoples fraternise, the Jew stands still musing, while life rushes past him and without him. Afar off he sits, like the Buddhist monk, with head sunken on his breast, his gaze directed to the ground; he dreams and raves, like all idle nations who rest upon their laurels; upon the past he hopes, yearns, sighs, for the approach of deliverance for a glorious future, but has no eye for the present, for the signs of the times. He is colourblind; sees not the rainbow which shines out of the dark clouds of his fate, as a sign of the everlasting covenant, and hears not the soft beseeching voice of his Friend, who comes, leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills. He does not understand the unambiguous, comforting, promises of his prophets; but he gropes for his Messiah with the left hand, and, alienated, pushes Him from him—with the right hand!

"Yet, the New Testament, which is the continuation, the climax, the fulfilment of the Old Testament, from which, indeed, it is inseparable, is kept at a distance, forbidden, avoided, condemned without being heard, read, tested, examined!"

POOR JEWS IN PALESTINE.

Mr. Scott Moncrieff has been again at Jaffa visiting the people there, and in surrounding colonies and places. He finds the condition of at least two thousand Jews "most distressing after eight days of continuous heavy rain"—no work to be got by any. These people were dependent on relief for their subsistence. Rations of flour and food at the Jaffa Soup Kitchen and elsewhere are being given to nearly seven hundred, and other relief as far as possible. "To add to this distress the steamer from Beyroot brought thirty Yemenite Jews, refugees from persecution, one of whom was found dead by the wayside. There is too much reason to fear that he died of want."

There is not snow at Jaffa as on the mountains, but the cold is severe, and the poor Jews are "literally in rags." After setting going for their relief all he could, Mr. Scott Moncrieff started back for his work at Jerusalem at 5.30 in the morning, while it was raining "buckets of water." There he found things worse still, and wrote on December 24, "The weather for the past four days has been frightful—floods of rain, with half a gale of wind, coming in terrific gusts all day. Thermometer outside my window forty-two degrees." The same night he informed us, by telegram, that a great snowstorm began, and lasted for three days. The sufferings of the destitute Jews were terribly aggravated by the cold and want, especially of those living in "shanties" outside the city. Very many families are living in the utmost misery, "literally lying together in the mud of the floors of their huts, without bedding, without fire, without food." Several hundreds are in this condition. He immediately ordered thirty-five plank bedsteads to be prepared with all despatch for distribution.

A telegram of January 6 reports:—"Many hundreds are starving; am giving flour rations and fuel in small quantities. Permit, if possible, £100 weekly." We have this week remitted £150, of which £100 was by telegram. And most earnestly we ask for continued aid that this work of rescue be not stopped while the urgent need continues.

GOD'S CARE FOR ISRAEL.

"God hath not cast away his people [Israel] which He foreknew." Of the truth of this statement we had fresh evidence in the opening of a shelter for destitute Jews by Mr. Wilkinson, of Mildmay. Hundreds of men, women, and children belonging to this unhappy people are literally starving at the present time, and the hearts of the missionaries have been deeply pained, day after day, by the sight of their misery. After much prayer, Mr. Wilkinson decided to open two shelters—one in London and another at Tilbury, if permission could be obtained from the dock authorities to erect one there for the use of Jewish immigrants.

A house facing the gate of the London Dock, being No. 46, Upper East Smithfield, was rented and fitted up for this purpose. It contains sleeping accommodation for about seven men, and has for its caretakers an earnest Hebrew Christian and his wife, converts of the Mission. Food will be provided twice daily—at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.,—when really destitute Jews will receive a meal. But this cannot be had except by ticket, which must previously be obtained from the missionaries, who are expected to exercise much care in the distribution. The missionary in charge will preach Christ to every Jew who partakes of the hospitality of the Mission, and family worship will be held both morning and evening for the benefit of the inmates.

This much-needed shelter was opened with praise and prayer on the 22nd inst., the place being earnestly and solemnly dedicated to the God of Israel.

Mr. Wilkinson, who occupied the chair, read and commented on Psalm cxxvii., dwelling with much emphasis on the opening words, "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it," &c. We may open shelters such as this, but if God withholds his blessing, our labour is in vain.

AMERICAN NOTES.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The hope expressed at the late Methodist Œcumenical Conference at Washington, that all sections of Methodism would soon be united in one grand consolidated party, receives little encouragement from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. There are two great barriers in the way, according to the frank admission of Southern editors. One is the coloured race, and the other the question of Woman Suffrage. The Southern whites are not yet ready to accept African bishops, who would be elected to office in districts where the coloured people preponderate. Nor do they agree with their Northern brethren, who would thrust woman into civil and religious offices, giving her an equal share in national and ecclesiastical affairs. Outside of these lines they fraternise with the Northern Church in aggressive effort.

Freemasonry, Odd-Fellowship, and similar secret societies, which lay claim to be exponents of the best religion and the highest morality, come in for severe criticism at the hands of many faithful ministers of Jesus Christ. Pastor A. J. Gordon, of Boston, denounces these Orders with special zeal. We are informed by pastoral brethren that there are churches so honeycombed with masonic influence, that none but masonic preachers are allowed to occupy their pulpits. Certain it is that many popular preachers are in close league with these organisations. Dr. Goodwin, of Chicago, has also raised his voice. He protests that Masonry is not a Christian institution. Our Lord, he declares, never had any little cabal, any little gathering with its secret passes and grips. The very attempt to couple such a thing with the ministry of the Son of God shows its folly.

La Maréchale Booth-Clibborn is making a tour in this country for the purpose of interesting American Christians in her work in France and Switzerland. The best class of pastors are won to her side, and invite her to their churches. Crowds throng to hear her: she wins respect from the first, and invokes enthusiasm before she concludes. Her story is thrilling and fascinating. She hopes to secure £4000 for her mission before sailing from our shores. The Maréchale's health is far from robust, yet it is marvellous how she journeys thousands of miles, and addresses multitudes night after night. No doubt her visit has brought the Salvation Army into favour; she has disarmed prejudice, and won golden opinions from pulpit and press. She has observed what has been noticed by all foreigners, the surplus of food with every sign of super-abundant wealth, in contrast to the great lack in other countries.

We are glad to welcome Pastor Anderson, of the McAll Mission, who is here also to represent that work. He is well received in our various cities.

The Chinamen in our Sunday-schools is the subject of discussion. The method of instructing them is harshly condemned by some pastors, while public indignation meetings have been held to denounce the critics. It has been hitherto proved as the best plan of teaching to have each teacher limited to one pupil. The Chinese are heathen when they reach our shores, and not able readily to acquire our language. Many young ladies have undertaken the work of teaching them English, in order thereby to gain influence over them, which they utilise for the Gospel's sake. Large numbers of the Chinese have been converted through this instrumentality, and have proved loyal to the evangelical churches, of which they have become members. The gist of the complaint now made is, that this close relation between young lady teacher and Chinese pupil is degrading to the former; that all Chinamen regard every woman as depraved who would come down to their level; and that their motive in attending Sunday-school is to spend the hour in looking at pretty faces and listening to sweet voices. Assuredly we have never known of any evil attending this kind of mission, but, on the contrary, vast good. Yet there may be wisdom in the suggestion made that henceforth elderly gentlemen and ladies become the teachers.

We are frequently perplexed to notice, in many of our religious papers, quotations from non-Christian men, simply because they are intellectually great. I have before me such a paper, commending the teaching of a certain transcendentalist, who certainly spent much of his time and strength in antagonising the blessed Word of God. Is not the tendency of such indiscriminate commendation of unbelievers harmful? If one extract, or quotation, is worthy of our acceptance, why not follow such teachers further? Are all those who read the flattering allusions made by Christian editors to intellectual sceptics able to discriminate? May not many follow such teachers blindly until they are led away by the error of the wicked? Is it not as dangerous to lead the simple-minded to sip at the fountain of error as to offer the sensitive youth his first glass of wine? Even Voltaire wrote good things, Bradlaugh said wise things, and Ingersoll more than once spoke truth. But surely, to publish such items in a Christian journal is playing into the hand of the enemy.

DEACONESS WORK IN SYRIA.

The following is sent us by Mrs. Meredith, of Clapham Conference Hall. The work which she has organised in Palestine is already known to many of our readers. The nature of such operations is well expressed in Daughters of Syria—"When the people find we are not lady doctors they often turn away. They don't want to hear our message as as a rule, but they do want medicines for coughs, colds, fever, sores, &c."

For six weeks our party of deaconnesses have been on our hearts night and day. The uncertainty of their whereabouts, and the fact that our house in Jerusalem was empty, weighed heavily on us. Quarantine and weather fought against them; but, at last, they are relieved. Our prayers are answered. We have received a telegram announcing their safe arrival in Jerusalem. This incident of delay has been very painful, causing us great expense and trouble, hindering our movements, and making our friends doubtful of the Lord's purposes. But it has, indeed, been blest to the strengthening of faith and the encouragement of our service.

We have now the command to "go forward!" The sending out of our medical staff is but a question of money and time. The other day we purchased the whole of the materials to supply a station that is the most interesting spot in the Holy Land; while another has been given us to occupy—all for Jesus.

We need a fund to maintain this all-important work. Schools for the young, and medicine for the sick, are what Palestine wants. Doctors and nurses and teachers must go out. If they faithfully dispense the balm of Gilead, and tell the story of the Cross, souls will be healed, and Christ will receive his own. No evidence can so strongly attest our adherence to the Bible as the support of Missions to the Jews, and to the people of the "Land for which the Lord careth"—his native land, where He died, and was buried, and rose again, and where his feet will stand in the day that He returns to his waiting people.

"THE HAPPINESS."

The happiness of tasting, as the days and months roll on,
The fulness of the blessings treasured up in God's dear Son!
The happiness of seeing, as the bygone years you trace,
He loved with everlasting love, and called you by his grace!
The happiness of feeling, amid the world's alarms,
Beneath, around, about you are the Everlasting Arms!
The happiness of hearing, above its rush and din,
The tender Shepherd calling, the still small voice within!
The happiness of yielding yourself, your life, your all,
To Him who keeps you by his power, and will not let you fall!
The happiness of leaving with Him your every need,
Who will not quench the smoking flax, or break the bruised reed!
The happiness of knowing, when your earthly course is run
He hath prepared a home for you in realms beyond the Sun.
The happiness of trusting in his unchanging grace,
In life, in death, in weal or woe, until you see his face!

EPILEPTIC CHILDREN IN SWEDEN.—Mdme. E. de Ramsay writes from Wilhelmsro:—"Our refuge for epileptic children has now twenty-one inmates. We should like to separate the idiotic epileptics from other sufferers, and accommodate twenty-one more in another house. We follow the method of the French homes at Laforce. God alone and those who nurse the patients can tell how sad the effects of such an illness are to witness, especially where neglect, cruelty, and extreme poverty have reduced the children to living skeletons, or brutalised them. The Home for cripples has been the mother of several similar institutions in other places. A society has been formed at Stockholm in the interest of work of this kind. The Blue Ribbon Society gains new members week by week."

TOWN AND VILLAGE IN CHINA.

Ning hai Cheo is a comparatively clean little town, situated about three and a-half miles from the coast, twenty miles S.E. of the Port of Chefoo. The city lies low—unlike most of the cities in the central and southern districts of China, which are usually built on higher ground than the country surrounding, so as to afford better defence. The scenery around is beautiful, and there are, within a radius of five miles, seventy to eighty villages, varying in population from one hundred and fifty souls to two thousand each.

Mr. and Mrs. Judd have been working at this station of the C.I.M. for about four years, and since their coming a great change has come over the feelings of the people toward foreigners and the Gospel. Twice our friends were almost driven from the place, but now, in all the country round the work is known, and for many a mile visitors come in (especially at certain times of the year when they are slack of work) for Scriptures and other books. Mr. Judd has visited nearly all the villages in the neighbourhood, some repeatedly, and his venerable appearance and earnest labours have won the esteem of the people. There has also been some definite work; souls have been gathered, some of whom show good evidence that they are truly the Lord's. Since our coming here last July, we have endeavoured to render what help we could.

There is a market held every five days, when we have preaching or conversation to those who come in; and sometimes speaking in the street and distributing books. Those who can read here seem better to apprehend the purport of what they read than the majority of readers I have met with in the west and central districts of China. It is doubtless owing to the parrot-like system of teaching to read which is in vogue throughout China, the children being taught for the first three years to memorise several thousand different characters, without having any explanation given them of their meaning; thus, many of the people will read through a whole page and not take in anything of its meaning. In many districts the poorer classes cannot afford to send their children to school for longer than two or three years; hence, they do not get beyond the initial stage of their studies.

I have been struck with the way in which the people of this district show interest in what they read. I was on my way to some villages a few miles distant, and came to a muddy portion of the road, where I had to pass very close to a man travelling in the opposite direction. I offered him a copy of Mark's Gospel, saying a few words by way of explanation as to what the book was, and of whom it spoke. About ten days afterwards, this same man called at our chapel (or mission room) and asked for more books, as he had been so interested in the copy of Mark. I interrogated him as to certain portions of the book, and he gave very intelligent answers. He said that there was an old gentleman at his village who had read many of our Christian books, and when he came to any part he did not understand he took the book to this old gentleman for explanation. I gave him other portions of the Testament, with a copy of "Peep of Day."

At some of the villages we have had splendid opportunities for speaking, at other times we could get hold of nobody, as all seemed hard at work in the fields. The summer is the time to get hold of the people, but it is then that we find the work most trying to ourselves.

Now the winter is on and the people shut themselves up in their houses to keep warm. Most of them are very poor, with scarcely enough food to support life, and scarcely any rags to cover their bodies. Everywhere one goes the state of things is depressing in the extreme, such hopeless masses of wretchedness and sin, the accumulation of the centuries.

Their only hope is the reception of the Gospel of God. It seems as though they were just ready for the quickening work of the Spirit. For this let us pray. Arthur Eason.

China Inland Mission, Ning Hai.

MR. WILLIAM NOBLE visited West Hampstead on Monday (18th), and delivered an address on Gospel Temperance at a meeting in connection with the Emmanuel Church Temperance Society. There were several hundred people present, and, many people signing the total-abstinence pledge, the workers were greatly encouraged by the words spoken. Mr. Noble's many friends will be gratified to know that his health has so far improved as to enable his resuming the work which is so near his heart

THE McALL MISSION.

The twentieth anniversary of the McAll Mission in France was celebrated on Monday last week at the Oratoire du Louvre, simultaneously with the seventieth anniversary of the birth of the worthy founder of the Mission. On the previous Saturday Pastor R. Hollard presided over a meeting of workers and friends in the Mission Hall in the Rue Royale, and in the course of a forcible and hearty speech recalled the claim Dr. and Mrs. McAll have to the gratitude of the French churches.

M. Louis Sautter followed, and after expressing similar sentiments, begged Dr. McAll to accept, from the pastors, workers, and friends, a pocket-book, the contents of which (£180) might go to purchase some souvenir of the fete. He also begged Mrs. McAll to accept from the ladies of the Mission a beautiful palm plant in a handsome pot. Greatly moved, Dr. McAll expressed his gratitude, and that of Mrs. McAll. He spoke of those who had passed away, and of those who were present, with that warmth, kindliness, and sympathy by which he wins all hearts.

Addresses were also delivered by Pastors Dhombres (Reformed Church), Appia (Lutheran), and Hocart (Wesleyan). Mr. J. F. W. Deacon, of London, spoke in the name of the English Auxiliary, and Pastor Decoppet (Reformed Church), in a poem, which called forth loud applause, responded to Dr. McAll.

On Monday evening the attendants of the Mission stations in Paris and numerous friends of the work met in the great church of the Oratoire du Louvre, which they filled. Pastor Recolin (Reformed Church), who took the chair, set forth the claims of Dr. and Mrs. McAll to the gratitude of the French people. Then, in the name of those who attended the people's meetings, Pastor Theodore Monod presented to Dr. McAll a bronze statuette, the product of a penny subscription among the attendants of the meetings throughout France. This statuette, representing Luther when a boy singing for his bread, and having for base a timepiece, formed, in M. Monod's judgment, a fitting symbol of the "Réunions populaires." After a bright speech the pastor handed to our venerable friend an elegant album, containing letters from 125 mission-halls, signed by some 5300 attendants, and prefaced by charming verses written by himself.

Thankfulness for the beautiful fête, remembrance of the humble beginnings of the work, gratitude towards God for blessings received, affectionate remembrance of those who had died, affection towards the living workers, and an earnest appeal to the attendants of the halls—all this was most pathetically expressed by Dr. McAll. Interesting addresses were also delivered by Pastor Picard (Reformed Church), M. Ruvéillaud (Mission Interieure), Pastor Vincent (Baptist), and Cordey (Free Church). Pastor Fisch (Free Church) offered prayer, and then this closed a meeting which will not soon be forgotten by any who were privileged to attend it.

The Gospel in Ireland.

Mr. John Charles Going, representative of the late founder of Castle Cranna Orphanage, near Nenagh, county Tipperary, informs us that the institution is about to be closed, as the trustees are unable to obtain funds to carry on the charitable work. He is willing to place the buildings at the disposal of any society desirous of establishing a centre of evangelistic effort in Ireland.

He says: "There seems to be but little knowledge among Christians in England of the open door there is in Ireland for the preaching of the simple Gospel of Jesus Christ; and people do not seem to have grasped that it is the only cure for all Ireland's ills." Communications may be addressed to Brigade Surgeon White, St. Catherine's View, Winchester.

THE GOSPEL STILL A POWER.—In connection with the Newcastle-on-Tyne Y.M.C.A., a young men's Bible-class is held on Sunday afternoons with an average attendance of about 350. On January 3 the usual New Year testimony and praise meeting was held. After a large number of the members had testified to their faith in Christ, the leader of the class asked all who were wishful of becoming Christians to stand up. Twelve manly young fellows at once arose to their feet, and later on in the meeting fourteen others asked the prayers of the Christians on their behalf that they, too, might be saved. On the following two Sundays several others were inquiring the way of life.

THE LOUISA ASHBURTON MISSION.

The Louisa Ashburton Mission at the Victoria Docks should not pass without mention at this season. Her ladyship has been there herself to see to both the temporal and spiritual good of those whom, for love of Jesus, she has made her special charge. It is not, indeed, given to every one to support missions at their sole cost, but when we see a work like hers, we cannot but pray that God may send some more such labourers into his vineyard.

The work, commenced but a few years since, has grown to vast proportions. It began, as such works have often begun, with a secret, sudden inspiration. Lady Ashburton was going on business late one Saturday evening through the district which is now so favoured with Gospel light. Her soul was stirred within her when she saw a scene of revelry which might have almost disgraced the very heathen. She bemoaned the sorrow of her people, of the souls, blood-bought by her Master, and she asked herself what shall be done to stay this plague, to save these souls?

Lady Ashburton's first idea was to purchase at least one of the gin palaces where she saw this wretched throng, but for the moment this was impossible. Later on she was able to secure one building, and now the whole street is a busy hive of Divine industry. Once Satan laid his snares day and night to drag souls down to hell, to bring temporal as well as eternal ruin to those for whom the Master died; now all is changed, and beautiful snares, or rather beautiful devices, of holy love are used to win men and women to their best interests.

In the large hall which has been built with a view both to the comfort of those who attend it, and of those who speak in it, there are constantly interesting addresses, which are attended by the people with great benefit, and are a pleasant as well as a profitable way of passing the evening. There are large Sunday-schools, and we heard of a Christmas-tree that had been prepared for no less than 1200 children.

In addition to this part of the work there are the dining rooms for the dock labourers both in this Mission and at Manor Way. Some four hundred meals a day are taken in these places. The poor are not pauperised, for each meal is paid for, but the payment is small, so as to be a substantial help to the purchaser, while saving his self-respect.

The sick are visited by those who have charge of these Missions, and the sorrowful are comforted. There is an average attendance of three hundred women at the mothers' meetings, and the Sunday Schools are crowded. The Sailors have also a place where they can have a comfortable bed for a very small cost, and that they all appreciate. We heard, not from Lady Ashburton, but from a grateful chambermaid in a London hotel, how she fed and clothed and comforted the women and children in the dock strike, which, but for her, would have had superadded horrors of starvation.

DR. PENTECOST'S MISSION IN INDIA.

It is an evidence of unusual interest in a religious movement when the secular papers, in addition to reports of the meetings, have leading articles on the work. Such has been the case in several of the places where Dr. Pentecost has been during his remarkable mission in India, which has now continued with unabated power for more than a year.

So great is the interest, that friends who have benefited by the Mission are begging him to return next winter, and urging the importance of it on him. The strain of work has been so heavy, that it is impossible for him to give an immediate answer, and such hard work as he has been through in the trying climate of India necessitates some rest from work for a time.

All readers must feel that the claim of the English-speaking native gentleman is great upon English and American evangelists, and even on the more regular ministers of the Gospel who might be sent on an embassy by their congregation.

MIDNIGHT MEETING MOVEMENT.—The annual prayer-meeting of workers and friends was held on Thursday (21st) at the Kingsgate-street Chapel, Holborn, Mr. Hornibrooke presiding. Many friends were present, and earnest prayers were offered for increased prosperity in the work. Mr. Christien, organising superintendent, gave an address on the fulfilment of prophecy, accompanied with limelight views of Bible lands.

THE EVANGELISATION SOCIETY.

The first annual meeting of the Scottish branch of this Society was held on Monday, 18th inst. in the Christian Institute, Glasgow. There was a large and representative audience.

Mr. J. Campbell White, of Overtoun, presided, and from personal experience of the Society for a number of years, warmly commended the evangelists sent out by the Evangelisation Society to the ministers of Scotland, saying that in the long course of its history there had been little or no jarring between the Society and the churches. He also emphasized the great need of evangelistic work, despite the dislike of many professing Christians to what they were pleased to term "these peripatetic evangelists," a title which he held was applicable to our Lord, who went from place to place preaching the Gospel of the kingdom, and these were but seeking to follow in his footsteps.

The Secretary's report was then read, showing that during the past year—the first year's existence of the Scottish branch—3872 meetings throughout Scotland had been supplied with preachers. The income for the year had been £1093 10s. 6d., of which £751 10s. 6d. were thank-offerings, and £342 subscriptions and donations. There are now ten evangelists fully employed on the Scottish staff, but much valuable assistance is rendered, especially on Sabbaths, by a large number of voluntary preachers. To make the branch in Scotland self-supporting—i.e., to cover expenses of salaries, travelling, and management—it is estimated that the sum of £2000 per annum will be required, which amount it is earnestly hoped will be forthcoming during the current year.

Addresses were delivered by Sir Archibald S. L. Campbell, of Succoth, Bart., Revs. James Stalker, D.D., James Paton, B.A., and John Young, M.A. (Home Mission Secretary of the U.P. Church), all of whom heartily commended the Evangelisation Society to the ministers and office-bearers of the various churches, and also to the liberality of the Christian public. If one thing more than another were made evident by the various speeches, it was the fact that the Society was working hand in hand with the churches, and that its co-operation was most desirable in the work of preaching the Gospel.

The Secretary of the Scottish branch is Mr. E. J. Mitchell, who may be addressed: Grove-street Institute, Glasgow.

CAMBRIDGE NOTES.

The University Church Missionary Union have a most interesting set of speakers on successive Mondays for the term. Rev. H. C. G. Moule, M.A., Presidential Address; Rev. P. H. Chapman, M.A., "Henry Martyn, and Chaplain's work in India"; Rev. T. S. Treavor, M.A., "Missions to Seamen" (from the Downs); Rev. F. E. Wigram, M.A., Hon. Sec. of the C. M. S.; Dr. Wheeler, Jerusalem; Rev. E. C. Gordon, Uganda; Rev. A. B. Hutchinson, Japan.

On Monday, 18th, a most interesting address was given by Mr. Moule on the "Moravian Church." In the course of his remarks he traced the origin of this community in Moravia, and their persecution and subsequent settlement on the estates of Count Zinzendorf, in Lusatia. By the power of God they became wonderfully endued with a missionary spirit—some went to Greenland, some to preach to the negroes in the West Indian islands, later on to Australia and South Africa, &c., &c. At the present time one in four of the Moravian Church is in the mission field. Throughout, the Moravians have kept true to the cardinal doctrines of the Word of God.

The Cambridge Inter-Collegiate Christian Union have drawn up a good programme for this term. The following are the speakers at the Alexandra Hall:—Major Liebenrood; Mr. Stanley Smith, M.A.; Mr. R. P. Wilder, M.A., Princeton, U.S.A.; the Hon. and Rev. W. Talbot Rice, M.A.; Sir Arthur Blackwood, K.C.B.; subject, "A Door Opened in Heaven;" Mr. E. J. Kennedy. We trust to have large numbers, and the power of the Holy Ghost working in our midst, in convicting of sin and leading to the Lord Jesus.

On Friday, 22nd, in the evening a meeting of members of the University, at the invitation of Rev. Handley and Mrs. Moule, was held at Ridley Hall to hear Surgeon-Major Pringle, M.D., and Mr. Cheong on the subject of the opium traffic. After a telling address by the Chinese gentleman, Dr. Pringle spoke a few heartfelt words on the grievous wrong England was doing to China, showing she was wholly responsible for its exportation from India to China.

DEVIZES.—Mr. John Elliott is now conducting a special mission in connection with the Devizes Y.M.C.A.

COSTERS' HALL, HOXTON.

That the work at Costers' Hall, Hoxton, reaches the surrounding people of all ages, was pleasingly shown on Wednesday evening of last week, when 550 children attended the New Year's festival, the main cost being borne by the Robin Dinner Society. These young persons were, of course, a portion of the Sunday-school, which crowds the building on the Lord's day, and which might be much larger than it is were increased accommodation available. The children thoroughly enjoyed the fare provided, and throughout the evening they showed great capacity for entertaining one another. The way they sang "Come ye that love the Lord," proved what music there is in children's voices. Some had learned whole chapters of Scripture, which they gave with good effect.

The working Mission Church at Costers' Hall was never in a more prosperous condition. During the last year, seventy-seven persons were added to the roll of membership, all being converts and not one by transfer. Thus the spiritual work is characterised by Mr. Orsman himself as being of a most delightful kind. About fifty meetings are held every week, and these, especially the Gospel services and the prayer-meetings, are attended with great blessing. Instead of being obliged to meet in rooms at public-houses, the costers and others can here transact all of their club business free of cost, and with safety to themselves and families. One of the Thrift Societies which needed £1845 to pay it out just before Christmas, showed a profit of twelve per cent.

After the London County Council election in March, when Mr. Orsman will no doubt be again returned, he hopes to leave England for some rest and change. Our friend now freely gives the whole of his time to the comprehensive evangelistic work in Hoxton, and to the County Council with its several committees. Although Mr. Orsman is still comparatively young and looks well, he finds that anxiety tells upon him more than it used to do. The general anxiety is of course increased by the influenza in the neighbourhood. The cocoa breakfasts to half-starved Board School children, and the soup at a nominal charge, will this season be more needed than ever. So also will the cast-off clothes, which the keeper at Costers' Hall is always glad to receive on account of the poor. Mr. Orsman's address is Milton House, Shacklewell-green, N.E.

SHOREDITCH TABERNACLE MISSION.

The Preachers' third anniversary in connection with the Gibraltar-walk Chapel, Bethnal-green, was held on Monday, January 25, Mr. W. R. Fox in the chair.

The Secretary, Mr. Cook, reported a year of much success in the work. They were developing a many-sided mission. The workers now numbered seventy-two. Among many branches of work was the tract society, with some twenty members, who visit some twenty districts, distributing the Gospel message and giving such temporal help as they can. They have made over forty thousand visits during the year.

The services had been much owned of God, as also have the open-air meetings, the lodging-house work, the large Sunday-school, and the several other efforts.

The chapel has been renovated during the year, and is now very cheerful and comfortable, but this work is not yet paid for, and the general account is in arrear. Letters for hospitals, parcels of clothing, and tracts are very acceptable in the good work which is done among the many poor of this part of London. Mr. C. A. Cook, 244, Kingsland-road, N.E., is Secretary, and he is ably helped by a band of workers, who, like himself, give their services voluntarily. Mr. Pickersgill, Mr. G. Nokes, and others addressed the meeting.

REV. H. O. MEYERS (late of Emmanuel Church, Putney) has for many months been travelling in the colonies in quest of health—although he has not been altogether idle. At Melbourne, where he made a long stay, he preached in several of the churches, and gave a series of addresses at the Y.M.C.A. on "Palestine light on difficult texts," which were much appreciated. He went on to Fiji on a visit to the Mission station. From there he visited Auckland, New Zealand, giving accounts of the mission work in Fiji. At Sydney he has delivered addresses at the Y.M.C.A. and other places, besides preaching at Botany Bay.

THE RESCUE OF YOUNG WOMEN.

In a report recently issued by the "Homes of Hope," some very interesting and encouraging results are published. Since the establishment of the homes 3117 young women have been admitted, of whom 1195 belonged to the class of young mothers, all of whom were rescued while in most perilous surroundings, and thus saved on the threshold of a life of sorrow and shame. In almost every instance these unhappy young people were permanently benefited and have turned out well.

Perhaps one of the most promising features of these rescues is the fact that these poor young women were made to see the sin and disastrous consequences of their fall, and led to follow a pure life in the future, although many were burdened with the support of their illegitimate offspring. It is painful to think of the amount of misery and shame often brought upon young and erring girls by unscrupulous men, who, in numerous instances, have taken advantage of untoward circumstances to bring ruin and life-long disgrace upon the foolish and unsuspecting. More than one instance is given of clergymen writing to the Homes requesting admission for young girls of fifteen and sixteen years of age who have been betrayed, and are seeking with importunity and penitence the shelter of a Rescue Home.

A notable feature of this institution (situate in Regent-square, W.C.) is the efforts always made by the committee to compel the father to pay towards the maintenance of the infant, and thus bear some share in the penalty of his misdoing. Many instances are recorded of the good spiritual influence brought to bear upon the inmates while staying in the Homes, and the way in which the grace of God has been brought home to many souls.

The homes are conducted on the classification principle, care being taken that those who belong more markedly to the fallen class are not associated with young girls whose first step in sin has brought them thither. There is a continuous spiritual work going on. Like most other benevolent enterprises the Homes of Hope seem to have suffered recently through great lack of funds to carry on their mission.

Post-Office Employes.

On Friday last, the Western District Post-Office Institute, in connection with the Postal and Telegraph Christian Association, held its second annual meeting in Middlesex House, Chapel-street, Edgware-road. The most notable feature of the report is that a new departure was made last year in admitting senior sorters and postmen, so that it now consists of two divisions—a senior and a junior. All the departments report progress.

Sir James Fergusson, M.P., the Postmaster-General, who presided, in the course of a sympathetic address, assured his young friends present that they would find that there is no security like religious principle for guiding lives aright.

Sir Arthur Blackwood, Mr. F. Hill, and Miss Edmonstone also addressed the meeting.

ISLE OF SHEPPEY Y.M.C.A.—This Association celebrated its sixth anniversary on Monday last week, by holding a public meeting in the Bethel schoolroom. The hon. secretary, Mr. Edward J. Penney, read the report, which showed an increase of seventy-five members including village branches. While deeply thankful to the pastor and deacons of Bethel Chapel for having so kindly given the use of the schoolroom every week, the Association feels that steps should be taken to have a building erected for its own special purposes, and an Institute Building Fund has been started. The secretary's address is 66, High-street, Blue Town, Sheerness.

CHELSEA PREVENTIVE AND RESCUE HOMES.—The Report of past year says:—"We have had almost a Pentecostal blessing among our poor girls, which makes it the best year's spiritual work we have had, because we have seen during this year a larger number turning to the Lord than we have ever before known." The figures given show that a total of 183 cases have been dealt with in the two Homes, half of whom have been provided with situations. The president, Lady Ida Low, writes:—"The Rescue Home is almost entirely unsupported, except by gifts and donations. The loving sympathy and true religious influence has been blest to most of the girls, who when their troubles are over are only too desirous to redeem their characters, go into service, and maintain their children. Few of them go back into evil ways. There is, however, the constant anxiety of insufficient funds; one quarter's rent now due, and nothing to meet it." The year's income was about £300. The hon. sec. is Mr. S. E. Moorcroft; and the address of the Homes is 168, King's Road, Chelsea, S.W. A Bible-reading is given every week in both Homes, and is much appreciated by the girls.

PRISONERS AT SINGAPORE.

Mr. W. H. Stanes, of Toneyville Estate, Yercand, S. India, describing his visit to Singapore, writes:—

The mission work in the large gaol is most encouraging and deeply interesting. Every Sunday the prisoners, about two thousand in number, are assembled in the various wards, and are seated on the floor in groups of about two hundred to four hundred, according to the various dialects and languages, and mission agents from the different denominations preach the Gospel to them from twelve to one. The commanding officer welcomes any Christian teacher, and stipulates only that in every case the Gospel shall be the theme. It was truly an impressive sight, and one that stirred the heart, to see the deep attention shown.

Every Saturday, also, from two to three p.m., any of the prisoners who are in any way interested in the Gospel are assembled into classes, and again have the Word preached to them by earnest Christians. I had many opportunities of speaking by interpretation, and was much pleased by the way they understood and enjoyed the Word spoken. By these means many have been truly converted, and witness bright confessions to the power of God to save even the worst. Also, from three to four, a meeting is held for the Europeans in their ward, and this, too, has been much owned of God, and quite a number have been saved.

One is an especially interesting case. While under sentence of death for murder he was converted and asked for baptism ere he was hanged. But, unexpectedly, a reprieve was granted, and he is serving his fifteen years. He is now a bright, earnest Christian, and has been used already to his fellow prisoners. When condemned some months ago he did not know much English; he now writes and speaks it fluently, and, best of all, has much grown in grace, and loves his Bible. He has also learnt Malay, so that when released he hopes to be a missionary to proclaim the glorious Gospel that has saved a sinner like him.

THE OPEN-AIR MISSION.

At the quarterly meeting of the Open-Air Mission held on Monday night at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Mr. Gawin Kirkham said it was two years since they last met in that Tabernacle, and they then had the pleasure of hearing a stirring address by their pastor. They were very glad to hear that his illness had not taken a serious turn, and trusted it would be their good fortune to have him with them when they next visited the Tabernacle.

Rev. H. O. Mackey said it was well known to those engaged in preaching the Gospel that there was a large class who could not be induced to enter the ordinary places of worship, and but for such agencies as the Open-Air Mission it was probable they would never hear the Word of God.

Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D., gave a special address on "Seeking for Souls." In the course of his remarks he said that he admired the Open-Air Mission because the members fulfilled the command of our Saviour by going out to the people "where they do congregate." They were fishers of men and they cast their nets where fish were to be caught, and where he was glad to know they were caught.

The Soldiers Home, Hamilton, N.B.

The Lady Superintendent writes:—During the past year we have had wonderful encouragement. God has greatly blessed our work amongst the young recruits who pass through to their regiments, as well as among the militia. Over twelve thousand have attended the Home since 1890, and though their stay here is necessarily short, frequent letters and after-visits at the furlough season testify to the change wrought through the Spirit applying the simple Gospel messages brought home personally to them at the Home. The small coffee-room is generally full each evening till eleven p.m. Friends gave us a second-hand piano last spring, which has proved an invaluable help. Four evenings in the week, as well as on Sundays, a short pointed Gospel address is given. Last year a sale of work helped us through, and we are hoping to have one in February, but at present have had very little sent in for it. We should be most thankful for contributions of articles, sent by post or rail, to Miss Barton, Honorary Superintendent, Soldiers' Home, Hamilton, N.B.

For the Young.

"Y. H. L."; OR, WHO WILL TRY?

Down the cold, cheerless street came two childish figures, with aching feet and hands benumbed by the bitter frost of a raw January evening. They trudged along the slippery pavement, often jostled rudely by hurrying foot-passengers, too busy to notice or pity the children as they rushed hither and thither towards happy homes or various places of amusement.

They were not much to look at, the shivering little pair, for they were ragged and dirty and pale; so if nobody noticed and nobody cared, perhaps it was hardly to be wondered at!

On they wandered, apparently aimlessly, looking into the great, gay shops, and pausing now and again under the rich stream of light that blazed from the flaring gas-jets in some of the windows. They kept in that stream, as though gathering something of warmth and cheeriness, until pushed aside, or told peremptorily to "move out of that!" Presently Jimmie began to cry, not noisily, but quietly, the big tears falling down his thin and dirty cheeks on to his tattered jacket, and the weak little voice wailed, "I'm orful cold and hungry and tired! Oh, Nance, I can't walk no more, an' I think I'm freezin' to death!"

Poor Nance tried to pull him along, but her fingers and his were stiff with cold, and the little boy's feet were weary.

"Come under my cloak," she said, pulling him towards her with a pretty motherly action. "'Taint very big, but 'tis warmer than your jacket, and if you keep close to me I guess it'll hold us both."

"It won't hold me an' you," sobbed wee Jimmie, "if I squeeze myself ever so small."

"Oh! yes, it will," bravely urged the elder sister, unbuttoning it round her throat. "See, Jim, I can stretch it a little, so cheer up, for 'tis nice and big now."

Poor little cloak! It was threadbare, small, and old, but in a few moments the younger child was lovingly folded in close to the motherly heart of the older one, and together they went on—on—on!

Why, Nance, dear child, what wonderful secret have you learned, that some of your richer, happier brothers and sisters in this world know nothing about as yet? Who taught you that stretching your cloak for the needs of two, doubled the warmth, and halved the pain of cold, and icy sleet? Who gave you that sweet, self-denying, loving desire to cheer and comfort a weaker one at the cost of a little extra suffering to yourself? Some of us want to learn your secret, and we have come to you to have it whispered to our hearts to-day.

Ah! girls and boys, some of you live in homes full—aye, overflowing with comforts, luxuries, and joys. They lie all round you, and you are rich in their possession. Are you content selfishly to enjoy them, or will you try to make them reach a little further? Further than yourself, and your schoolmates, and friends; further than your fathers, and mothers, and dear ones; see if you cannot stretch them a little. Some other life than your own, poor, sad, suffering, shorn of all that makes child-life such a joy and delight, is even now waiting to share your happiness; waiting to be helped, and cheered, and blessed. What can you give? Helpful deeds, loving words, earnest prayers, gifts of service, and gifts of gold. You may lay them all like golden sunbeams across some other life, which, but for you, might be drearily dragged out under the dark shadows of sin and suffering.

How can you do it? Join our "Young Helpers' League," and we will show you. We have formed this great world-wide union of boys and girls everywhere just to teach loving young hearts dear little Nance's secret. Waiting to be cheered, comforted, and helped are thousands of poor little lads and lasses, drift of the streets, unwanted, unloved, uncared for, and untaught. If each happy boy and girl will but stretch his or her comforts and joys a little, so as to let them wrap round some one sad life out of the thousands, who can say how many tears may be dried, how much cheer may be given, how much pain may be halved and gladness doubled.

What is our scheme? A very simple one. Only that every boy or girl willing to become "Young Helpers" of Dr. Barnardo's work among the outcast and waif children of London will join our "Y. H. L. League," and immediately set to work in real earnest. Let them pray our daily prayer, "Our Father, bless all poor little children throughout the world, and fill our hearts with loving desires to help them, for the sake of Jesus Christ our Lord," until their hearts are all aflame with love for the unloved. Let them devise some plan (and love makes us very clever) for raising money or showing practical sympathy with the four thousand three hundred waif children now in the Homes. Or, best of all, let them enlist young companions, get up a meeting, ask me or other friends to come and tell them all about the League and see if we cannot form a Habitation of our League in their immediate neighbourhood, so that by means of collections, gifts, and work, that body of Young Leaguers may support one child in the Homes at £16 per annum, or fill one cot in Her Majesty's Hospital for waif children with inmates every year. This only means £30 a year, plenty of work and prayer, and perhaps a good deal of "stretching" on some young reader's part; but having learnt love's secret, we shall find it sweet and easy to deny ourselves for the sake of others. Surely the dear Lord pleaded with us for such poor children when He said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto ME."

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. A. G. Dodderidge, who conducted the Children's Seaside Services at St. Leonards last summer, is now working regularly in connection with the Children's Special Service Mission.

Mr. R. Callender, B.A., has been appointed to represent the Mission in Manchester and neighbourhood, and is ready to take Scripture Union meetings or a series of mission services. He may be communicated with at 75, Carlton-street, Moss-lane, East Manchester.

Mr. T. B. Bishop, hon. sec. of the Children's Special Service Mission, writes from 13A, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row: "We shall be glad to hear from friends who desire to arrange for a series of mission services for young people in their neighbourhood."

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. H. Hutchinson, St. John's, Highbury, Jan. 28 to Feb. 5; Finsbury-park Congregational Church, Feb. 7 to 12; Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, Presbyterian Church, Wandsworth, Jan. 24 to 29; St. Mary's Hall, Merton, Feb. 7 to 17; Mr. A. G. Dodderidge, Holy Trinity Schools, Richmond, Jan 18 to 30, at 6 p.m.; Mr. Livesey Carrott, Athenæum, Camden-road, every Sunday at 3 p.m.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., Jan. 31, Philippians iv. 10-23; Mon., Feb. 1, Ruth i. 1-9; Tues., Feb. 2, i. 10-22; Wed., Feb. 3, ii. 1-12; Thurs., Feb. 4, ii. 13-23; Fri., Feb. 5, iii. 1-18; Sat., Feb. 6, iv. 1-17.

South Arcot Highways and Hedges Mission.

The good work at Thiruvithi, Panrutti, Madras Presidency—the evangelisation among the rural populations of the district—is steadily continued. Miss F. M. Reade, founder and managing director, calls attention in her report, to the fact that new buildings are sorely needed in place of the make-shift ones at present used, and which are in constant need of repair. No building, it seems, is available on hire because of the strong caste-prejudice, which will not suffer a Christian as a next-door neighbour. For this, £250 is needed. Helpers are further informed that the expenses of training young men for the work, and supporting the adopted child, Rockia Bi, do not come out of the Mission funds, but are met in other ways.

The Medical Branch bids fair to develop and extend under the care of its new missionary, Miss Werfel, for whose success prayer is desired. Miss Frankland (late helper) has left to join the Friends' Mission in the north. Much pain has been caused through the sustained and systematic opposition of the Qazi, necessitating the closing of the Mohammedan Girls' School. The Mission Staff includes nine workers, all told.

REST FOR YOUNG WOMEN.—At "The Hawthorn," Framfield, Sussex, Miss Harriet Mason opened, some years ago, a Home where young women in business might find rest and change. The Home has not only been most helpful to wearied bodies, but has been owned of God to the souls of many who have visited it; and during the past six years some six hundred have stayed in it. An interesting Gospel work has also been opened up in the surrounding villages. The work is highly commended by Mrs. Arbuthnot and others. Doubtless some will wish to aid this effort, and cheer one who for it has made not a little personal effort.

THE FIELD IN WEST AFRICA.

A correspondent, writing from Loanda, says: "This field is white for the harvest, and, but for the comforting faith and hope given me in proportion with the trials, I would be crying most of the time over the lack of workers, who will build on the right foundation, that of the native language and love for the African, not because of his loveliness, but because one cannot help it, because of duty.

If the Missionary Bureau, at the Aldersgate-street Y.M.C.A., has any young man who is a carpenter, or book-binder, or engineer, or builder (or knows any good trade), and would like this field of work, he could easily earn his living and do much good. Only, he should not be an Englishman; as, for the present, the Portuguese are exasperated against all that is English. Of course he should not come without first corresponding and knowing all about it. When he has a situation, or has got his customers, an able tradesman can make his three to five dollars a day; but, of course, expenses are higher than in England. Still, a frugal man can live cheaply.

From Benguella I have just heard that Arnot is gone to Garenganze, whence Swan has started for Europe, via Congo River. Dr. Johnston and his coloured men have gone to the Barotse. Mrs. Sanders, of the American Board Mission at Bihe, who had come out with the first party of that Mission, some ten years ago, has gone to the home above.

Mr. Sanders keeps at the front. Mr. and Mrs. Cotton and Mr. Currie, of the same Mission, will soon go home. The Bishop Taylor Mission in Angola, pursues its normal course.

COMMON LODGING-HOUSE MISSION.

In connection with this Mission, bands of devoted men and women devote their Sunday afternoons and evenings to the work of evangelising the inmates of the lodging-houses of London. This work is done by taking the Gospel to them in the lodging-houses. At the present time perhaps the greatest need in connection with this Mission is a Home to which girls and young women, on being first driven by the force of untoward circumstances to seek refuge in a common lodging-house, could be at once removed from all the evil influences there to be found, pending arrangements for restoring them to their friends, or for placing them in other established Homes, where they could find sympathy and help, according to the particular circumstances of their various cases. In order to promote the establishment of such a Home, a drawing-room meeting was lately held at Kent House, Knightsbridge. Archdeacon Sinclair presided, and Mr. John Harvey (Secretary) gave an address on the urgent need for establishing a Home. His statements were fully substantiated by others from facts which had come under their own personal observation. Archdeacon Sinclair, Lady Ashburton, Rev. Marcus Rainsford, Mr. F. E. Paynter, and others, earnestly supported the project.

DEPTFORD MEDICAL MISSION.—The second annual gathering of this Mission was held on January 20, when quite a number of converts and friends met together. An address, full of wise and earnest counsel, was given by Mr. J. Crofton Rainey. A pleasant feature of the evening was a presentation of a marble clock to the director, Dr. F. A. Pring, by a number of working men and women.

DR. HOLLY, BISHOP OF HAYTI, writing to Pentecostal Power, the quarterly paper of the Daily Prayer Union and Worcester Tract Society, says: "Devotion to God the Holy Ghost, the stronger man armed, is one of the things needful for the success of our Gospel work in Hayti, which is a country emphatically possessed by Satan, the strong man armed. Satanic mysteries, brought from ancient Africa, are everywhere prevalent here; and it is only the power of the Holy Ghost responding to our fervent prayers that can dislodge this strongly-entrenched demon! Indeed, we need to redouble our supplications in the short space of time now left to us before the close of the Evangelic ages; when, as just before the flood, the Spirit of God will cease to strive with man for his conversion, and leave him exposed to the judgments of Almighty God, now ready to be poured out from the Apocalyptic vials, full of his bottled-up wrath. We have been menaced with this withdrawal of this gracious influence of the Holy Spirit since 1870, in which year, on the 18th of July, the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost was consummated in Christendom by the decree of the Vatican Council, which dared to place a sinful, fallible, mortal man in the place, office, and work of the Divine Comforter, as the only Universal Vicar of Christ, to teach, lead, and guide us infallibly in all truth!"

The Anti-Opium Movement.

WOMEN AND THE TRAFFIC.

All national distinctions fall before Christianity's enlarged law of the neighbour. Such was the unanswerable proposition which, after fervent prayer, Mrs. Grattan Guinness submitted to the women gathered in Harley House, Bow-road, London, E., on Thursday afternoon last week, by invitation of the Women's Anti-Opium Urgency League. The painful and, of late, oft-told tale of England's Governmental iniquity in regard to China, India, and Burmah, was once more sketched, in order that enlightened female persuasion may be brought to bear upon Christian fathers, brothers, and husbands, whose electoral influence and power should be used for God, as never before, in demanding the prompt and total abolition of opium growth and traffic. Pointing out that the resolution of the House of Commons has produced no practical effect, and that, in view of the present agitation dishonest attempts are being made, by certain officials, to conceal that fact, Mrs. Guinness urged the need of securing by prayer Divine power for awakened Christians who seek to cope with a formidable adversary, namely, the DEVIL IN GOVERNMENTAL FORM.

Mrs. Adams, who appeared in Chinese costume, and who, with her husband, has spent about fourteen years in China, was another witness among the many who have preceded her, as to the serious obstacles which opium puts in the way of missionary enterprise. Amongst other things, she told of a lad who had acquired the opium habit, secretly strangling a younger brother, so as to lay hands on an ornament which the latter wore, and barter it for the deadly drug. A mother, too, was found beating her daughters because they would not become infamous to procure opium.

Mrs. James Mathieson, who occupied the chair, read a long memorial to Lord Salisbury, representing the aroused conscience of women in London's East-end Christian churches on the question. This document was unanimously adopted by the meeting, and was numerously signed at the close thereof.

Mrs. Maurice Gregory told her Christian sisters something of what she had seen in the horrible opium dens of Bombay, and of the physical, mental, and moral degradation which therein abounds.

Mrs. Fox Butlin's advocacy took the form of a reminder concerning and of a resolution, duly adopted, in favour of memorials to the Cabinet, from women's public organisations, which resolution also pledged each woman present to promote such a memorial from the church with which she is connected. The meeting also bound itself to exert personal influence in obtaining like memorials from friends in the provinces.

Miss Guinness asked why they should not obtain ten thousand signatures against opium from the women of East London alone, and suggested the holding of a women's mass meeting in the Great Assembly Hall at an early date. She also mentioned that the Urgency League needs some three thousand pounds for the purposes of its operations—a statement which one could well believe, judging by the abundance of anti-opium literature placed at the disposal of those who attended this meeting, and the business-like and practical tone which characterised the proceedings.

We trust many Christian women will put themselves in communication with the organising secretary of the League, Miss Rachel B. Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road, London, N.

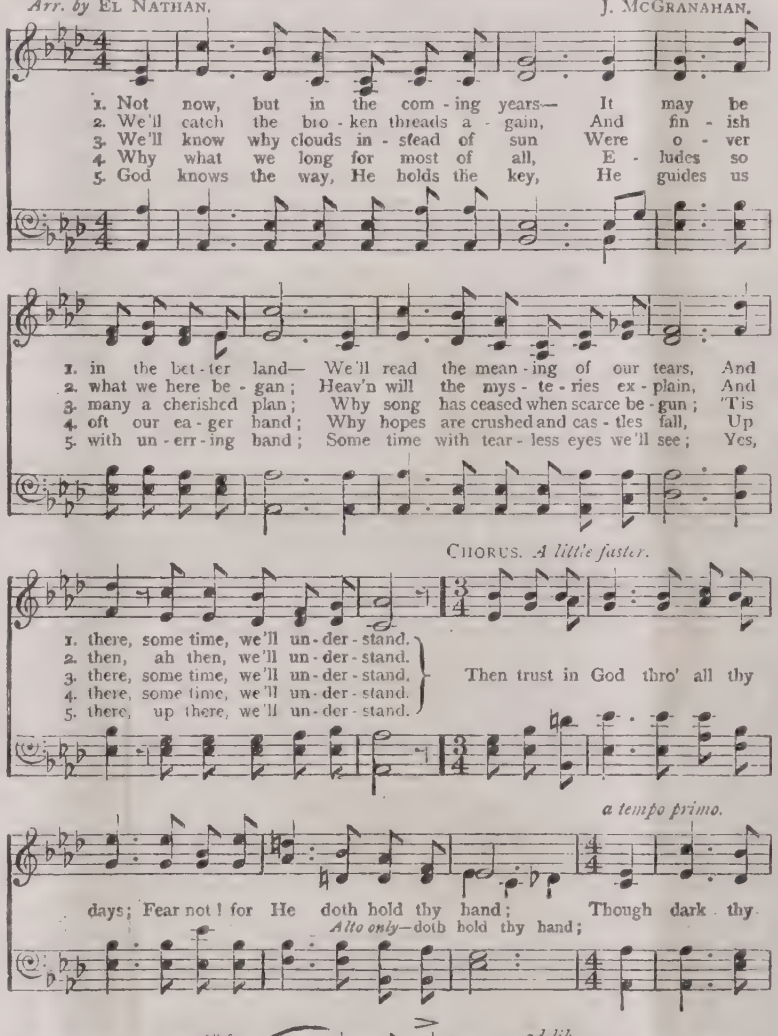
WESLEYANS AND THE MOVEMENT.

We are thankful to observe that our brethren of the Wesleyan Church are taking up the opium question in vigorous and business-like fashion. On Wednesday in last week (20th) a large number of London ministers met at breakfast in the Morning Chapel, City-road, when serious statements were made as to the state of affairs in the East, and important action was resolved upon.

Rev. W. F. Moulton, D.D., presided, and referred to a telegram received from the President of the Wesleyan Conference expressing the earnest hope "that they would strike an effective, and prepare for a final, blow at the iniquitous traffic."

Mr. Alfred Dyer maintained that the results of opium vice were but imperfectly understood. From personal observation, and from the testimony of trustworthy witnesses, he showed that the opium crave, once acquired, meant the agonies of a life-long misery, the utter ruin of body, soul, and spirit, the destruction of the home, and the neglect of wife and family. No words could be too strong, no language too severe, no picture too striking for the horrors of the opium traffic. The one thing now to be desired was that all churches and congregations should unite in memorialising the Cabinet, so that not less than fifty thousand or sixty thousand memorials should be poured in upon Lord Salisbury within the next two months. In the present balance of parties that would be sure to have a very salutary effect. As to the question of revenue, was it too much to ask for a subsidy to be granted of ten million pounds sterling to spread over a period of seven or more years on a diminishing scale?

Rev. John Walton, M.A., confirmed what had been said respecting the terrible nature of the opium traffic by references to what he had seen in India and elsewhere, and urged immediate and united action.



Strong and forceful words followed by Dr. J. L. Maxwell, Messrs. George Gillett, Donald Matheson, B. Broomhall, M. Gregory, Revs. G. Piercy, S. Weaver, T. Wheatley, and others. Eventually the following resolution was adopted:—

That this meeting of Wesleyan ministers assembled in the Morning Chapel, City-road, having heard from some of the prominent leaders of the anti-opium movement the position of the British Government in relation to that iniquitous trade, is deeply moved, and records its profound sense of the wrongs inflicted thereby upon the people of India. This meeting also earnestly commends the matter to the earnest consideration of all the Wesleyan ministers and people, and implores them to memorialise the Government for the entire prohibition of the growth of the poppy except for medicinal purposes.

Some Time we'll Understand.

MR. MERTON SMITH AT ROTHESAY, N.B.

This popular resort was recently the scene of earnest and effective evangelistic work under Mr. Merton Smith, of Chicago. On the invitation of a joint committee of ministers and others from the Free, United Presbyterian, and Baptist Churches, a fortnight's campaign was commenced on Friday, Jan. 8th, and terminated on Friday, Jan. 22nd.

The principal features of the Mission were a daily service at noon and a Gospel meeting at night, at both of which the attendance was uniformly large. In addition to these meetings, Mr. Smith was unweariedly active in addressing gatherings of children, young men and women, mothers, &c.; and in some instances he visited the careless, unconcerned, in their own homes, endeavouring by personal dealing to lead them to Christ. Mr. Smith's grasp of central truth is strong and unwavering. His addresses are characterised by the same earnest conviction, and are driven home by apt illustrations.

As the result of this mission, several persons profess that they have given their hearts to the Lord, many Christians have been greatly refreshed, and the workers have been drawn more closely to one another. Mr. J. Ritchie Bell, evangelistic singer from Montreal, was during the last week, associated with Mr. Smith. His singing of the Gospel is sweet, expressive and cultured, and his dealings with inquirers in the after-meeting were, along with those of Mrs. Smith, a like-minded worker with her husband, singularly helpful. Mr. Smith left on Saturday, Jan. 23, to conduct meetings in Dunfermline, and he is followed there with the affectionate interest and prayers of many friends in Rothesay.

MR. CHEOK HONG CHEONG,

Superintendent of the Church Missions to the Chinese in Victoria.

THIS week we introduce to the notice of our readers Mr. Cheok Hong Cheong, who is now in this country to plead for the millions of China who are victims of the opium traffic. He was born in Fatshan, in the province of Canton. His paternal and maternal grandfathers were, respectively, a banker and a well-to-do paper manufacturer. Although neither joined with the rebels in any way, both were completely ruined by the Taeping rebellion, which arose out of the political disturbances caused by the last great opium war. In consequence, Mr. Cheong's father emigrated to Australia, when Cheok Hong Cheong was a little boy. Here Mr. Cheong, senr., became converted to God, and was eventually appointed pastor in the Chinese Christian Church.

The history of the Chinese Christian Church in Australia is a very interesting one. Dean Macartney, and other earnest workers, seeing the great need of Gospel work amongst the thousands of Chinese immigrants in the gold-rush of 1855, formed the Church Missionary Society of Victoria, obtaining the first teachers from the Anglo-Chinese Missionary College of St. Paul's at Hong Kong. Emulated by their example, the Wesleyan and Presbyterian Churches soon started work on similar lines. In spite of the peculiar difficulties that the pioneer missionaries had to contend with—the gold-fever and the absorption of mind connected therewith—a number of converts were gathered, and several little churches of Chinese Christians formed. Better still, some of the converts, remembering the great needs of the countless millions of their mother country, returned to China as missionaries, and there, with a truly apostolic zeal, they have been, and are still, engaged in planting and establishing churches wherever and whenever God opens up the way.

The work has also gone on extending in Australia, and it is a significant fact that for every Christian worker that has gone home to China as a missionary, God has raised up another in his place to carry on the work in Australia itself. Mr. Cheong has numbers of interesting details to give with regard to his work. In reply to the question, "Are the converts you speak of genuine, 'good men and true'?" he says:—

"One of the most exemplary Christians that I have met with in Australia was a Chinese miner in the 'golden city'; and, strange as it may appear, one who came to his Christianity through a terrible affliction—he was demonised. The friends of the demoniac who heard the public proclamation of the Gospel believed the religion of Jesus to have the power of driving away devils, so they besought the evangelist to take home the demoniac, and do what he could for him. Nothing daunted, the evangelist acceded to their request, and by constant, persevering prayer and reading of the Holy Scriptures on behalf of and together with the demoniac, he succeeded in bringing him to the feet of Jesus, and in his right mind."

This man, out of whom the devils were thus cast, has now been for years a respected member of the Church, and is earnest in declaring to his countrymen what the Lord has done for his soul. Mr. Cheong also tells of a Chinese tradesman who failed very badly in business, and afterwards became converted. The Lord prospering him after his conversion, he repaid all his creditors. His largest creditor, a heathen Chinaman, on unexpectedly receiving the balance of the debt, said to him, "If you had not become a Christian, you would never have paid this!" Mr. Cheong adds:—

Since he became a Christian this man has felt himself involved in another and far heavier debt—even the debt of gratitude to his Saviour. To discharge that debt was utterly beyond his power. What, then, did he do? He went and diligently sought out all those for whom Christ has left a legacy of love, and endeavoured through them to show his gratitude to his Saviour. He is still continuing in his good work.

Mr. Cheong is not only an earnest evangelist, but a warm patriot, using his influence for the assistance of his countrymen against the great opium evil, as well as for the abolition of the oppressive legal disabilities under which they labour in Australia. With regard to the first, Mr. Cheong has headed a great movement for the total prohibition of opium in Australia, except for strictly medicinal purposes. This movement is on the eve of victory, and the legal enactment for the abolition of the traffic is expected to be passed in the next session of the Colonial Parliament.

The laws against the Chinese which Mr. Cheong especially wishes to see repealed are—first, the statutes which practically prevent a Chinaman in Australia bringing his wife and children to the colony, which are indirectly the cause of a good deal of the immorality with which the Chinese are charged; secondly, Mr. Cheong is doing all he can to remove the great misapprehension which exists that the Chinese, as a nation, is a great emigrating nation. He points out that the whole of the emigrants come from one province—Canton, and nearly all from a particular district within that province. The excitement of the gold-fever at its height, with the utmost facility of ingress into the Australasian colonies, only attracted a total Chinese population of sixty thousand, and that population has never been exceeded. Mr. Cheong ridicules the periodical panics in California and Australia, arising from the supposed danger of "the overplus population of China flooding the world," and says that it is a great mistake to suppose that China is, in any sense, an over-populated country. Whilst the population of China is eighteen times that of Great Britain, its square mileage is seventy-six times as great. England is, therefore, four times as thickly populated, in comparison to its size, as China.

Our friend is very enthusiastic with regard to the great possibilities of mission work in China, were the opium traffic once abolished. He earnestly insists upon the power and will of the Chinese Government and people to abolish the home traffic, if once the heavy hand of the enormous British import trade were taken off. The Chinese Government has only permitted the home growth of the drug in order to starve out the Indian imported opium—a policy of despair, and not in any way successful as yet, for the import into China of the most virulent kind of opium sold in Asia, that manufactured by the British Government at Patna and Ghazipur, has been increasing for many years past (from 42,900 chests in 1872 to 57,000 chests in 1890), and shows no signs of decline.

The responsibility of England in this matter is stupendous. Looking back over past history, it will be found that the teetotal Mohammedans introduced the use of opium into Asia, and traces of their influence in doing so are to be found right along the line of their ancient conquests, from Persia in the west to Yunnan in the east. But this was a comparatively small trade, until it was taken up by the incomparably greater energy and intellect of Englishmen, an energy and an intellect which was the direct outcome of the fact that our nation has for centuries possessed an open Bible. With these gifts of God, given by Him for high and holy purposes, the traffic was organised by godless Englishmen into the present monstrous proportions, so that it now threatens half the population of the world.

Slavery in America was brought to a termination in a very tragical fashion, and at an awful cost of treasure and blood. How shall the opium traffic come to an end? Shall it cease amidst the lurid glow of pestilence and war, and amidst the awful scourges of Divine judgment? Or will the Christian Church do its duty, and be used as God's instrument to bring the thing to a speedy end?

Higher Criticism on Jonah.

No miracle has been more frequently objected to than that of Jonah and the fish. If this objection were urged only by open enemies of the truth, we might be content to let it alone. But when Christian scholars, who occupy the position of teachers of others, repeat this objection, and affirm that the whole book of Jonah is to be regarded as fable or parable, but not as literal fact, the matter becomes more serious. It is needful to utter an earnest warning against the acceptance of a theory which, the more carefully it is examined, the more unwarrantable will it appear.

It is not only the book of Jonah that is involved in the issue. By frequent New Testament references that book is recognised as a part of the sacred canon. To deny it is, therefore, to weaken the authority of the whole. And if that book be untrue, it is difficult—if not impossible—to continue our faith in Jesus as an infallible and all-sufficient Teacher. A theory that threatens us with such disastrous conclusions ought not to go unchallenged.

When we seek for the grounds upon which this bold theory rests, we can find only two. First, it is alleged by some scholars that the language of the book proves it to have been written some two centuries later than the date of the historic Jonah. Against this it will be enough for some to know that other scholars—equally able and devout—deny this conclusion, and believe that Jonah's residence in the northern kingdom of Palestine is sufficient to explain his language. But even if the critics are right as to the date when the book was written, their conclusion that the whole story is untrue by no means follows. A story is not necessarily false because it is not told until two centuries after the event. Is not this a very shadowy foundation upon which to build such a superstructure?

The second ground is, that the story itself is improbable. This, to most readers, will be refuted as soon as it is stated. To deny a miracle because it is improbable is to deny all miracle, and this is practical atheism. Faith in God implies faith in the miraculous. If it be replied that the miracle is denied, not because it is a miracle, but because there is no adequate reason for it, the answer is—There may be very much reason that critical students of the book fail to discover. The fault may be in the mind of the critics, and not in the book itself.

According to the words of Jesus (Luke xi. 30) there was abundant reason for the miracle. Jonah was a sign to the Ninevites, as Jesus by his resurrection would be to his generation. This statement, in our judgment, makes the whole story simple and harmonious. There are two great miracles in the book of Jonah—one physical, involving the practial death and resurrection of Jonah; the other moral, and manifested in the ready repentance of the whole city of the Ninevites. Either of these looked at alone is improbable and difficult to believe—the latter more difficult than the former. But looked at together, it is easy to accept them both. The one was the sign by which the other was effected. Without the moral miracle the physical miracle was without purpose; without the physical miracle the moral miracle would have been impossible.

The whole story then becomes more than a history. It has its place among the minor prophets, because a prophecy is embedded in the story itself. Jesus accepted the literalness and truthfulness of the story, and saw in Jonah's miraculous preservation a sign of his own resurrection; while in the Ninevites' equally miraculous repentance, He saw a prediction of his reception by the Gentiles, after his rejection by his own people. By this interpretation of the book, the miraculous appears to have very substantial reason. The alleged improbability of the story is, therefore, equally worthless as a reason for denying that it ever occurred.

The language of Jesus is, however, the greatest difficulty in the way of the modern critics. That He knew the story was believed by the people is clear from the use He makes of it. If they had not believed the story, it would have been impossible for Him to put the great Gospel fact of his resurrection side by side with it. A mere fable or parable would never have sufficed as the basis for such a comparison.

From the fact that the critics affirm this story to be untrue, while Jesus never hinted at such an idea, one of two conclusions must follow:—Either (1) He did not know that the story was only a fable; or (2), if He knew, He did not care to correct the error in the minds of the people. Can we accept either of these? As to the first, let it be remembered that no new facts have come to light which put modern critics in a more favourable position for knowing the truth than was possible then. Their position is reached by looking at the old facts in a new and, some of us think, a very questionable spirit. The attitude of Jesus towards the Old Testament Scripture was one of child-like faith and obedience; can it be affirmed that the same attitude is assumed by those who represent the higher criticism? None of us are willing to concede to them a fuller acquaintance with the truth about Jonah than was possessed by Jesus.

To accept the second conclusion is equally impossible, for this would be granting to the advocates of this theory a greater concern for truth and for the removal of error than Jesus Himself possessed. Recall how carefully He spoke of the infallibility of the Word of God, and distinguished between that and the human traditions with which it had been overlaid, how He brushed aside the false, in order to give greater prominence and emphasis to the truth, and it will be seen that He was not likely to be less concerned to correct the people's error about the story of Jonah, than those who take this task upon themselves today. Our respect for Christian scholarship is not equal to our reverence for the Lord Jesus. We will listen respectfully to all that devout criticism can say, but none of their conclusions do we accept without examining for ourselves the alleged facts upon which they depend. Toward Jesus we maintain an attitude of unquestioning faith. Truth dwelt in Him without any admixture of error, or even of uncertainty. Upon every subject He "speaks with authority," as one who knows, and not as one who makes doubtful guesses. That He made use of this story as though it were true to those who believed it to be true is very strong ground for believing that "this Scripture cannot be broken."

We know that the critics reply to this by saying that our Lord used this story for purposes of illustration and comparison, without thereby affirming its truth. Before accepting this as an explanation of his words, we urge our readers to examine how carefully our Lord repeated every detail of the story. (See Matt. xii. 39-41.) The miracle of the fish, the preaching of Jonah in Nineveh, the repentance of the Ninevites, all are mentioned as facts. Is the explanation satisfactory when applied to these particulars? Even if it will apply so far, there is a still greater difficulty suggested by the reference to the future—"The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it." In what way can such a prediction be spoken concerning Ninevites, who, as critics affirm, never heard Jonah's preaching, never saw in him so wondrous a sign, and never were the subjects of such a wonderful repentance? This is, in our judgment, fatal to the explanation the critics offer, and to the theory on whose behalf it is advanced.

Does not the theory stand condemned as untrue? It rests upon a doubtful inference from the language of the book, and an assumption that the story of the book is improbable. Against this we place: (1) the harmony of the story when the miraculous preservation of Jonah is regarded as the sign which led to the miraculous repentance of Nineveh; (2) the detailed reference of our Lord to the narrative as true, and the comparison He makes between Jonah's preservation and his own resurrection; and, still more, (3) the future rising again of the Ninevites for the condemnation of those who, with clearer light, still remain impenitent. The choice seems to lie between the word of the critics and that of Jesus. To accept their doubtful conclusion is to weaken, if not wholly destroy, faith in the infallibility of Him who is THE TRUTH.

THE INFLUENZA.

What is abroad? A danger great and real,
A danger that we know not how to fight;
"Walking in darkness"—moving stealthily—
It may be on us—ay, this very night.
Where shall we find a rock on which to rest,
A God in whose blest keeping we are blest?

The God we worship, can He calm our fears
And give composure as the danger nears?

Who is our God? Is he a "providence?"
A sort of unknown something—more or less—
So near akin to the Athenians' god,
Who had no power to save, who could not bless.
I fear he is by far too far away,
To be much comfort in this troublous day!

Who is our God? Is he a "church" or sect?
Is that the lord to whom we homage bring?
A lifeless form—or prejudice most strong—
Is that the one from which our life does spring?
He hears not, if we pray him to avert,
Aught that would bring us, or our dear ones hurt.

Who is our God? Is he a puny god?
Or is he that great god, the god of Gold?
Who'd quickly bring physicians—ay, the best
To our relief (if we are sick) we're told.
While death and sickness overspread our land,
We need a God that has a mighty hand.

Who is our God? Is he that skilful god,
The god called Science? that most potent king,
Who has our best men at his beck and call,
Who rules in such high places; is the spring
Of all the wonders of the present day:
Can't this great god drive sickness far away?

Who is our God? That fascinating one,
The god of Pleasure—and of fun and mirth?
Cannot he laugh this pestilence away,
So that we need not yet "return to earth"?
From pain and death, if he deliver now
Thousands of others at his shrine may bow.

Who is our God? Ah! is he "Alcohol,"
That cruel king men are so loyal to?
They'll give up wife and children; yes, e'en life
To serve him faithfully in all they do.
Cannot he save the men who love him best,
Now in the time of this most grievous pest?

This is our God—the Great, the Mighty One,
Ay, the "All Mighty," He who sent his Son
To have compassion on the sick; to raise
The dead to life. He also is the one
Who died to give us life. Who saves us now,
And at whose blessed feet we humbly bow.

Can this God hear? Yes; hear and answer too!
Oh, that the rulers of our Christian land
Would call upon Him with united voice:
Might He not stay the fell destroyer's hand—
Show Himself greater than all these, to be
The One to whom all flesh should bow the knee.

The Revival in Scotland.

(BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

THE EVANGELISTS AT EDINBURGH.

The interest that has been aroused throughout Scotland, especially the southern parts of it, by the visit of Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey, may be said to have culminated in the remarkable gatherings in Edinburgh on Wednesday of last week. They were remarkable for numbers, but still more for their representative character. Never during any previous visit by our American brethren to the Scottish capital have they been greeted by a company at once so large, so influential, and so full of promise. Before the hour of meeting, 11 a.m., not only was the Free Assembly Hall crammed in every nook and cranny, but the crowd overflowed into the adjoining Free High Church, and about filled the spacious structure.

The composition of the audiences was unique, we should think, in the history of British evangelism. All the professors of the Free Church and United Presbyterian Church Colleges in Edinburgh were there, with Principals Rainy and Cairns at their head. The professorial staff of the Edinburgh University was also represented. As for students, we are informed that there were in the audience 170 from the Free Church College, 100 from the United Presbyterian College, and eighty from the Established Church College. It would probably be easier to specify those evangelical ministers of the city and neighbourhood who were not present, than to give a list of those who were. All the denominations were represented. There was a large delegation from Glasgow, both of ministers and laymen, and there were also many leading business men and professional men from both cities. Visitors came from many parts of Scotland—north, south, east, and west, while Ireland and India also had their representatives; and workers from the Edinburgh and Glasgow mission and church organisations were as plentiful as blackberries. It was altogether a memorable gathering as to the texture of it, and formed a weighty tribute to the widespread esteem entertained for our evangelistic brethren. The overflow meeting in the Free High Church was addressed by Dr. ANDREW A. BONAR, Dr. J. STALKER, and Mr. SANKEY.

Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey, who had travelled that morning from Cupar in Fife, entered the hall shortly before eleven, and the proceedings were at once opened with the singing of the well-known:—

> Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove,
> With all thy quickening powers,
> Kindle a flame of sacred love,
> In these cold hearts of ours.

Then prayer was offered by the venerable Principal Cairns, who did not fail to thank God for all the great things He had done in by-gone years by the instrumentality of Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey in their own land and ours, and for what He is now doing by them in Scotland. There was also a touching reference in the aged Principal's prayer to the Royal bereavement, which the nation was then remembering in connection with the funeral of the Duke of Clarence. Mr. Sankey very feelingly sang, "Pray, brethren, pray," with its solemn refrain, "Eternity is drawing nigh." Before leaving for the overflow, Mr. Sankey sang, "Nothing but leaves."

MR. MOODY ON THE HOLY SPIRIT.

An address on this subject was the principal engagement of the hour. After a brief reference to the personality of the Holy Ghost, Mr. Moody remarked there is much ignorance as to the definite work of the Spirit, in the economy of grace. First of all, He convicts men of sin, and chiefly of the sin of unbelief. The work of the preacher is to hold up Christ; the Holy Spirit alone can carry the truth home with convicting power. A man might preach with all the eloquence of Demosthenes, but unless the Holy Ghost is working with him, there will be no conversions, and the whole thing will pass away like the morning cloud.

The Spirit also sheds abroad in the heart the love of God. What we need in these days is to be carried above party feeling and sectarianism. Without love in his heart a man is not fit to do God's work. There are many men in our pulpits who might do just as much good by standing there and ringing a tea-bell as they do by their hard and unlovely preaching. How can the Holy Ghost work where there is quarrelling and backbiting—one minister in a town not being on speaking terms with his fellow-minister? As the voice could not travel without the atmosphere, so the work of God cannot prosper where it has not an atmosphere of love to work in. May God baptize us with his own love. ("Amen," "Amen.") Let the Church of God move into 1 Cor., chap. xiii. If the Christians in Scotland would live there thirty days they might revolutionise the whole country. But the love must be

REAL AND SPONTANEOUS.

The Spirit of God imparts hope. If we are filled with Him we shall not be discouraged and always looking on the dark side of things. If the pulpit loses hope, the same feeling will very soon infect the pews. Why should we be all the time living on past experiences? I meet with so many who are always talking about the wonderful revival there was in 1859! Why, I expect far better times in '92 than there were in '59. Our best times are on before; do not let us go about whining and moaning and finding fault. God has never yet used for great ends a man who was easily discouraged.

Another thing that the Spirit gives is liberty. I would like the brethren here to testify whether or not they have liberty in their meetings. If they have not, there is something lacking; but do not let the Christians imagine that all the fault is in the pulpit. I do not believe that Gabriel himself could preach with much unction and liberty if the congregation are all the time criticising and picking holes in the sermon. Do you suppose there would have been any blessing on the Day of Pentecost if the disciples had been criticising Peter's discourse, instead of holding him up in prayer?

Mr. Moody went on to show how it is the work of the Holy Spirit to testify of Christ. When a minister holds up Christ as a Saviour before the people, the Spirit has then something to work on. If we preach science or metaphysics, and leave out the living Christ, the Spirit has not got a chance to work. As to the dwelling-place of the Holy Spirit, Mr. Moody pointed out that while in the old dispensation the Shekinah took up its abode in the tabernacle and afterwards the temple, now, the bodies of believers are the temple in which God desires and delights to dwell. If we are indwelt by the Spirit, how is it that so many of us are without spiritual power?

POWER FOR SERVICE.

was the topic of some very earnest closing words. Mr. Moody urged that repeated baptisms of the Holy Ghost are necessary for the Church; giving some of the points that were emphasized in our report last week of his Bible reading on the great sermons in the Acts. He said he saw no reason why the Holy Ghost should not fall on that assembly now, and on the city of Edinburgh and on all Scotland? How great is the need! An earnest appeal was made to fathers and mothers to seek the Spirit's power in saving their land from the power of the drink curse, that is destroying so many of the very flower of Scotland's youth. Speaking on the lack of success in winning souls, Mr. Moody illustrated it by an incident of a lady whom he met, and who was led to see the failures in her own life were the cause of her spiritual unfruitfulness, she confessed her shortcomings both to God and to her household; then the Lord used her to the conversion of her husband, of some of her servants, and of a number in her Bible-class. Having graphically described the falling of Elijah's mantle on the young Elisha with a double portion of the old prophet's power, Mr. Moody said that the God of Elijah still lives, and is ready to use all who are willing and fit to be used. Eternity alone could tell the results of that gathering if the power of God were to sweep over all those present. What might be done through those students soon to go forth preaching the Gospel. Why should there not be streams of salvation breaking out in all the parishes from which those ministers came? It appears as if God were very near to us in Scotland; wherever we have gone he seems to have gone before. Surely the time has come for the Church of God to rise, to fall into line, and move forward.

A SOLEMN SEASON OF PRAYER

followed, during which the petitions of the bowed assembly were earnestly led by Principal Rainy, Mr. J. Campbell White, Rev. John Smith, Dr. Marcus Dods, Rev. H. M. Williamson, of Belfast, Mr. Moody, and others. Mr. Moody prayed especially for the young students present, that they might all receive the Unction from the Holy One before they went into the pulpits of the land to preach his Gospel.

After lunch Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey hurried off by the 1.40 train to Dunfermline, where they were due at 3 o'clock, to commence a two days' mission.

AN AFTERNOON CONFERENCE was held in the Free Assembly Hall from 2 to 4.30, the building being quite full, but not so crowded as in the forenoon. Mr. J. CAMPBELL WHITE presided, and a number of well-known ministers and other workers sat on the platform. Before the addresses Professor BLAIKIE offered prayer on behalf of the Royal Family in this time of their bereavement. Miss Darling and Mrs. Barclay sang with great beauty and pathos the hymn, "Some time we'll understand"—the sentiment being very appropriate to the circumstances of the youthful Prince, cut down in the flower of his days, and at the opening of what seemed to be a long and brilliant earthly career.

THE CHAIRMAN

led the way in the conference with a brief address. Our spiritual life, he said, is apt to become shallow, and we need constant reviving. It is one thing for us to possess the Holy Ghost, as every true believer does, and another thing for the Holy Ghost to possess us. We need a fresh anointing of the Spirit that we may be healed of our indolence, our quick tempers, our selfish inclinations, our worldliness, our self-seeking. We seek this blessing not for itself, but that we may spend our strength for God and for others. The more we are filled with the Holy Ghost, the less conscious we shall be of it. We should be humbled before God. We will not need to go about telling other people; it will shine out through our lives, and the blessing will not be intermittent.

referring to the prayer offered for the Royal Family, drew attention to the circumstance that it was "in the year that King Uzziah died" that the Lord appeared to his servant Isaiah, and gave him such a wonderful visitation of grace and power. Might not many of us expect to look back and date the time of our own spirit reviving from the very day on which the nation was mourning the death of its Prince? In that day, we are told, the Lord appeared to his servant and showed him the throne and Him that sat on it. We know what happened. Isaiah was prostrated on the floor of the sanctuary, and was made to feel, "I am undone, because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell among a people of unclean lips." He got a fresh sight of himself, and that is the prelude to all true spiritual revival. Then his iniquities were put away after his mouth had been touched with the live coal from the altar of sacrifice. See what power for service came out of it. When God said, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" the prophet immediately replied, "Lord, send me." That was not presumption on his part; it was the constraining love of Christ going forth to One who had given him a new discovery of himself. If we would have power for service we must have from time to time such a discovery as Isaiah had that day. Then if we know our acceptance through contact with the sacrifice of Christ, our hearts must glow within us, and we cannot but speak to our fellow-men.

Another thought is this: One great means of getting power from God is expectation. Let our expectation be enlarged. God does not seem to be so ready to give us a little as to give us a great deal. "I will show thee great and mighty things that thou knowest not," said God to Jeremiah. Do not let us say that our prayer meetings are cold, and there are few that sympathise with us; God can show us mighty things in answer to our own prayer. Our chairman spoke of the blessing of God coming in rivers and not in rills. Isaiah says "When the poor and needy seek water I the Lord will hear them, and will not forsake them. I will open rivers in the high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys. I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water." What a full answer to the cry of the poor and needy! If we are not getting it, perhaps it is because we are not expecting it.

Another thing to be noticed is that the Lord is so anxious to give to his people, that when they ask a special thing and no more He adds something to it. Solomon asked for wisdom, but the Lord added to that riches and power. In Ephesians we have a prayer by the Apostle to this effect: "that ye may be strengthened with all might by the Spirit, in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith." Ah, what will be driven out when He comes in? "That ye being rooted and grounded in love may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the height and depth and length and breadth, and to know the love of Christ that passeth knowledge." What a great thing to ask! It was not a mere form of prayer; it was real request that was to be answered. But that was not all. "And to be filled with all the fulness of God." Have you ever got that prayer answered? Yet that is not the whole of it. The Apostle adds: "Now unto Him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think . . . unto Him be glory in the Church by Christ Jesus." What an open door is here set before us! Let us ever remember that God's desire is that we should ask these great things and expect them.

Rev. Dr. Stalker, of Glasgow, having given the address, of which a report appears on a preceding page, Rev. Dr. McMurtrie offered prayer.

REV. JOHN SMITH,

of Broughton-place United Presbyterian Church, Edinburgh, said:—This is a day to which, I believe, we shall look back for many days to come. It is a day in which we have incurred very peculiar responsibility. In the most solemn way we have asked God to give us, and we have yielded ourselves to receive his Holy Spirit. Nothing could be more true than what has been said by Dr. Stalker, but another truth has been coming home to my mind, and I wish to ask this question. Did it ever occur to you whose Spirit this is? Have we realised what we are asking? This is the Spirit of Jesus Christ. The first time the Spirit came on Him, He came in the form of a dove and rested upon Christ in his baptism, and from the first time since the fall God in very deed dwelt in man. When Christ went up to heaven He sent forth his Spirit, and we have to-day yielded ourselves up to receive Him. Now as I say this is the Spirit of Christ, and He is going to live in us the Christ-life. He can only abide in us and work through us as we yield in Him to Christ's will. It is here, I believe, that many of us have failed. Again and again we have been conscious that the power of the Holy Ghost has come upon us, and given us unspeakable joy. He has worked through us in some measure, but one day we were brought face to face with some will of Christ that we were not ready to do, and that we failed to do. This is where the responsibility comes in. The Holy Spirit comes to us that He may realise the mind and will and life of Jesus Christ through us. I do not say these things to bring you into bondage; far from that. But we often speak about receiving the Spirit and realising the presence of the Spirit without apprehending fully what it means. He is the burning Holy Spirit that dwelt in the bosom of God, that cannot brook evil, that hates everything opposed to the will of God; the Spirit that throbbed in the manhood of Jesus Christ, that led Him through the gate of self-sacrifice, and that carried Him unshrinkingly along the dread and dolorous way to the cross. And if He is to reign in power in us, it is not that we may get strength to win the admiration of our fellows, to manifest peculiar power, and attract to ourselves peculiar admiration. The Holy Ghost comes in, as I have said, to create the Christ-life within us; to make us willing to be nothing; willing that He may do anything or nothing with us; willing to bear reproach to count the glories and splendours of this world as nothing; willing to be in a minority of one with Him if it please Him; anxious to serve Him much and please Him perfectly.

If we go back with Him to-day into our closets, there will be such a humbling of heart—aye, and more, such a revelation of ourselves to ourselves, as will astonish us. What Dr. Stalker said was absolutely true. We must gather what the Lord gives. But we cannot continuously enjoy the presence of the Holy Ghost without abiding in daily real communion with Christ. He must be our Teacher. Day by day we must see our nothingness in his presence. We must bring to the test of his will all the ambitions and influences—things of which we may have never dreamed before, and that may be opposed to the will. If we do this, there is not one of us here, no matter what we are, whom God cannot use, and will not use, for the glory of his name. I believe one characteristic of the glory of the latter day, for which we long, will be that every talent, every power, every requirement, every capacity will be laid down at the feet of Christ, to be absolutely possessed by Him.

As I speak thus, I think of the potentiality of talent here to-day. Let us all consecrate ourselves to God, that He may work through us. Whatever our distinct aptitude or power may be, He will consecrate and glorify that, and will use it to the glory of his holy name. We hear people speaking of the pressure of modern life. I am afraid that none of us are living at much more than half pressure in the highest and truest sense of the term. I was immensely impressed with Mr. Moody's rapid etching of what God has done through the agency of one man—Mr. Spurgeon. Let us all put our personalities into the hands of the Holy Ghost. Let Christ have his will with us, and who can tell what may be accomplished?

REV. WM. ROSS,

of Cowcaddens, Glasgow, followed with some very stirring words on the induement of the Spirit for life and service. From the typical ceremonies of the priestly code as given in Leviticus xiv., he showed how the believer under the Christian dispensation may, and ought to be, not only cleansed from sin by the atoning blood of Christ, but anointed with the oil of consecration for holy living and service. For the knowledge and the enjoyment of this privilege we must go to the sure promises of God and rest on them. If we, being evil, give good gifts to our children, how much more will our Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him? A brother-minister, explaining the Christian life, said that when a man is converted, it is not so much that he has got new abilities, as that he has got new availabilities. The Spirit of God takes the whole man and woman and lays them on the altar for service. There is in this gathering to-day what would turn Edinburgh upside down within one month if all the talent and power represented here were available. There is wealth enough in the Christian Church to evangelise the whole world within a short space of time, but it is not available, because Christian men and women are not filled with the Holy Ghost. There is power for service here which, if it were at the disposal of the Holy Spirit, would mark this year 1892 as memorable in the history of Scotland.

In closing, Mr. Ross said that when one is filled with the Holy Ghost, two things inevitably follow—a passion for Christ and a passion for souls.

REV. WM. ROBERTSON,

Home Mission Deputy of the Established Church of Scotland, said that we ought to go away from the Conference with these words ringing in our ears: "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." Are we to prove by our witness that what has been spoken to-day is the truth? That is the testing question. Our witness need not be confined to public testimony. We are too technical in our ideas of Christian service. We say that district visiting, tract distributing, or Sabbath-school teaching, are "Christian work." So they are, but they are not by any means the whole of it. Our daily life will furnish tests whether or not the Spirit of God is dwelling within us. We have had a long sermon to-day; the practical application will be that we should go out solemnly resolved that, in the duties of daily life, in the humblest spheres of service, men shall see and feel that we have the Christ-like spirit of which Mr. Smith has spoken, that will make us Christly to all to whom we are sent.

Mr. W. M. Oatts, of the Glasgow Y.M.C.A., having given a brief exhortation as to the need of watching, lest we grieve or resist the working of the Spirit, the profitable Conference was brought to a close.

In the evening, to a great audience in the Assembly Hall, the Gospel was very tellingly preached by Revs. Messrs. Lee, of Nairn; Houston, of Dundee; Grant and Drummond, of Edinburgh.

THE FIFESHIRE MISSION.

During the past week events have moved so rapidly with the evangelists that it is not easy to keep pace with them. Monday found them holding their last meeting in St. Brycedale Free Church, Kirkcaldy. There was a good after-meeting, as well as a large prayer-meeting, in the church. The meetings were followed up on the later evenings of the week by Rev. John Robertson, of Glasgow, who had growing congregations in the Bethelfield United Presbyterian Church, and whose glowing Gospel addresses were greatly enjoyed. Whether or not the mission in Kirkcaldy will have its due effect depends on the local pastors and the heartiness with which they follow up the special effort. Of course this applies to other places, but Kirkcaldy is a large scattered town and the mission was very brief, so that the work of gleaning will be essential if there is to be an adequate harvest.

Early on Tuesday morning Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey were under way for Cupar, the county town. Here they found a refreshing unanimity and heartiness among the local pastors. There were large concourses afternoon and evening—one in the Free and the other in the Established Church. It was market-day, and many friends were present from the country districts. A splendid choir helped Mr. Sankey in the service of song. In the evening there was a good after-meeting, and there is every reason to believe that the flying visit of the evangelists has left its mark in the district.

The forenoon of Wednesday was spent in Edinburgh, and the points of interest about the great meetings in that city are pretty fully recorded in preceding columns. Leaving the capital, the evangelists proceeded to Dunfermline, where the way had been well paved for their advent by large preparatory meetings, in which several Edinburgh friends took a leading part. The two days passed here were full of interest. There were large afternoon meetings, and each evening there were overflows in addition to the regular crowded gathering in the large U.P. Church. The last evening, indeed, there were two overflows. All these extra engagements kept Mr. Sankey very busy, as he is always expected to sing. It is a matter for much thankfulness that in this severe and changeful weather the singing evangelist has been kept in such excellent voice and health as to be able to meet the many calls on him.

Friday was divided between the villages of Lochgelly and Cowdenheath, where largely attended meetings were held, and earnest testimony delivered. The evangelists could only sow the seed of the Kingdom, and leave the local Christians to harrow it in by prayer and further effort. They will be helped in doing this by Mr. S. McCracken, a young Irish worker who has come across the Channel to lend a hand in the movement. He joined Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey at Dunfermline and will help wherever he is directed. It may also be noted here that Mr. J. Ritchie Bell, of Montreal, being on a visit to this country, has for a time joined his friend, Mr. Merton Smith, at Dunfermline, and has been helping there in Gospel song. He has worked in America in that line and is well qualified to be a musical exponent of the sweet story of the Saviour's love and grace. Thus the cohort of active workers is being swelled, and the Gospel chariot is rolling through the land.

has terminated his present mission in Aberdeen, and during this week, with Mr. J. H. Burke as singing companion, he will be busy at Peterhead and Fraserburgh. These places had to be left unvisited by Messrs. Moody and Sankey, but doubtless the friends will rally around Mr. McNeill, and will seek to turn his stay among them to the best advantage. The closing meetings in Aberdeen on Sabbath were in every respect remarkable. In the evening not only was the Music Hall crowded out, but there were two overflow meetings, both of which Mr. McNeill had to address. His visit to Aberdeen, we may be certain, will not be forgotten for many a year to come. Heedless of the prolific criticisms of the unsympathetic and the hyper-refined, he has gone on, consecrating his keen intellect, his powers of satire, and his bubbling humour to the service of his Master, and not scrupling to press into that service the common, everyday speech of the people.

THE MISSION AT PERTH

by Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey, was held on Sabbath and Monday. We must reserve a detailed report to our next issue. Blairgowrie, Crieff, Auchterarder, Dunning, Ladybank, and Auchtermuchty are all to be visited this week. Stirling, Alloa, and Falkirk have next week allotted to them.

The evangelists have received a very cordial invitation to visit the cathedral city of Norwich, some time in the course of their sojourn in England. The requisition is signed by the Mayor and by no less than forty-eight Church of England clergymen and forty-one Nonconformist pastors in and around Norwich. An earnest and hearty call has also come to them to hold Gospel services in the German capital, Berlin.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which, of course, are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, JAN. 31.—COLOSSIANS III.

Our Risen Standing (1-4).—The Apostle goes back to chap. ii. 12, where he referred to the act by which his converts had professed their oneness with Christ and his resurrection; and appealing to them on the ground of their oneness with the Risen Christ he says: "You were raised together with Christ in the Father's purpose, and in your own endorsement, now act worthily of so high a profession, seek the things which belong to the Resurrection Life. Live on the highest side of your nature. Conduct your selves as the children of eternity, the home of Christ."-2. "Set your mind." (R.V.) 3. "Ye died" (R.V.)' A definite, past act. Ah, how secret and safe tha. life must be which is always in touch with Christt and ever God-enclosed! 4. The hidden Christ shall, be unveiled, and, at the same moment, the true nobility of Christian character, here often obscured, shall emerge (Matt. xiii. 43).

Making Dead (5-11).—Mortify, i.e., make dead, (R.V. marg.). We are to make that real in our daily life which is ours in Christ, by standing and position. "Passion and evil desire" (R.V.). Covetousness makes to itself a god of gold. 6. See Eph. v. 6. Note the present tense "cometh," as if it does not wait till the Judgment Day. 9. "The old man" represents the Adam-nature with which we were born, and which revolves around the pivot of self. "The new man" represents the Christ-nature which we put on by profession as Christians, but we have also to adopt its daily behaviour. 10. "Which is being renewed" (R.V.) i.e., day by day the Holy Spirit is working a growing likeness to the image of Jesus, in those who yield themselves to his gracious power. 11. "There cannot be," all national and other distinctions vanish when we are in Christ, and Christ is in us. He is all we need, and in all who believe Christianity is a great leveller. It levels up and down.

The Dress of the Risen Life (12-17).—What a tender and gentle disposition does Christ beget in us! First forbearance in provocation, and then forgiveness to penitence. The Lord's perpetual and immediate forgiveness of us is our only model. 14. Over all as a girdle. 15. The peace of God (of Christ, R.V.) is there, but it is not always allowed to rule. The word "rule" might be rendered arbitrate (R.V. marg.). When there is a controversy within let God's peace turn the scales. 16. "In all wisdom" belongs to "his word." It maketh wise the simple. This is a forgotten use for hymn-singing. 17. Do all, as Christ's representatives, that He would do in your place. "What would Jesus do?"

Home Duties (18-23).—Remark the constantly reiterated word "Lord," and learn how all our life is to be en-sphered in Him, and wrought through Him. Without Him the home-life is an arid waste. Do all that is right in and for Christ. He accepts and rewards all, and will vindicate the right, and avenge those who are wronged.

MONDAY, FEB. 1.—COLOSSIANS IV.

The first verse ought not to be separated from the previous chapter. Masters are but slaves and servants after all.

Intercessory Prayer (2-6).—The secret of a blessed life is to maintain a perpetual chain of petition, woven into all our life, and plentifully intermingled with praise. 3. Prayer should also be definite and specific. How much Paul believed in the power of prayer to open doors for the word (R.V.). 4. It is a great responsibility to make God's hidden things clear. 5. "Buying up the opportunity," i.e., by using each for the blessing of those who are without. 6. What a contrast to the "corrupt talk" of Eph. iv. 29. Salt sparkles, but it is pure and healthy, and preserves against all impure taint.

Tychicus (7-9).—What a graceful note of commendation, full of Christian courtesy! Onesimus was a runaway slave, who had been discovered in Rome, brought to the Apostle Paul, whom he had met long before in his master's house, Philemon's, in the neighbourhood of Colosse. How much in his case was meant by "faithful and beloved brother."

Salutations (10-18).—Mark had caused the contention between Paul and Barnabas, but all that had been long ago forgiven and forgotten, and it is pleasant to find him here (Acts xv. 37). 11. Epaphras, Luke, Demas, were Gentiles. 14. What a sweet title for the historian Luke. 18. The hand was shackled with the bonds, but not the heart. These references remind us of the Book of Life, and of the way in which our Master notices, and will reward with his smile all faithful service.

THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

Thessalonica stood on the sea-board, the centre of a large trade, which it shared with Corinth and Ephesus. There were many Jews there and a synagogue. The account of the visit of the Apostle is given in Acts xvii. 2-9. Probably this Epistle was written whilst he was at Corinth; compare i. 1, iii. 1, with Acts xviii. 1-5. It is the earliest of the Epistles. It is very much more elementary than the later ones, and lays much more stress on the Lord's near advent. It is interesting to trace the development of the Apostle's thought, under the gracious teaching of the Holy Spirit, to the fuller revelations of the Epistles to Rome, Colosse, or Ephesus.

TUESDAY, FEB. 2.—I. THESSALONIANS I.

The Salutation of Affectionate Commendation (1).—Silvanus was Silas (Acts xv. 40). These two had helped the Apostle to found the Church (Acts xvii. 1-14). 3. Here, as so often, note the combination of faith, hope, love. Faith works, love labours, hope patiently waits. 4. Our election is made manifest by the beauty of our character and the consistency of our lives. 5. Too often the Gospel comes only in word; let us who are entrusted with it be more careful about these other three accessories. 6. How few among Christian teachers could urge their people to imitate (R.V.) them, as they imitate Christ. The joy of the Holy Scripture is compatible with much affliction, as a spring of fresh water in a salt sea. 7. Macedonia and Achaia represented all Greece, according to the Roman divisions of the country. 8. This is the way that makes the formal preaching of the word needless, when the life of each professing Christian becomes a sermon. 9. Directly we turn to God we turn from idols. "A living and true God" (R.V.) in opposition to dead and senseless images. 10. The believer stands at the oriel window, looking for the first herald streak of the day. The resurrection of Jesus is the pledge of his return. How beautiful will be the feet of those angels who shall proclaim his advent. "Delivereth," this is the present tense, because the Lord Jesus is ever doing this blessed work of salvation in and for us.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3.—I. THESSALONIANS II.

The Apostle Recalls His Course of Life (1-12).—"Not in vain," i.e., not wanting in efficiency and power. 2. Though they had been only recently so evilly treated, and though even at Thessalonia there was "much conflict" (R.V.), yet God made them bold to speak (Acts xvi. 10, xvii. 5). 3. "Not of error" (R.V.). 4. "Approved of God to be entrusted with the Gospel." Do we sufficiently realise that as Christ is our Trustee, entrusted with God's gifts for us, so we are trustees for the world of men, who will have a serious charge against us if we are unfaithful. God tests us ere He commits to us this precious privilege, and our one aim should be to please Him. This is the question we should put to ourselves at the end of each service, and of each day, "Art Thou pleased?" God is always proving our hearts. 6. They might, as Apostles, have charged their maintenance on their converts, but this they had not done. 7. Connect as R.V., "We were gentle as when a nurse," &c. 8. How easy love makes sacrifice, and there is a sense in which we can give ourselves to those whom we love. 9. "Not to burden any of you" (R.V.). Think of Paul sitting up all night to work at his trade, because his days were so invaded with work for the souls of men. 11. The threefold burden of a faithful ministry—exhortation, comfort, and giving men a solemn charge. 12. How solemn the question suggested, Is my walk worthy of God, who calleth?...(R.V.).

The Apostle Renews his Thanksgivings (13-16).—Compare unceasing thanks with unceasing memory (i. 3). "The word of the message" (R.V.). It is the secret of successful preaching to feel that we are charged with a distinct message to our hearers. Allow God's truth to work in you. 14. Of these churches we have trace in Acts ix. 31. 15. "And drove us out" (R.V.). The men who please God are helpful to others. 16. The measure of sin must be filled before God's judgments descend (Gen. xv. 16). Even then there were signs that punishment was near, and in twenty years from the writing of this it befell them in the Fall of Jerusalem.

The Apostle Records his Hope (17-20).—"For the season of an hour" (R.V. marg.) 18. The opposition of Satan must always be reckoned on in making plans, but when God is for us, his work is carried forward in spite of all that the devil can do to hinder it. 19. Those whom we win for Jesus will make our heaven doubly sweet, and be crowns to cast at the feet of our Master.

THURSDAY, FEB. 4.—I THESSALONIANS III.

These Afflictions (1-5).—"Our brother, the fellow worker with God." What a marvellous title, and yet it is one which may be borne by all faithful servants of God. 2. The Church was passing through a great time of persecution and difficulty. But it was always one of the Apostle's admonitions to his converts that they were to expect these (Acts xiv. 22). No sailor can expect to escape squalls and tempests. Every ocean is swept by them. It is only then that the hardihood and bravery of men is brought into action and manifested. 5. There must be anxiety to every faithful minister as to the way in which those on whom he has expended thought and care act in moments of trial. Only then does he fully know the value of his work.

Comforted (6-13).—"Charity," i.e., love. The good news of their stability was like a cordial to that weary heart. What he suffered was as nothing compared with his joy at their stability. And passing from the servant to the Master, how much joy must be afforded to Him by our standing true amid all the assaults of the devil. 10. As he wrought night and day at his handicraft (ii. 9), so he prayed night and day for them; the stitches put into the canvas cloth were accompanied by the invisible thread of holy desire. This impetuous, loving heart was sorely tempted to cut and carve its way to them, but it quieted itself and asked God to direct. 12. As he was unable to supply any deficiencies, he asked God to undertake their case. Note how in prayer he addresses the Lord Jesus Christ as well as God the Father. Love and blameless holiness are the subjects of his intercession. Each of the chapters of this epistle ends with a reference to the Second Advent.

FRIDAY, FEB. 5.—I THESSALONIANS IV.

Various Precepts for the Living (1-12).—"Finally then" (R.V.). Life should be a walk which pleases God, as much as our ministry should be (ii. 4). It matters little what men say or think, so long as our conscience witnesses to this. 3. In seeking to be wholly sanctified, we have the blessed satisfaction of knowing that we are in a line with the will and purposes of God. 4. Impurity was the sin of the time, and the body is regarded as a vessel to be kept separate from sin for the glory of God and for the Master's use (2 Tim. ii. 21). 5. "Not in the passion of lust." There is a knowledge of how to possess oneself for God which can only be acquired from the Holy Ghost, but which He waits to teach. And He not only teaches, but empowers. 6. "In the matter" (R.V.), i.e., that in the matter of impurity, no one should invade the rights of any other. "The Lord is an avenger in all these things" (R.V.). 7. If God has called us to holiness, surely He will accomplish that to which He has called us. 8. The Holy Spirit is given for the express purpose of possessing our bodies as a pure temple for the indwelling of God (1 Cor. iii. 16; vi. 19). 9. Such love is the direct evidence of Divine teaching. 10. "More and more" is characteristic of this epistle. 11. To be quiet and calm needs to be studied. It was important that these Gentile converts should teach those around, by their quiet application to the tasks of their daily calling, that there was nothing revolutionary in the teachings of Christ, and that those who professed Christianity were most exemplary in the performance of ordinary duties.

Comfort as to the Departed (13-18).—According to the teaching of the Apostle, the believer, having died in Christ, is living on the other side of death; and, therefore, the act in which the spirit passes from the body must have another name found for it, and what could be better than that used of Lazarus by the Lord, "He sleepeth." Ours is not the hopeless sorrow of the materialist, because if Jesus brings with Him the beloved who have passed from us, we shall see and know them again. Where would be the comfort if they only came again, and we did not recognise them? 14. They sleep through Jesus. It is only in connection with Him that death becomes so transformed. Some add these two words to the following clause, and think that the Apostle means that their coming again will be through Jesus. God will bring them again; till then He must have them in his holy keeping, and they are evidently now with Jesus. 15. The indication of a special revelation. "We" intimates his hope that he might be among the happy number. "Shall not take precedence of." 16. "An archangel." Perhaps the world may hear that shout without apprehending its meaning, which will be intelligible only to purged ears (John xii. 29). These words refer to the first resurrection, that of the saints at the beginning of the millennium. The Lord comes into the air to meet his saints and reward them, and to welcome them to the bridal feast, before He descends with them to the earth

SATURDAY, FEB. 6.—I THESSALONIANS V.

Times and Seasons (1-11).—Founded on Matt. xxiv. 42.—How unexpected and painful will that day be, and so far from being heralded by any events, it will befall when the universal cry is "Peace and safety." No escape out of Christ. 4. Ignorance and unbelief benight souls who love darkness rather than light. 5. "Sons of light and sons of the day." God is Light and we partake his nature. 6. We must live with girded loins, standing to feed on the Paschal Lamb, while all our heart is alert to hear the sounding of the trumpet of Exodus. 7. Drunkenness may stand for being steeped in worldly pleasure and indulgence. 8. These are defensive weapons, as if the Christian must constantly expect attack. There is a sense in which our salvation is still a matter of hope, when the work of grace will be completed on body as well as soul. This has yet to be obtained, but we are appointed thereunto. 10. Whether we continue in life or we die, it is possible to live in unbroken union with Jesus as much on earth as they do in heaven, and they who have passed from us as much as we here. We go with Christ to the veil, with Him we pass through it, and we continue with Him on the other side.

Closing Exhortations (12-28).—The Christian attitude is here defined towards teachers, fellow-members, and those who do not keep step with the main body. 14. We are not to leave the wounded and feeble to make what shift they can, but to take them with us in our march. 15. The good of every other person in the Church and out of it must be the golden centre for our aim. 16. God's will for us is a threefold cord of joy, prayer, and thanksgiving. Let us dare to give thanks for things from which we naturally shrink, because so sure that our God is doing the very best for us He can. Why do we wait to see it ere we believe it? Whether we see it or not, it must be so. 19. We grieve the Spirit in ourselves; we may quench Him in others by a spirit of criticism and want of sympathy; in other words, by despising the prophesyings (the addresses) of our fellow-believers. 20. Whilst we are careful not to despise the words of any, yet we are bidden to test them, if they seem at all doubtful, not captiously, but for the safety of ourselves and of others. The child who eats all the berries it finds in the woods will soon poison itself. 21. Store the good in memory and heart, let the wind winnow away the chaff. 22. Not only from evil, but from its appearance and form. 23. Spirit, our God-consciousness; soul, our thought-consciousness; body, our world-consciousness. A Trinity in Unity, like the three parts of Solomon's temple. All meant to be irradiated from the Spirit of God dwelling in the human spirit, as the Shechinah in the most holy place. Blameless here, but not faultless till within the gates of pearl. God can do it, or the Apostle would not have asked it. He will do it, or He would never have excited the desire for it by calling us. 27. What Rome forbids under an anathema, Paul enjoins with an adjuration. [Bengel.]

OBITUARY.

LADY PETO.

Many will hear with regret of the death of Lady Peto, who has not long survived her husband, Sir S. Morton Peto, who, we believe built Bloomsbury Chapel at his own cost. Her loss will be sorely felt by many Christian workers, and especially those serving in St. Giles, to whom she was ever a willing and sympathetic helper. The interest she showed in home mission work was very personal and practical.

MRS. JAMES SPICER.

We regret to record the demise of Mrs. James Spicer, of Woodford, a member of the well-known Congregational family, and a lady well known for her large-hearted philanthropy. Only recently she was appointed president of the ladies' auxiliary of the Metropolitan Essex District of the London Congregational Union, and president of the settlement of women workers at Canning-town. Her age was seventy-eight, and her death is widely mourned.

REV. BREWIN GRANT.

For many years the name of Mr. Grant has been familiar as that of an earnest labourer among the poor; hence his death on Monday morning (25th), at the age of seventy-one, will be widely regretted. In his own parish (St. Paul's, Bethnal-green) he will be mourned and missed by the poor, in whose temporal and spiritual interest he took the deepest concern. His own father was a poor woolworker, near Leicester, and Mr. Brewin Grant worked his way upward by hard, earnest toil and study. He was at one time in the Congregational ministry, but over twenty years ago entered the Church. We need scarcely add he was a thorough-going Evangelical. During the last ten years he had five strokes of paralysis, and consequently has withdrawn largely from active service.

MR. WILLIAM WILLIAMS, OF THE NATIONAL REFUGES.

With deep sorrow we have to record the falling asleep, at the age of seventy-three, of this noble-hearted and able servant of the poor children for Christ's sake. Others were doubtless associated with him in the founding of the original Home, which has now developed into the numerous homes, institutions, and ships grouped under the title National Refuges for Homeless and Destitute Children; but, speaking generally, Mr. Williams may be termed the founder, as it was certainly his intense energy and devotion which was used by God to plant and foster this great work. Thousands who have passed through the various Homes mourn him as one who was to them a true father. He passed away on Friday last (22nd), after a week's illness, at his residence, 191, Uxbridge-road, Shepherd's-bush. His funeral has been fixed for Wednesday (27th) at Abney-park Cemetery. Shortly we hope to give a biographical notice of his life and labours. One who knew him well writes:—"He leaves imperishable evidence of his devoted labours in the noble institutions of which he was founder and director until last year, when he retired from active service. . . . We mourn the loss of an earnest and successful worker among poor children."

A LARGE TRUST.—The local papers state that Mr. David Cobb, who died at Dundee last week, has left £70,000 to be applied to benevolent and charitable institutions. The trustees have sole discretion as to the disposition of the money. The deceased gentleman was a native of Dundee, and always took great interest in the fishing population on the east coast of Scotland. He was never married, and had no near relations. Quite recently £30,000 was left by Mr. Peter Carmichael, and £10,000 by Mr. Thomas H. Cox, both of Dundee, for local charities.

International S. S. Lessons.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, FEB. 7.

THE GRACIOUS CALL.—Isa. lv.

GOLDEN TEXT: Verse 6.

THE former lesson (liii.) dealt with the great Gospel fact of our Lord's atonement, by which a sufficient provision was made for the salvation of all. This lesson gives the universal call to salvation. His work is only effective in those who hear and respond to his call.

1. The first word evidences the earnestness and urgency of the Prophet, and the difficulty of securing the attention of men. The invitation is as wide as language can make it; the only condition demanded is thirst. (See Matt. v. 6; John vii. 37.) A sense of need is our best fitness for the Gospel. Come—the word is repeated three times in this one verse. Gospel blessings cannot be sent to us while we remain away from God; we need to come to Him through Jesus. Sin robs us of everything, because it robs us of God; Christ restores us to everything by restoring us to God. Waters—wine and milk.—Thus the Gospel blessings are described. They are designed to meet our deepest need to quench the soul's thirst, to give it exhilaration and joy, and to nourish and support it. Without money, &c.—The same terms are offered to all. None can purchase because they are rich; none need want because they are poor. Not that the Gospel is "cheap"—judge of its costly nature by chapter liii.; but the terms bring it within the reach of all.

2. Here expostulation enforces the call. Sin is folly; godliness is wisdom. In the world men pay a great price—their money and their labour, and get no satisfying return. The best the world can offer—its pleasure, fame, wealth—leaves the soul's thirst unquenched. Soul delight, &c.—In contrast with the world's vanity here is the inward delight the Gospel gives. As the fish in the sea, the bird in the air, the child in the home; so does the soul find its element in God. 3. Incline your ear as one who desires to shut out other sounds in order to miss nothing of the very important message. Hear God's call like that. It is possible to hear without advantage (Luke viii. 18). We must hear attentively, obediently, and diligently. Live.—Until this call is heard and heeded, the soul is dead (See John v. 24-25). Everlasting covenant.—All who live in Christ are brought in Him into covenant relationship with God, and to a participation in all spiritual blessings (Psa. lxxxix. 2-4).

4. God's unspeakable gift is not the whole sum of Gospel blessings, but the Lord Himself as the embodiment of all (2 Cor. ix. 15; Col. i. 19; ii. 3). Note the threefold office Christ sustains to us. He must be received not only as witness (Rev. i.5); but as leader or prince (R.V., marg.) to rule in us and over us; and as commander to whom we must yield obedience. Full salvation is impossible where He is not fully received. 5. This is either an address to our Lord Himself, or probably to the collective people when they shall thus fully receive Him. Besides our own personal salvation, there is the additional prospect of being made a blessing to others to induce us to respond to his call.

6. Here are three things: our duty, "seek, call"; our opportunity, "He may be found," &c.; and our warning, "while He is near" intimating that the opportunity will soon cease, when it will be vain to seek or to call (Compare Matt. xxv. 11-13; Luke xiii. 24-29). It is a serious thing to trifle with present opportunities. While you have them, use them by earnestly seeking and calling upon God. Eager though God is to save, He saves none who do not express their want of salvation. 7. There could be no better definition of repentance than this. It consists in turning from not ways only, but thoughts. Without turning to God there may be reformation, but not repentance (See 1 Thess. i. 9). God's way and God's thoughts must be accepted in place of our own. For mercy with a conscious need of pardon, and a confident expectation of receiving it. God's promise pledges Him to it "abundantly," as though He would meet the need of the worst sinners. His grace overtops our highest sins.

8-9. But how can such a gracious pardon be offered? If we limit God by what we see exemplified in men, we shall never be able to expect such mercy from Him. God's way of dealing with us is the expression of his thoughts towards us. And as his thoughts are infinitely above ours, so is the way of his mercy beyond human understanding. To forgive so many offences, attended by so many aggravating circumstances: to do it not only freely, but eagerly; to provide an atonement of such a character to form the righteous basis for the pardon; this is God-like (Psa. ciii. 11).

10-11. Nature is made to illustrate grace. As God gives from heaven the influences which make the earth fertile, so shall his word prosper. Every message of his has a purpose, and will not fail to accomplish it. Rejected by some, it is accepted by others; and it is a solemn thought that even in those who reject it the Divine purpose is not frustrated (See 2 Cor. ii. 15-16).

12. The acceptance of the Gospel evidences itself in the life. Joy and peace become constant companions of the man who believes; and even nature itself enters into sympathy with his joy. A man, after his conversion, describing a road along which he passed every morning, said, "Either the road was new, or he was; for it was never so beautiful before" (2 Cor. v. 17).

13. Does not this describe the change of character that also follows? That which was thorn-like or briar-like in us gives place to that which is attractive and Christ-like (Gal. v. 22). The name of the Lord is glorified by such changes as these.

Evangelistic Notes.

Polesworth.—Rev. C. Duxbury has just concluded a successful mission in this town, with satisfactory tokens of blessing.

Rev. E. Payson Hammond is in the midst of a good work at Jersey City, and many profess to have yielded themselves to the Saviour.

Ancoats.—A fortnight's special mission is being held in this busy working suburb of Manchester by the Evangelistic Committee of the Presbytery.

Mr. George Hefford, of the Evangelisation Society, has just concluded an eighteen days' mission in Jubilee Hall, Victoria-park, E., with encouraging results.

Rev. W. Hay M. H. Aitken is now conducting a special mission in the Victoria Hall, Sunderland, to continue until February 8. Prayer is desired for much blessing.

Cambridge.—An interesting mission has just been held in the town churches; and although certain difficulties have been felt yet there are indications of genuine result.

Northenden.—Mr. Thomas Elliot has been evangelising in the Gospel Mission Hall, Northenden, for a fortnight, and many profess to have been brought to a knowledge of the truth.

Mr. William Day is continuing the special Sunday-evening services in the Good Duke Humphrey, East Greenwich. The hall, which seats eight hundred, has been well-filled, and God has given blessing.

Buxton.—A week's mission has been conducted by Mr. W. Forbes at the Congregational Church, Buxton. Meetings have been held every evening, Rev. R. Rew, pastor of the church, assisting. The result is very cheering.

Winchester.—A fortnight's mission has just been conducted at the Soldiers' Home, Winchester, by Mrs. Tanser Dawson, the converted gipsy. Many testified to having found the Saviour, both at the meetings in the Home and at the branch stations.

Ireland.—A series of Gospel services has just been held in Agnes-street Methodist Church, Belfast, by Rev. Jas. Stewart, Methodist Conference evangelist, and a similar series has been held at Ballinful, co. Sligo, by Revs. W. A. Bracken and John Linahan.

Shipley.—A successful mission is being conducted here by Mrs. Horton and Miss Parker. Some seven hundred women were present at the Sunday afternoon service for "Women Only." At the Bible readings and night meetings deep interest is shown and several during the past week have decided for Christ.

Paignton.—A mission was held by the Young Men's Christian Association from Sunday, 16th, to Friday, 22nd. Gospel addresses were delivered by Messrs. W. H. Roberts and Chas. Wood, of Plymouth. The attendance throughout was most encouraging. The word was with power, and many were led to decision for Christ.

Mr. Benson, the evangelist, of Christ Church (Rev. Newman Hall's), commenced his 17th year of missioning with a free tea to 150 poor people, held in one of the schoolrooms belonging to Christ Church. Some old helpers in the division came to give a cheering word; while some brought to God in the Mission and now labouring in other fields gave happy reminiscences of past work.

Rev. T. Waugh has just held a mission at Spalding, of which a correspondent writes: All the services have been well attended, and great power has accompanied the Word. One delightful feature has been the large proportion of people well advanced in years who have given themselves to the Lord. Men and their wives have sought mercy, and children and their parents have been saved. The meetings for "men only" and "women only" were seasons never to be forgotten.

Mr. Charles Inglis has been holding a mission in Enderby, Leicestershire (January 5 to 12), and we have great cause for thankfulness in the blessing which has resulted. The meetings were held in the National Schools, and the attendance throughout was good; the last two nights the building being quite full. The good seed has been sown for some time in P.S.A. classes, mothers' meetings, and boys and girls' classes, and the Mission proved a harvest time, persons from all these classes coming forward to decide for Christ. On the 14th Rev. F. B. Meyer, who was paying a visit to some friends in the village, gave a very helpful address to a crowded audience. At the close he asked the men to remain behind, and some seventy to eighty stayed whilst he spoke straight and loving words on being "All for Jesus," and the greater part stood up in response to his appeal to declare their resolve to be out and out. Letters to the Editor.

RELIGIOUS CONDITION OF THE PEOPLE.

DEAR SIR,—While quite agreeing with Dr. Elder Cumming as to the spirit of the age being one of apostasy, falling away from all that is of God, irreverence for the Word of God, and infidelity making rapid strides, it seems to me that several of his statements are very misleading, and the whole tone of his article savours of a want of drawing a clear line between the saved and the unsaved. Take one statement: "Multitudes of the people everywhere in our country have fallen away from the Church of Christ," and, again, he speaks of seeking to bring the nation back to the feet of Christ, as being the great Christian problem of the day. Surely Dr. Cumming knows that the nation as such has never been at the feet of Christ. Undoubtedly there has been, and still will be, a great falling away, but not from Christ, rather from a mere profession, a form in which there is no power. The Scriptures are plain and clear on the question of eternal life. The Master said, "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish." Falling away there may be from an empty profession, and falling away from steadfastness and communion on the part of the believer in Christ, but to fall away from salvation—impossible. The Christian problem, rather, ought to be how to reach the unconverted with the Gospel, and if Christian ministers would preach the simple Gospel instead of preaching sermons in which there is but little of Christ, and not much said about the new birth, many more would come to hear, and many that would come would be brought to Christ.—Yours in Christ,

Stromness, Orkney Isles. WM. S. KING.

SIR,—Your correspondent "One of the Lapsed Multitude" describes merely a state of our churches which has been foretold as characteristic of these later times—men lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, having the form of godliness but denying the power thereof. The question seems to be, Is the religious teaching of the day answerable for this state of things? I answer, Yes. People dare to love pleasure more than God, because they have not the fear of God.

The necessity, nay, even the rightfulness, of this fear is utterly denied by the teaching of the present day. Now, the Bible's teaching is throughout that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. I will quote only from the New Testament, "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ." "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." "Fear God, yea, fear Him who can cast both body and soul into hell." "To those among you who fear God is the word of this salvation sent." "Servants obey your masters, fearing the Lord." "Be not high-minded, but fear." "His mercy is on them that fear Him." "Let us fear, lest a promise being made we may fall short of it." I quote now from the very last book in the New Testament, the Revelation: "The time is come to give their reward to them that fear thy name." "An angel having the eternal Gospel to proclaim, saith with a loud voice, Fear God and give Him glory."

It is true that St. John says:—"He that feareth is not made perfect in love;" but this is merely saying that love is the crowning of the edifice of a religion built on the fear of God. Let him who is, in his utter unworldliness and consecration of life, perfect in the love of God, dispense with the need of the fear of Him; but let him be assured that God will adjudge hell to all those who have neither the fear nor such love. This is unpalatable teaching, but it is for lack of such teaching that the religious condition of the people is what it is.—Yours faithfully,

W. M.

SIR,—I have read with interest the two papers by Dr. Elder Cumming on the "Religious Condition of the People." The hindrances to the spread of vital godliness which he mentions, are such as might have been anticipated, and there is no room for taking exception to any of them. Doubtless intemperance, the neglect of all church services, the sin of Sabbath breaking, the prevalent spirit of scepticism and unbelief, the revolt against authority of every kind, our national sins, as the opium traffic, &c., &c., and the latitudinarianism that manifests itself in the significant tolerance of Popery in our midst, are all most influential in maintaining that indifference to the claims of religion which all true Christians deplore.

But Dr. Cumming's conclusions are painfully disappointing, and there is nothing in them to encourage anything like hopeful effort in the future.

He gives three alternatives—(1) a wonderful revival by God's Spirit of true and vital Christianity, as in the earliest days of the Church, among all classes; (2) The abandonment of our country by God to the total overthrow of Christianity. "Our light," he says, "may go out; our candlestick may be removed elsewhere; and superstition and darkness and the tyranny of evil may reign in these lands again"; (3) The third alternative is the end of the present dispensation, as anticipated by those who hold the popular idea of the "second coming" of Christ.

As to the first of these alternatives, it is beyond our control, and we must not wait for it, much as we may desire it, while there remains so much to be done that is quite within the range of human possibility.

As to the second, the record of the past should forbid us to entertain the idea for a moment. England, with all her faults, has hitherto led the van in the grand march of Christian civilisation and progress, and the vantage ground now reached affords a most promising starting point for further action. There is a political power for good, and a healthy public opinion in this country superior to those of any other time. The overthrow of slavery and the measure of religious freedom enjoyed in this land, with a hundred other triumphs of Christian influence over godless indifference or cruel selfishness, achieved with far less favourable conditions, warrant our hoping great things in the near future; and everything is to be regretted that would in the slightest degree damp the ardour or lessen the confidence of Christians in immediate effort put forth in humble reliance on the co-operation of the good providence of God.

Among the many hindrances to vital godliness named by Dr. Cumming, two call for special notice. The one is intemperance and its grand national source and provocative, the liquor traffic. So much of the worst depravity which we deplore is the direct result of this traffic, and so great is its effect in placing large sections of the population quite beyond the ameliorating and elevating influence of the Gospel, that it is simply impossible to estimate the impulse that will be given to true Christian progress when once that gigantic incubus—and it is only a question of time—the accursed traffic, is doomed; and those who wish well to the cause of God and humanity cannot aid that cause more effectually than by the most vigorous and energetic effort to bring the power of the law to bear on that evil. Local prohibition is now a part of the programme of the Liberal Party—and a very few years will doubtless see that step of the way fairly made—and in due time all the rest will follow. In Maine the principle has been in successful operation for more than forty years, and in six or seven other States of the Union it has been in operation long enough to prove its practical utility as a grand means of lessening pauperism, vice, and crime, and preparing the people for every kind of elevating influence.

The other subject to which I wish to refer is the insidious spread of Popery. I have long lamented, like Dr. Cumming, the strange indifferentism and latitudinarianism of Christians of all denominations in relation to this evil. No stretch of Christian charity can require our being reconciled to that utterly false and soul-destroying misrepresentation of Christian truth. Its votaries make no secret of their design upon the Protestantism of England; their methods are utterly unscrupulous, and their secret emissaries are everywhere. What is wanted is a most determined and vigorous movement to counteract it. For this purpose it seems to me that the best possible method is to inundate the country most persistently and extensively with well-written, pithy tracts, fully exposing the delusions of Rome and the pretensions and machinations of her priests. Public lectures are of little use, for no sooner has the lecturer succeeded in rousing public attention, than he is silenced by mob law, instigated by the priests, as was poor Murphy at Whitehaven, some years ago. But tracts can be scattered and given away under all kinds of circumstances—and, like the Oxford Tract movement, they may accomplish equally great results, but in a better cause. What I long to see is an organisation for this very purpose, to be styled, say, the Anti-Ritualistic League, which should raise funds to be devoted to this special object, and deluge the country with judiciously-written tracts, prepared expressly for the occasion. If this letter should be read by any who are similarly minded with myself, I should be glad to hear from them with a view to co-operation for this most desirable end.—I am, yours truly, SAMUEL FOTHERGILL.

Pierremont-crescent, Darlington.

ELLIOTT'S ROW, SOUTHWARK.—For some two years past, a London City Missionary has been labouring in this populous district (situate near the Elephant and Castle). But the Mission Room used for the purpose of the work has been found quite unsuitable both as to situation and accommodation, it being situated outside the district. A local committee has been lately organised, and have acquired suitable premises on which a sum of £50 is required to be expended in furnishing, &c., before they can be suitably employed for the purpose. Any willing to help should communicate with the hon. sec., Mr. A. E. Compton, 8, Richmond-street, St. George's-road, S.E.

MR. RICHARD WEAVER.—Miss McLean, who has spent a few days in Edinburgh helping Mr. Weaver in his mission in the Free McCrie Roxburgh Church, writes:—"I have been struck with the frequency of the requests for prayer for children sent in from fathers, mothers, and others who, twenty or thirty years ago, were brought to Christ through 'Richard Weaver;' indeed, it has been quite cheering to find in all directions those who are exclaiming in shops, at dining-tables, in the streets, at the sight of the placard announcing his meetings, and by letters, that Mr. Weaver led them, or some relative, to Christ some years ago. This, in addition to well-sustained nightly meetings in the Free Roxburgh Church, as well as very decided cases in the inquiry room every night, has made his present visit to Edinburgh as much a reaping as a sowing time of what is called 'the good old-fashioned Gospel.'"

The Book World.

DISLOYAL, by Sydney Watson, a purposeful story, relates the sad experiences of a Christian young woman who became the wife of an unbeliever. (2s. 6d. Drummond's Tract Depot, Stirling.)

JESUS IN THE OFFERINGS, by Pastor H. E. Stone, is a little work which is likely to help many Bible readers who cannot consult exhaustive treatises on Leviticus. Those who have studied detailed expositions will find this outline, which is illustrated by lithography, suggestive in a high degree. (Ernest Nister, 24, St. Bride-street, E.C.)

FAMILY PRAYERS. By the late John Henry Gurney. Edited by his son, J. H. G. (Simpkin.) Here are a hundred petitions, which were not written for publication. They are printed in the hope that they may be of service to Christian people. This they should prove to all who are of devout mind, for a beautiful simplicity runs through every prayer.

THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE LEAGUE'S ANNUAL FOR 1892 is as useful as its excellent predecessors, thanks to the able editorial oversight of Mr. Robert Rae. There is a portrait of Canon Fleming, and the usual budget of facts and figures on the drink question and the temperance reform, from the pens of well-known writers. (1s. 6d. National Temperance Publication Depot.)

THE LOVE OF CHRIST: His to Us—Ours to Him. By Rev. J. P. Hobson, M.A. (Religious Tract Society.) Sound, solid, and spiritual. While popular writers catch vain ears by lauding benevolence and philanthropy as proofs of human progress, this author puts first things in their proper place. First the sun of Christ's free love to sinners, then the responsive rays that love can kindle; first the fountain, then the stream it supplies. The little book is a jewel of Christian thought.

BRIGHTER ENGLAND: INCIDENTS ON THE WAY TO IT. By Thomas Whittaker, Scarborough (3s. 6d. Hodder and Stoughton). When Thomas Whittaker speaks, Total Abstainers are always ready to listen, and in this volume they will learn much that is of great interest of the early days of the Temperance Movement. Mr. Whittaker was a Temperance speaker before the days of railways, and the way up to the "Brighter England" of the present day forms a very interesting narrative.

THE WORD OPENED; or, Materials for Bible Readings. By Rev. Evan H. Hopkins. Second series. (1s. 6d. Marshall Bros.) We welcome another volume of suggestive outlines from the pen of Mr. Hopkins. The readings are thirty in number, and the "materials" include comments and illustrations gathered from a wide range of literature. The whole relate to fundamental truth, so that evangelists and preachers are likely to find the book, with its blank pages for personal notes, of real service in their work.

TALKS WITH MEN, WOMEN, AND CHILDREN. In a goodly volume of over 600 pages, Rev. David Davies, minister of Holland-road Baptist Church, Hove, Brighton, has issued the third series of his admirable talks. The addresses to children effectively rehearse Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress"; the sermons cover a wide range of teaching vigorously expressed, and the words to teachers are uniformly hearty and suggestive. An additional feature is a series of thoughtful "Studies for the Pulpit." Many a Christian worker will find help and inspiration in these pages, which convey evangelical doctrine and practical counsels for daily life. (6s. 6d. Alexander and Shepheard.)

THE NEWLY RECOVERED APOLOGY OF ARISTIDES: its Doctrine and Ethics, with Extracts from the Translation by Professor J. Rendel Harris. 2s. 6d. Hodder and Stoughton. Mrs. Harris has admirably introduced ordinary English readers to the long-lost Apology, which her husband unearthed two years ago in the Convent of St. Catherine, on Mount Sinai. The story of the recovery is deeply interesting, and the extracts from the Athenian philosopher's statement of the Christian doctrine and manner of life show how beautifully the truth was held and lived by converts from barbarism, under circumstances of peculiar stress and trial, in the second century of our era.

A YOUNG HEART OF OAK: Memories of Harry Stuart Boldero, Lieutenant, R.N. (5s. Hodder and Stoughton.) Dean Spence writes a preface to this volume, which is appropriately dedicated to Miss Agnes Weston, "servant of God and friend of sailors." The opening chapters tell of worthy parentage and exemplary training; and after an account of life on board H.M.S. Britannia and in South Africa, we have a record of the youthful officer's conversion to God. Whether studying at Greenwich, or on duty in British ports, in the Mediterranean, off Canada, or in the West Indies, Mr. Boldero bore a grand testimony for Christ by word and deed. His letters and his mother's diary will have a special charm for those who know the family and their (in the highest sense) influential connections and friends at home and abroad. The pages will impress the general reader with the beautiful character of "a young heart of oak," who served his country in the fear of God, showing at once a righteous patriotism and a manly piety, which secured for him the respect of superiors and inferiors in the naval service.

Personalia.

Mr. Eugene Stock still remains indisposed at Nice.

Mr. A. H. Baynes has been ill for some days at Bournemouth.

Sir Arthur S. Blackwood has been laid aside by an attack of the influenza.

Canon Barlow has been elected to the Bishopric of North Queensland in succession to Dr. Stanton.

Earl Compton has, we hear, become the President of the Silver Star Society, noticed in a recent issue.

Mr. Shuldham Henry, owing to an attack of influenza, will be unable to continue his work this month at St. George's Hall.

Pastor Chiniquy.—From a private letter we learn that another attempt has been made on the life of this veteran servant of Christ.

Mr. W. R. Lane, we rejoice to learn, is progressing towards recovery, but it will probably be some time before he can resume preaching.

Dr. Pierson, we regret to say, was again unable to preach last Lord's Day. His place was supplied at the Metropolitan Tabernacle by Rev. Robert Morgan.

Professor Godet, of Neuchatel, will, we hear, shortly publish what he regards as his most important work—an Introduction to the books of the New Testament.

The Bishop of Liverpool was too unwell to attend the memorial service in the Cathedral on Wednesday week. His indisposition is, it is hoped, but temporary.

Mr. Martin Hope Sutton, we regret to learn, has been very ill during the last ten days with influenza and bronchial affection. He is, however, rather better now, though still suffering greatly.

Mr. E. P. Telford has been holding meetings in Chelsea, Mass., U. S.A., and was engaged to hold three weeks' meetings in Dr. O. A. Brown's church, West 18th Street, New York, from January 16, for which he asks the prayers of our readers.

Rev. W. Adamson, Vicar of Old Ford, was taken suddenly ill a week ago whilst performing the marriage ceremony. We understand that he is progressing, though not so favourably as his family would wish. His illness is attributed to overwork and mental strain.

Rev. John McLean, who has been labouring for twelve years most successfully among the Indians of the North-west Territory, Canada, is now on a visit to this country, seeking to stir interest in the work. He is anxious to give addresses or lectures on the Canadian Indians. Letters may be addressed to him, 40, Rectory-place, Woolwich, S.E.

Rev. John Thomas, D.D., of Liverpool, an ex-chairman of the Congregational Union, was lecturing last week in Anglesea. While speaking, he complained of dizziness and had to desist from his task. After a hymn had been sung he attempted to complete the lecture, but failed in the effort, and the audience dispersed. He has since returned to Liverpool, and is constantly attended by two medical men, the hopes of his recovery being regarded as slight.

Mr. C. H. Spurgeon has had a slight relapse. His letter from Mentone, dated January 20, and read at the Metropolitan Tabernacle on Sunday, said:—"The sun shines at length, and now I hope to get on. I have not been up to the mark the last few days, and have a little gout in the right hand, which makes it hard to write." The letter was followed on Saturday by the following telegram:—"Mentone, Saturday, 2.17 p.m., Jan. 23.—Pastor been very ill. Cannot write. Kept his bed three days. Decided improvement to-day. Pray earnestly."—HARRALD.

General Booth, who left Bombay on Saturday, is expected to arrive at Southampton on Friday, Feb. 12. He will be met by a fleet of ten steamers, with 4500 soldiers on board, who will accompany him ashore, and partake of luncheon in the Drill Hall. On the Saturday the General will be met by ten thousand soldiers in Hyde-park, where a demonstration will take place. On the Monday a great banquet for ten thousand persons will be served in the Agricultural Hall, and on Tuesday and Wednesday the General will deliver addresses on his Colonial tour in Exeter Hall.

Dowager Lady Cavan.—Misled by the omission from "Reuter's" telegram of the word "Dowager," we gave in our obituary last week particulars which apply to the present Lady Cavan, and not, as they ought to have done, to the widow of the late Earl of Cavan, so well known and warmly loved amongst Christians. A lady writes: "She had gone to spend the winter with her second son, the Hon. O. H. Lambart, who resides in Ottawa, where her grandson, Viscount Kilcoursie, is also at present. She was the daughter of the first Lord Hatherton. Her loss will be deeply felt and will cause mourning among many."

Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D., celebrated on January 10 his seventieth birthday by preaching to a crowded congregation in his old church. After a stirring sermon he concluded by saying that in his life he had received between four thousand and five thousand persons into church membership. His had been a very joyful ministry. He had never in his seventy years spent a Sabbath day in bed, and had only stayed away from church three or four Sundays, and then by the advice of his physician. Forty-five years of his life he had been in the ministry, thirty of which as pastor of the church on Lafayette-avenue. The past year had been a very happy one to him, in preaching around—at Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Poughkeepsie and other large cities. He believed he could do the best work of his life in preaching at large.

Temperance Notes.

THE London Temperance Hospital has treated upwards of 40,000 patients without alcohol.

Mr. George Blaiklock, the Temperance advocate, is going to Eastern South Africa for three months to labour in the cause.

The East London Women's Christian Temperance Union held last week a conversazione and exhibition in aid of the police-court missionary work.

Two lady workers in the East End (Wesleyan) Mission held, on Wednesday last, a most interesting total abstinence meeting in the Archway-road Chapel, Holloway.

The National Temperance League held, on Tuesday evening (19th), a great abstinence meeting, in the Polytechnic, Regent-street, addressed by Rev. Canon Fleming and Mr. William Noble.

The British Women's Temperance Association entertained, on Sunday week, 300 show people connected with the World's Fair. The meeting closed with Temperance and Gospel addresses.

The Mayor of Burnley invited, the other evening, guests of all denominations to a social réunion. No intoxicants were provided, but instead, he handed over fifty guineas to the local hospital.

An interesting debate on the question, "Is Teetotalism sound Scripturally and Physiologically?" took place at Mildmay-park the other evening, between Dr. Mortimer Granville and Mr. Offen.

After forty years' study of the Temperance question, ex-Bailie Lewis of Edinburgh, has arrived at the conclusion that until they demanded prohibition there was no deliverance from the evil of drink.

It is believed that more than 200,000 children make a living in the streets, and the majority of them support idle and drunken parents. What a destroyer of the first instincts of humanity is strong drink!

The Union Signal states that great anxiety has been caused by the report of Miss Frances Willard's sickness. It is authorised to say that while she is confined to her room, no serious consequences are apprehended.

The Earl of Meath says that recent legislation has practically closed public-houses in the rural districts of Norway, and greatly reduced their number in the towns. As a result, there are no men or women to be seen in rags, no drunkards, no brawlers, no beggars, no taverns.

Within the province of Canterbury there are upwards of one thousand parishes in which there is neither public-house nor beershop, and where in consequence of the absence of these, the intelligence, morality, and comfort of the people are such as friends of Temperance would anticipate.

Writing in The New Review on "How Intemperance has been Successfully Combated," the Duchess of Rutland says: "Would that every hamlet in our land possessed a public-house without the drink, open to all, with no rules or regulations; would that a village-hall, a reading room, and a Temperance Society existed even in the smallest village!"

Rev. G. A. Bennetts said last week, speaking in Holloway, that "If the Christian people of this country had only brought home to their imagination all the awful results accruing from drink, the whole Church would rise up in antagonism against it. There were some who shut themselves up in the comfortable seclusion of middle-class homes, and fondly imagined that because they did not know of all the evils intemperance was working they were not responsible, but he would impress upon such there was an ignorance which was a guilty ignorance, and they would not be exonerated in that way."

Maurice, Landgrave of Hesse was the founder of a temperance society towards the end of the fifteenth century, under the title of "The Order of Temperance." Several princes and lords became members of this association, the singular statutes of which are still in existence, and show the light in which temperance was held in those days. Each member entered into a formal engagement never to get drunk, and to this end promised he would never drink more than seven glasses of wine, of a certain fixed measure, at any one meal. He was authorised to take two solid meals in the twenty-four hours, and consequently might drink fourteen glasses of wine a day, independently of a moderate quantity of beer and other liquors.

KENNINGTON CITY MISSION-HALL.—This "Hall" is simply the Kennington Sunday-school (established eighty-five years) in White Hart-square, White Hart-street, Lower Kennington-lane. The present missionary, Mr. J. Denchfield, was placed in the district in February last, and he has not been without encouragement in his work. A ten days' mission was recently held, and attended with real success. The secretary and treasurer of the branch is Miss J. Burrow, 119, Vassal-road, Brixton, S.W.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

On Wednesday in last week a new mission church was opened in the Lillie-road, Fulham.

A ten days' church mission in the parishes of Christ Church, Monks Coppenhall, and St. Paul's and St. Barnabas's, Crewe, closed on Tuesday last.

The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, in a pastoral just issued, dwells specially on Old Testament Criticism—the question of the day—and church discipline.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has been invited to attend the Provincial Synod in Canada in the autumn, when the consolidation of the Church in British America will be discussed.

The village of Cheriton, Kent, has just benefited by an order made in Chancery to the extent of £10,000, which sum was left some years ago by a lady for the building and endowment of a church in that parish.

The Bishop of Wakefield and Rev. G. S. Reaney have arranged to deliver addresses in Manchester Cathedral on behalf of the Manchester Branch of the Christian Evidence Society. The Bishop's subject will be, "The Knowledge of God," Mr. Reaney addressing himself to "If not Christ—What?"

The Church of England Scripture Readers' Association makes grants for East London (including Stratford and Plaistow) for thirty-three Readers, who labour—and labour "most acceptably," the Bishop of Bedford says—amongst an aggregate population of about 300,000; while South London receives aid for forty-four Readers, the total number of the people amongst whom they work being about 380,000.

BAPTIST.

Rev. R. E. Gammon, who has been home from Trinidad for a brief rest, left Southampton last Wednesday on his return to work.

Special meetings were announced for Tuesday (26th) at Regent's-park Chapel. Amongst the speakers are Dr. Pierson and Rev. F. C. Spurr.

A series of special meetings were held last week in the chapel, Kingston-on-Thames, by Pastor E. H. Brown, with, it is believed, abiding issue.

Rev. A. Holborn, M.A., who has been pastor of College Chapel, Bradford, since 1877, announced on Sunday week his intended resignation in consequence of ill-health.

The work, which for some years has been carried on at Freshfield Hall by Mr. and Mrs. Radcliffe, has been transferred to the care of the Pioneer Mission.

General Sir Robert Phayre conducted the services in the Baptist Chapel, Kidderminster, on Sunday week, and lectured on the Monday evening on "Practical Christianity."

During the year eighteen members of Rochester Bible-class have been converted, nine have been baptized, eight have joined the church, and four have become Sunday-school teachers.

On Sunday, at the Baptist Chapel, Polesworth, a successful seven days' evangelistic mission, conducted by Rev. C. Duxbury, was brought to a close. The interest was well sustained, and the results so far satisfactory.

On Sunday last Mr. Henry Varley received at the West London Tabernacle a very hearty welcome. The large building was crowded, and the deepest interest prevailed. In the after-meeting, to which hundreds remained, twenty professed to yield themselves to God.

Rev. S. G. Green, D.D., is expected to preside at the Mission House prayer-meeting this day (Thursday, 28th), and next week Dr. Pierson. It is gratifying to know that representatives of all the great Evangelical societies are showing interest in these special meetings for united prayer in the centenary year.

On Sunday week, instead of the ordinary evening service a missionary meeting was held at Mare-street, Hackney, when addresses were given by Rev. A. G. Jones, missionary from China, and Rev. William Hill, formerly missionary in Orissa, India. Mr. Jones gave a graphic account of his labours amongst the Chinese, and in spite of the present riots, &c., spoke very hopefully of the rapid progress of Christianity in that country. Mr. Hill drew a vivid picture of his work in Orissa, giving several instances of the triumph of Christianity over idolatry.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Mission-rooms in St. George's-street, Bolton, have been opened by St. George's-road Church.

Rev. W. A. Meaton has just concluded an eight days' mission in Zion Chapel, Bristol, with satisfactory results.

A fire, originating with the heating apparatus, has caused damage to the amount of £110 in the chapel at Worksop.

The fourth anniversary of the Rev. Henry Simon's ministry at Harecourt Chapel, Canonbury, was celebrated on Tuesday in last week.

The roof of Bedford Church, Charrington-street, N.W., was so much damaged during the storms of last month as to involve an expenditure of at least fifty pounds in repairs.

Two united services were held on Sunday week in Sowerby Bridge Town Hall, Yorkshire, Both clergymen of the Established Church and Nonconformist ministers took part.

A new mission chapel has been erected at Wilmington, in connection with Pevensey-road Church, Eastbourne (Rev. George Thompson), as an outcome of cottage meetings held in the village.

After a week of prayer-meetings, a series of special evening services were held last week at Holywell Green Church, near Halifax, last week. The addresses were given by various ministers of the denomination in the district, and the services were well attended.

Mrs. Bosworth, from Stepney, assisted at the anniversary services of Harrow Green Congregational Church last Sunday, and as a result of her prayer and pleadings the two front seats of the church were filled with enquiring souls.

METHODIST.

It is proposed that a Local Preachers' Union, for mutual help and counsel, be formed in London.

Special services have been conducted at Brigg (Ashby) by Miss Brewster, with tokens of real work.

A fresh mission effort is in full operation in Oakham, and new premises have just been opened by Rev. Thomas Champness.

Some earnest ladies in Leeds conduct a most useful Work room Mission, holding services in many shops where girls are employed.

A series of mid-day services, conducted by Rev. W. L.

Write for samples of Frazer's Sulphur Tablets, naming The Christian, and they will be sent you gratis and post free. Frazer's Sulphur Tablets are the pleasantest and most efficacious of all spring medicines. They are invaluable in the treatment of all Blood and Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Eczema, &c. They are specially indicated for children, being alike safe, pleasant, and efficacious. As a remedy for women's complaints they are unequalled. They are preventive of chills, colds, rheumatism, and constipation, and are of great service in the treatment of these complaints. They are the best of all blood purifiers, and ward off influenza and infectious complaints.

Those who desire a good skin and complexion, clear, healthy, and free from blemish, are especially recommended to use Frazer's Sulphur Tablets internally and Frazer's Sulphur Soap externally. The last-named is the purest of all soaps, and absolutely the best. It leaves the skin soft and smooth, and neither dries the nails nor hair. It is free from excess of alkali or fat, and contains extra soft cream, which is especially soothing and beneficial to the skin. About 600,000 packets were sold in 1891; Frazer's Sulphur Tablets being one of the greatest successes on record.

Frazer's Sulphur Tablets are put up in 1s. 1½d. packets; post free 1s. 3d. Watkinson, and others, in the Central Hall, Manchester, are proving very successful.

At Stamford Rev. W. Stanley Hunt has conducted successful special services. The attendances were satisfactory, and good results were seen.

A mission work, commenced some years ago at the Hagg (a suburb of Newcastle), has been so successful that a chapel is now necessary, and efforts are being made to secure a plot of land.

Over two hundred poor people, who had no homes to go to, were entertained to a free entertainment at Chatham Lecture Hall recently by Revs. J. Fletcher, T. Hancocks, and Alderman Belsey, J.P.

At the invitation of the Leeds Methodist Council about 1,500 young men assembled on Monday week in Brunswick Chapel. Dr. Moulton presided, and gave an address full of sympathy. Rev. C. W. L. Christien, in a stirring speech which roused the enthusiasm of the meeting, drove home responsibility. Dr. Hellier gave an address on purity. Rev. S. Chadwick followed with a talk on betting and gambling.

At a meeting of the London Wesleyan Council on Monday week a long discussion took place on the apparent indifference of the artisan class to public worship. It was resolved:—"That no movement which aims at improving the moral condition of the working classes can be of permanent value unless identified with the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and that when the ordinary agencies of the Christian Church (such as preaching the Gospel, visitation by ministers and others, and simple yet sufficient arrangements for Christian fellowship) are well organised, wisely adapted, and worked in an earnest and brotherly spirit, there is no insuperable obstacle in the way of winning working men to Christ, of which our own missions in large towns, as well as other similar missions, afford conclusive proof."

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. John More, one of the Synod's evangelists, held a series of special services in Wolverhampton last week.

On Thursday week Dr. Monro Gibson opened a new church in Doncaster. On the Sunday following, a clergyman of the Church of England preached at the afternoon service.

The Presbyterian Church in Canada have two stations in their new mission of North Honan, on the Yellow River, China, with a staff of three ordained and one medical missionary.

The Caledonian Christian Club at 5, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury, is proving "the missing link" in bringing strangers from the North arriving in London into contact with Christian friends.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The annual collection on behalf of Presbyterian Foreign Missions was made throughout Ireland last Sunday.

The Dublin Presbyterian Association has had a good year, which closes with a considerable balance on the right side.

Revs. Drs. Murray, Chadwick, Campbell, and Maguire have been named for the bishopric of Down, Connor, and Dromore, vacant by the death of Dr. Reeves.

The Queen has appointed Rev. Dr. Leitch as Dean of Residence for Presbyterian students in Queen's College, Belfast, in place of the late Rev. Dr. Murphy.

St. Enoch's Presbyterian Church, Belfast, of which Rev. Dr. Hanna is the pastor, has 2700 scholars and teachers in the Sabbath-schools, and has paid off in the last sixteen years a debt of £6557, besides expending £8000 on school buildings.

There are now 327 Methodist Sunday-schools in Ireland, with 2853 officers and teachers and 25,090 scholars, and also ninety National schools under Methodist management, with 9500 scholars. In each of these particulars there has been a considerable increase during the year.

The second meeting of the Methodist Council of the Enniskillen District has been held. Mr. Thomas Elliott occupied the chair, and papers were read and discussed on "The Needs of Irish Methodism" and on "Holiness." An evangelistic service was held in the evening by Revs. H. Frackleton and John Hadden.

A convention for the deepening of spiritual life was held in Salem Church, Belfast, on Wednesday week, when addresses were delivered by Revs. W. T. Newsam, F. H. Robinson, and A. Smith. A similar convention has also just been held in Cork under the auspices of the Ladies' Prayer Union, Mrs. Crawford presiding.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

Mr. John Greig, engineering superintendent of the Scottish East African Mission, of dysentery, on December 18, at Kibwezi; Rev. H. S. Warleigh, vicar of Castleton, Derbyshire, aged seventy-eight, for fifteen years Her Majesty's chaplain at Parkhurst, Isle of Wight, and afterwards rector of Ashchurch, Gloucestershire; at South Norwood, Rev. T. C. Carter, an esteemed Baptist pastor (though lately retired); at the Rectory, Lawhitton, Rev. Francis de Boulay, aged eighty-two, for fifty-two years rector of the parish; at West Dulwich, Mr. Hubert Joslin, an earnest and successful worker at Gipsy-road Chapel; Rev. Benjamin Lawn, a devoted Methodist minister at Hereford; at Drumreagh, Coleraine, Rev. Thos. Beare, Presbyterian minister in the eighty-fourth year of his age and fifty-seventh of his ministry; in London, Rev. Richard Maxwell, Irish Methodist minister, and a most amiable, godly, devoted pastor, in the seventy-second year of his age and forty-sixth of his ministry; at Lisburn, Mr. Jno. McConnell, an earnest Sabbath-school worker; at Sligo, Mr. Matt. Rowlette, a devoted class leader; Mr. J. Grant, a very acceptable local preacher in Kent, aged eighty-five; Mr. George Knox, aged ninety, of Romford Congregational Church; Rev. T. Morrell, for many years a devoted and successful pastor at Little Baddow, Essex; Mrs. Elliott, the beloved mother of Mr. John Elliott, Evangelist, who passed away in London on Monday, January 18; Rev. Thomas Chamberlain, formerly vicar of St. Thomas, Oxford, and secretary of the Diocesan Board of Education, and author of several theological works.

Special Religious Services in Theatres and Town Halls.

These Services were commenced more than thirty-two years ago and have been held every winter with great success. The Committee have recently added to their labours by building Mission Halls in memory of their late president, the seventh Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G., while some hundreds of smaller halls have been assisted by grants of money. The majority of these buildings are in the very poorest parts of London, where it is utterly impossible to raise funds locally.—Contributions will be gratefully received by the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, or by the Secretary, Mr. C. M. Sawell, 3, Bridewell-place, E.C.

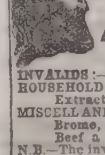
THE THEATRICAL MISSION,
Macready House, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden.
Founder, 1876: COURTHOPE TODD.
The Committee and Directors are in urgent need of Funds to maintain the Institute and to carry on the winter's work, which is meeting with God's blessing. Lady Correspondents needed and Visitors. Contributions payable to Joseph Peters, Esq., Treasurer; or will be received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott. Bankers: London and County, Covent Garden. Communications to W. A. Wilson, Esq., Secretary (as above).



HOMES OF HOPE,
4, 5 & 6, Regent-square, Gray's Inn-rd., London, W.C.
Special efforts are made on behalf of Mothers with their first infants, who are really the most hopeful class of the fallen, and are generally greatly to be pitied.
A Home has been opened for the reception of such young women, before they become Mothers, as are unfitted, from their previous good character and position, to mix with others.
The Committee are obliged to make an urgent appeal for contributions—
1. For the General Fund; the expenses of which amount to about £5 a day.
2. For the Child's Fund; a guinea or two to pay the nurses would in many cases rescue a mother and child. Five Shillings would pay for a child for a week.
3. For law expenses; in every case where it is possible the men are compelled to pay the sum allowed by law for the child's support.
The applications are so distressing and urgent that every shilling has been spent.
Bankers:
LONDON AND WESTMINSTER, Bloomsbury Branch, 218, Holborn.
CONTRIBUTIONS will be received by Messrs. MORGAN and SCOTT, at the office of THE CHRISTIAN, or by HENRY THOMPSON, Esq., Treasurer, 38, Mincing Lane, E.C.; WM. HORNIBROOK, Secretary, 17, Bloomsbury Street, New Oxford Street, W.C.

Christian Community.
ALL-NIGHT RESCUE WORK.
ALREADY, since this work began, 33,000 poor Homeless and Starving Men have been gathered from the streets in the dead of night, Sheltered, Fed, and otherwise assisted, with most gratifying results.
This season has commenced with more than usual pressure, and from present appearances a very hard season is apprehended, making our appeal all the more urgent.
The continuance of this much-needed work must depend upon the liberality of those having the means to support it. Contributions will be gratefully received by the SECRETARY; the Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or by Messrs. MORGAN AND SCOTT, office of THE CHRISTIAN.
JAS. ATKINSON, Secretary.
28, Enfield-road, Kingsland, London, N.E.

HOME TEACHING SOCIETY FOR THE BLIND.
New Contributions will be thankfully received. 16 blind teachers and guides illiterate with Moon's books daily. St. Luke xiv. 14.

PEPSONYMIN TONIC

THIS is a Genuine Remedy. It cures INDIGESTION. This is not mere assertion. It is a fact. Experience has proved it. Dr. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., says:—"The many martyrs to the ignorant use of unsuitable and crude drugs will benefit largely from its use." Mrs. HENRY KING-PARKES, F.R.S.A., says:—"I have had its efficacy tested in several severe cases of dyspepsia, and invariably with beneficial results." One patient says:—"I have derived more benefit from Pepsonymin Tonic than from any of the remedies so much advertised." Another writes:—"The headache, dizziness, and drowsiness have entirely, and, I hope, permanently left me." Try it. Ask your Chemist for it. If he does not keep it in stock, ask him to order it for you. If difficult to obtain, order direct from FRANCIS SITTE & Co., Ltd., St. ENOCH SQUARE, GLASGOW, who will send it post free for 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., or 4s. 6d. per bottle. The trade supplied with Pepsonymin Tonic by LYNCH and Co., MAY, ROBERTS and Co., F. NEWBERY and SONS, London, E.C.; GOODHALL, BACKHOUSE and Co., Leeds, &c.

ANNUAL VOLUME.

Containing over 50 Illustrations.
Attractively Bound in Illustrated Boards, 1/-

"I am very much pleased with the Yearly Volume of THE HERALD OF MERCY. I think it one of the most useful little books published by MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT, and ought to be found in every Mission Room, and also every workman's cottage, and every gentleman's kitchen. Many will take it up and read one of its plain simple Gospel stories that would not read a more pretentious book. The Pictures are also a great attraction to both children and adults."—EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

CHOICE SAYINGS.

Consisting of over 800 striking and profitable comments on almost every subject relating to Christian faith and practice. By ROBERT C. CHAPMAN, of Barnstaple. Tinted Covers, 9d.; Cloth Limp, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

Presentation Editions:

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.; Morocco, 3s.

"It contains a large variety of notes and expositions of the Scriptures, presented in the terse manner which is known to characterise the Author in his preaching and teaching of the Word of Life. There is both manna and old corn of the land here in rich variety."
Footsteps of Truth.

"An excellent gift for young people."—RECORD.

"OUT OF EGYPT."

A SERIES OF DISCOURSES AND BIBLE READINGS ON THE EXODUS OF ISRAEL AND ITS SPIRITUAL LESSONS. By Rev. Dr. G. F. PENTECOST. Tinted Covers, 2s.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"A powerful and brilliant work. Dr. PENTECOST is not only a man of marked ability and scholarship; he is also a pulpit orator of the highest order. He at once arrests the attention, penetrates the heart, moves the affections, fires the imagination, bends the will, and directs the conduct. There is no escaping the spell of his voice, the charm of his style, and the power of his utterances. Anything from his pen may be bought with eagerness. He is equally at home in addressing saint and sinner, as this volume amply proves."—Oldham Chronicle.

CHRIST AND THE SCRIPTURES.

THE LIVING WORD AND THE WRITTEN WORD. By Rev. Dr. ADOLPH SAPHIR, B.A. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

Presentation Editions:

Cloth extra, 2s.; with Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"We know of no volume that we more earnestly desire to see in the hands of persons of every age who are pondering the religious question of momentous importance, so much agitating men's minds at the present time. It is admirably adapted for the mature and thoughtful; and also peculiarly fitted to give a right direction to the lives and thoughts of the young, and to mould them into Christians of a high type of character."
The Newcastle Daily Chronicle.

After Influenza.

The resultant weakness of this depressing complaint will surely disappear if a short course of Guy's Tonic be resorted to. Guy's Tonic increases the appetite, strengthens the stomach, regulates the liver, gives tone to the nervous organization, and by imparting vitality, strength, and energy to the entire muscular and mental systems, makes the feeble and delicate vigorous, robust and strong. The weary brain, the languid nerve, and the prostrate muscular frame receive support and capacity for renewed exertion.

IT IS NOT CLAIMED

That Guy's Tonic will infallibly cure every ill under the sun, but we do say, here and now, that it should immediately be resorted to—

When digestion is accompanied by flatulency.

When pain, weight, fulness or distension is felt after eating.

When there is drowsiness after meals—a very common symptom.

When there is distaste for food of all kinds, or,

When there is a dull, weak, failing, or pining appetite.

TO ANY ONE DESIRING to test our remedies, we will send, securely packed in a special box, a bottle of Guy's Tonic, together with a free sample box of Guy's Fruit Pills and complete "Guide to Digestion," containing simple instructions as to the Guy's Tonic Treatment, post paid, for 2s. 9d. Address all letters to Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C. Guy's Tonic is sold retail of all Chemists, at 2s. 9d. per bottle, and Guy's Fruit Pills at 1s. 1½d. per box.

DONATIONS

RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, JANUARY 25, 1892.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O.Orders, not by stamps.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders should be made payable to Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C., and crossed "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss.

Appeals.

Wall Texts. Pictures, and Gospels for Lodging-house Work and Mission Room.—Will any send such to Mr. Davies, Chemist, Machynlleth, N. Wales?

Gospel Tracts or Booklets.—Fifty thousand wanted, so as to be able to leave one at every house in Cardiff during 1892. Who will help? Parcels to Mr. B. Bryant, 27, Windsor-place, Cardiff.

Y.W.C.A. Home of Rest, Sutton.—If the present claims (about £50) are met, the Home will shortly be self-supporting.—E. Savage (Hon. Sec. Y.W.C.A.), Chestnut House, 156, High-street, Sutton, Surrey.

West Bromwich.—A Christian tradesman and his wife, having recently moved into a spiritually destitute and much-neglected neighbourhood, have opened a small mission-room, and encouraging work is being carried on amongst the young of the poorest class. Any who would like to send parcels of left-off clothing, &c., may address J. Hewitt, 127, Hill Top, West Bromwich.

Coals for the Poorest.—Only those who live and work amongst the poor in East London can form any estimate of their suffering under the privation of firing, especially its effects upon poor little children. We earnestly appeal for help to alleviate this suffering. One guinea will keep one fire going daily in a poor family for nearly four months. —E. Philbrick, 57, Stepney-green, E.

King Edward Schools and Mission appeals for special help in relieving the sick poor suffering from influenza. Never (writes the superintendent) since the great cholera epidemic of 1866 (when 1300 people died in a week of cholera in the East of London) have we known so much sickness to prevail. Whole families are stricken down and rendered helpless. Medical men strongly recommend warmth and nourishment, but, unfortunately, many of these poor people are unable to procure either. Our trained nurse and sick visitors find it heartrending to go into houses where there is no fire, no nourishment, scanty bedcovering, clothing of the thinnest description, and in some cases children crying for bread. We are doing what we can, but help is sadly needed in this hour of trial.—Charles Montague, 4, Bedford-square, E.

Mr. W. H. Bacon, who has been working, with tokens of success, in connection with the Salvation Army, having lately resigned his post for reasons of which a satisfactory account is given, is anxious to find a sphere of Evangelistic Mission labour, in which, while serving the Lord he might support his family. His address is 9, Lammermoor-road, Balham, S.W.

Rev. John Hines, of Devon Mission, The Pas, via Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, Canada, writes:—"We have left Sandy Lake. Living entirely among Indians necessitates our being doctors as well as missionaries to our people, and we should be very grateful if some kind friend would send us a small compendium of materia medica. The one we use was published in 1848, and something more modern would be acceptable."

WITH NINE ILLUSTRATIONS, SPECIALLY ENGRAVED FOR THIS VOLUME.

A Review from THE SWORD AND TROWEL:—"Exceedingly good. Not only spiritual, as everything from our brother Mr. MEYER would be, but also thoughtful, fresh, suggestive, and thoroughly practical. Oh, that hundreds of our younger men gave signs of such real godliness, such true devotion, and such clear knowledge of the Gospel as we see in the author!"

Joseph: Beloved—Hated—Exalted.

WITH NINE ILLUSTRATIONS, SPECIALLY ENGRAVED FOR THIS VOLUME.

A Review from THE PREACHERS' MAGAZINE:—"The great charm of this very beautiful monograph is its clear setting forth of the way in which the life of Joseph mirrors, to use the author's own phrase, the life of Jesus. This idea is not at all unduly pressed, but it runs through the volume, and adds immensely to its homiletic and devotional value."

A Review from The Quiver:—"Like some masterpiece of art, in which new study reveals beauties new to us, there are some passages of Scripture that seem to possess almost unfathomable depths of meaning and boundless treasures of blessed teaching.
"Notably is this the case with the Twenty-third Psalm—'THE SHEPHERD PSALM,' as the author entitles his volume. Mr. MEYER'S writing is full as ever of suggestive and profitable thought."

TOWER HAMLETS MISSION.

Serious Deficiency of Funds.

THE LATE LORD SHAFTESBURY said: "This is a great and mighty work. I can only say that I rejoice to think that such a work as this is to be extended, and well does our friend Charrington deserve it. No man living, in my estimation, is more worthy of success for the devotion of his heart, the perseverance of his character, the magnificence of his object, and the way in which he has laboured, by day and by night, until he has completed this great issue. To many this Tower Hamlets Mission will seem like the voice of one crying in the wilderness, 'Prepare ye the way of the Lord.'"

DEAR FRIENDS,

In consequence of the terrible distress at the commencement of last year, we had an unusual drain upon our resources. The result is, we find ourselves at the beginning of the new year with a serious

DEFICIT OF £800.

We are extremely anxious to wipe off this debt on or before the 4th February, so that we may have funds in hand to carry on the work during the year before us. Towards this amount, Mr. JOHN CORY has kindly promised £100, on condition that others come forward to give the remainder of the money required; Mr. F. A. BEVAN, £50; Mr. E. M. DENNY, £25; Mr. SAMUEL GURNEY SHEPPARD, £10.

For over twenty years I and my fellow workers have toiled on in this poor East-end, often out of health as well as out of pocket through the strain of the work. I have not made many appeals to the Christian public, although we have the largest Mission Hall in the world, which is open every night all the year round. Now, however, I am compelled to make a very earnest appeal for help. Our Bible Women and voluntary visitors are overwhelmed with applications for relief in consequence of the distress and prevailing epidemic. There have been more cases of death from starvation recorded this year than we have ever known before.

We therefore earnestly appeal to readers of THE CHRISTIAN to follow the example of our kind friends, by giving similar (or smaller) sums, which will be most thankfully received and acknowledged by

Yours faithfully,

FREDK. N. CHARRINGTON, L.C.C.,
Hon. Superintendent.

THE WAY TO GOD. | TO THE WORK!

"These are popular works by our great Evangelist; and they deserve a large sale. There can be no need for us to commend the living, blazing speech of our brother Moody. Who can equal him in natural simplicity, all aglow with holy passion!"—The Sword and the Trowel.

ADDRESSES BY D. L. MOODY.

132nd Thousand.

DELIVERED IN ENGLAND AND REVISED BY HIMSELF. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Primitive Methodist:—"With the effect of these Addresses when spoken the whole land is acquainted; and now that they are written, they will tend to keep in force the impression they have already made."

A SERIES OF GOSPEL ADDRESSES. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The King's Highway:—"These discourses are full of power and homely beauty, and exemplify very fully the strong points of the great Evangelist. His anecdotes are so fresh, so pointed, and so touching."

HEAVEN:

50th Thousand.

ITS HOPES, ITS INHABITANTS, ITS RICHES, ITS REWARDS. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Baptist Magazine:—"We have here the large verbal familiarity with Scripture; the raciness of style; the profuseness and aptness of illustration; and the intense spiritual earnestness—which are always to be expected when Mr. Moody opens his lips to speak or takes his pen to write."

POWER FROM ON HIGH:

31st Thousand.

OR, THE SECRET OF SUCCESS IN CHRISTIAN LIFE AND CHRISTIAN WORK. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.

SEVERE ASTHMA—CASE of a CHILD.

The EDITOR of The Christian Observer writes that he has a daughter just

"BUDDING INTO WOMANHOOD."

"Ten years since she was afflicted with a most painful attack of asthma. The doctor was called in and sent medicine. She grew no better, but rather worse. She was not allowed to leave her room. Little by little her spirits sank and her appetite failed. With the increasing weakness fears of all kinds were the experience of her mother and myself. At length it began to be a question of how long she could live. The shadow of death had never fallen on our home, and Lizzie was one of six and the light of the house. One day a good Samaritan said: 'Has Mr. Congreve seen her?' 'Who is he?' my wife asked. 'He lives at Coombe Lodge, Peckham, and his speciality is, "Asthma and Consumption."' The child was taken in the carriage with the windows closed. In three weeks she was in the garden as in the United Kingdom. To say I am grateful to Mr. Congreve is feebly to express my thankfulness for his discovery and the moderate terms on which he places it within the reach of the public. Without a shade of a doubt, health, nay, life itself, has, in thousands of instances, followed a visit to Coombe Lodge, Peckham, London, S.E."

"FULL OF LIFE AS ANY GIRL

IS IT POSSIBLE?

St. Giles' Christian Mission.

WORK AMONG DISCHARGED PRISONERS.

TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN."

DEAR FRIENDS,

During the Fifteen years this Branch of our work has been in existence, besides 153,000 Discharged Prisoners having been met at the Prison Gates and urged to live a new life, 42,000 Men and Boys have been placed in the way of earning an honest living; and the daily applicants for help are still increasing in number.

Is it possible that a work such as this, which God has been pleased to bless in so marked a manner, and which is admitted on all sides to be largely responsible for the great decrease of crime, and the consequent closing of several large prisons, should be in danger of curtailment for want of means?

Never during the whole thirty-two years that have elapsed since our Mission was first started have we been so pressed for money to carry on our efforts, and the difficulty of raising our income is causing Mr. WHEATLEY and myself the greatest possible anxiety.

The response to our Appeal at Christmas was fully £1000 less than last year, and we are at the close of the year this amount in debt. Towards this deficiency one old friend of the Mission has given £100, and we are making strenuous efforts to raise the remainder.

May we earnestly beg your kind and prompt help?

Donations will be most gratefully acknowledged if sent to our Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard Street, E.C.; to our Secretary, Mr. W. WHEATLEY, 29, Brooke Street, Holborn, E.C.; or to

Yours sincerely,

GEORGE HATTON,

Superintendent St. Giles' Christian Mission.

TIRETTA BAZAR MISSION, CALCUTTA.

EDWARD S. WENGER is desirous of erecting a PLACE of WORSHIP for 100 persons, as also a SCHOOL for 100 children in connection with this Mission. A central spot in the Chinapara is essential. An estimate has been prepared, and it is reckoned that at the very least some 7000 Rupees will be required for the erection of the building. To this will have to be added the cost of land and cost of furnishing, so that at the lowest figure 16,000 Rupees will be required for the work. The amount already subscribed is only 650 Rupees. It is therefore necessary to raise

ABOUT 15,400 RUPEES MORE.

Any contributions towards this sum will be thankfully received and duly acknowledged by Mr. E. S. Wenger, 21/1, Tiretta Bazar Street, Calcutta, or may be sent to Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

JAY'S SULPHURISED

LUNG PROTECTORS

AGAINST BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA AND INFLUENZA.

The Protectors are made of Pure Wool, specially prepared and sulphurised; are of open and porous material, and only require to be worn to be appreciated. Although only recently introduced, they have received the favourable testimony of many persons.

The moisture of the body being allowed freedom of escape, the wearer never feels cold, even after excessive perspiration; and they are a perfect protection against chills on leaving hot rooms.

For delicate persons suffering from Chest difficulty or Bronchial Cough, they are practically "LIFE PRESERVERS," and a most invaluable protection to public speakers.

To ensure proper size send measurement round the chest.

Price 3s., carriage paid to any address in the Kingdom, with full instructions for use.

Address—Mrs. CRABTREE, Highfield Villas, Heckmondwike.

THE PRESS.—AN EVANGELISTIC AGENCY FOR INDIA.

THE CHRISTIAN LITERATURE SOCIETY FOR INDIA.

FORMERLY CALLED

THE CHRISTIAN VERNACULAR EDUCATION SOCIETY.

President—The Right Hon. the Earl of NORTHBROOK, G.C.S.I.

Vice-Presidents—The Archbishop of CANTERBURY, the Bishop of LONDON, the Bishop of LIVERPOOL, Sir CHAS. U. AITCHISON, K.C.S.I., Sir W. MUIR, K.C.S.I., Sir M. MONIER WILLIAMS, K.C.I.E., &c., &c

At the urgent request of the Committees of Missionary Societies in India, this Society now devotes all increase of its funds to Christian Literature. Last year it issued more than a Million of books in the vernaculars and in English.

Twelve Millions of Readers have issued from Government and other schools, for whom there is no proper supply of pure and good literature.

Frivolous, immoral, and infidel books abound and tempt the youth of India on every hand.

The Society has completed its arrangements for multiplying its publications as the much-needed Auxiliary of all Indian Missions.

Zenana literature will form an important part of our work.

Contributions are earnestly and confidently asked for this cheapest form of Evangelistic Agency in the name of our Committee, backed by the recommendations of Missionary Societies of all denominations. Contributions may be sent to the Rev. James Johnston, Secretary, 7, Adam-street, Strand, London, W.C.; or, to Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Ransom, Bouverie, and Co., 1, Pall Mall East, S.W.

THREE DAYS OF PRAYER

FOR THE IMMEDIATE ABOLITION OF THE ANGLO-ASIATIC OPIUM TRAFFIC.

EXETER HALL, LONDON, February 8th, 9th, and 10th,

At 11 a.m., 3 p.m., and 7 p.m. each day.

[N.B.—In consequence of the Hall being otherwise occupied on the Evening of the 10th, the CLOSING MEETING will be held in the FRIENDS' MEETING HOUSE, 52, St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross.]

The Lord's people throughout the United Kingdom are invited to observe these three days in their respective localities by Congregational Gatherings where possible; but where that is impracticable, then by prayer in the family and in private.

A CALL TO HUMILIATION & PRAYER.

A MEETING FOR HUMILIATION AND PRAYER

WILL BE HELD IN

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY,

On FRIDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 12th, 1892, at 7.30 p.m.

THE CHAIR WILL BE TAKEN BY

SIR S. ARTHUR BLACKWOOD, K.C.B.

The following SPEAKERS will Address the Meeting and lead in Prayer:—

REV. H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, D.D. | REV. W. SINDEN.
DR. T. J. BARNARDO, F.R.C.S.E. | J. L. WOOD, ESQ.
REV. E. W. BULLINGER, D.D. | MARK KNOWLES, ESQ.

MISS CUSACK, (NUN OF KENMARE), AND OTHERS.

At this pressing time of need, when God's chastening hand is stretched out over the land, the PROTESTANT ALLIANCE desires to urge upon all Clergymen and Ministers throughout the United Kingdom to set apart a day, contemporaneous with the Meeting of Parliament, for Humiliation and Prayer—Humiliation for National Sin, and Prayer to God for forgiveness and for His merciful guidance in the future.

In response to this appeal, the Rev. ARCHIBALD G. BROWN, assisted by the Rev. W. CUFF, has arranged a Meeting at the East London Tabernacle, Burdett-road, Bow, at 8 p.m. on Saturday, February 13th, 1892, to which all earnest Christians are invited.

Tickets of Admission and all particulars may be obtained at the Offices of the PROTESTANT ALLIANCE, 9, Strand. (Reserved Seats, One Shilling.)

Watercress and Flower Girl Mission,

11 & 12, CLERKENWELL CLOSE, E.C.

The Institutions of this Mission embrace:—ORPHANAGE AND HOMES for Waif Girls with 100 Inmates, Children's Cottage Hospital, Reception Home and Shelter, Industrial Brigade in which about 50 young Girls taken from Street Hawking are trained, a Flower Girl Sisterhood with 9 Branches, and over 800 enrolled Members, Breakfast and Club Room for Weary and Hungry Girls while in the early Morning Market, and a large number of other endeavours for the elevation and comfort of Young and Old of this poor and neglected class.

Already 800 Girls have passed through the Industrial agency, and many Young Children rescued from surroundings inimical to their highest welfare.

FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED to sustain this Mission, which during 25 years has performed a much-needed ministry in the Metropolis.

MONTHLY, ONE PENNY, ILLUSTRATED.

Published by JOHN HADDON & CO., Salisbury-sq., London, E.

You ask what will be the special mission of

'OUR MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.'

I will tell you. It will aim to be a voice with a bright message, a hand with a warm clasp, to the many thousand home workers, or women workers, whose time for reading is limited by moments. The contents will vary, but whether serial story, papers upon popular subjects, Sunday talks, poetry, pictures, or prize competitions, the purpose will be to awaken thought, tending towards heart culture and life enrichment, whereby homes shall be blessed and brightened, and work for God in the world accomplished. Please order the magazine of your newsagent, and so oblige, yours faithfully,

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of Pastor Jacob, and Moressa his wife, evangelists to Mohammedans in Persia.

The loss which the Church of Christ has sustained by the death of Mr. Spurgeon deeply impresses us all at the present moment. The faithful standard-bearer entered peacefully into rest on Sunday last, after a life in which he took a worthy part in that conflict which he tersely described as "the greatest fight in the world." While sincerely condoling with Mrs. Spurgeon and the family, we earnestly pray that Divine grace may tenderly assuage their grief, and enable them to praise God, even while sorrowing over this most painful bereavement.

The feelings of the moment find appropriate expression in the following lines, written a century ago, culled by a correspondent:—

Well may we think God is intending wars,
When calling home his great ambassadors.

So prompt to teach and preach and pray and praise,
His labour had no end but with his days.

Mourn, Zion, your Elijah's gone
And wafted to the skies!
Mourn, till His fiery car send down
A soul of equal size.

We direct earnest attention to a "Call to Humiliation, Prayer, and Fasting," in regard to the Anglo-Asiatic Opium Traffic, which appears on page 13. The letter, with other information, is being sent to forty thousand ministers of the Gospel throughout the kingdom, and there will doubtless be meetings, for the purpose specified, in other places besides Exeter Hall, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday next.

In the Supreme Court of Heaven, a Righteous God will hear with favour the petitions that an honourable policy may speedily replace that which is now criminally pursued. For the sake of our country and the millions of Asiatics who are in bondage to a degrading vice, we trust the evident will of God will soon find acquiescence in the Councils of the Empire. When Britain frees her skirts of this and other iniquities, how will not a pardoning God bless her, both at home and abroad, for the furtherance of his kingdom of righteousness and peace! Those who desire further information respecting the meetings should communicate with Mr. A. S. Dyer, 31, Paternoster-square, London, E.C.

Writing to The Record in connection with the Old Testament discussion, Dr. W. O'Neill, of Lincoln, says:—

I have been perfectly shocked at the great variety of unbelief that is at the present time spreading among the clergy, many of whom are not ashamed to divulge it. It would seem to me as if Apollyon had sent a special Mission to the clergy, and that the members of the Commission were succeeding to their hearts' content. "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" Which is tantamount to saying that when He cometh He will find little faith and few faithful ones.

Those who are actively faithful to Christ will give the tempter small chance. Occupied in doing their Lord's will, they will have neither time nor disposition for doubtings and disputings. This lesson was pointed with practical force in a recent speech by Dr. Northrup, President of the American Baptist Missionary Union:—

Why is it that the heresy of unbelief is regarded with such apprehension or alarm, while the heresy of inaction is viewed with comparative indifference? Is faith without works any better than works without faith? Are they not alike dead and displeasing to God—equally vain and perilous? To the heresy of inaction, far more than to the heresy of unbelief, is due the deplorable fact that the midnight darkness of heathenism still envelopes nearly two-thirds of the population of the globe. What, then, shall we do? The alternatives are—either cease to claim to be the true successors of the earliest Baptist churches, or obey, with the devotion which characterised them, the Lord's command, "Go, preach the Gospel to the whole creation."

It is important, not only that we be established in the faith in its primitive purity, but that we also aim at abounding in faithful service to our Divine Master. Let us not only acknowledge Jesus to be Lord, but let us earnestly do the things which he commands.

The Echo of Saturday contained the following characteristic anecdote:—

Is the Millennium at hand? Mr. Percy Bunting, in his reminiscences of Cardinal Manning, describes an extraordinary meeting at his house, the parties present being the Cardinal, Dr. Fairbairn, Dr. Paton, Mr. Lilly, and Mr. Bunting himself. After a free discussion of theological differences, the Cardinal rose to go, and the parting is thus described:—"Rising from his seat, he grasped Dr. Fairbairn by the hand, and, with the greatest warmth, said how glad he was, in spite of what he must consider imperfections, to be able to recognise him as a brother in Christ. Dr. Fairbairn, with like feeling, replied how happy he was to be able so to regard him, without even speaking of imperfections, and even happier to be in a position to acknowledge him as a teacher called to his office, like himself, by the Master, and possessed, therefore, of the same right to serve Him. It was a mutual benediction, and a scene I shall never forget."

In our view, consistency seems, in this incident, to be remarkably one-sided; and it is not on the side of nominal Protestantism. In the words of a correspondent, a Dissenter of fifty years' standing: "The Cardinal, with the quasi superiority of his church, speaks of imperfections; the Protestant waives the point." A false liberalism and charity explain what otherwise would be difficult of comprehension.

If, on the one hand, at the present time, we see a Romanism helped by the sacerdotal pretensions and ritualistic practices of clergymen belonging to the Established Church, on the other hand, we cannot but observe a Romanism which propagates itself under the complacent patronage of Nonconformists, who are as lamentably destitute of Protestant jealousy as they are avowedly disloyal to the old Puritan doctrine. If the evangelical churches do not soon awake to their duty, they will be aroused, when it is too late, to find Rome in full possession of place and power, and free to enforce her will with the relentless cruelty of days which we do not sufficiently bear in mind.

The Rome correspondent of The Catholic Times writes in reference to the question of the Egyptian Hierarchy:—

I can now state, upon the most reliable authority, that certain propositions from the Foreign Office had been made to the Papal Secretary of State in this connection. The Pope was willing to receive them favourably, and to transmit them to the Propaganda for proper development and organisation. But the Ambassador of France declared that he would resign his post as Ambassador if the propositions made by England concerning the Egyptian Hierarchy were accepted, and this opposition sufficed to stop all negotiations.

The letters of Reuter's special correspondent descriptive of visits to various Russian provinces affected by the terrible famine, contain most distressing pictures of the peasant, the victim, on the one hand, of hunger and poverty, on the other, of oppression and fraud, with none to look up to, none to influence him for good. It might have been expected that those charged with the spiritual oversight of the poor people would have been ready with help, encouragement, and comfort at this time of stress; or that, at least, they would have set an example of patient endurance. But the following description of a typical specimen of the Russian priesthood in the Province of Tamboff dispels such an illusion:—

Here was a curious revelation! Before me stood the disciple of Christ, with long hair, pale face, cassock touching the ground, looking like a sacred picture. Round him was a starving people. And what was his dominant idea? The succour of the afflicted? The feeding of the hungry and the clothing of the naked? Nothing of the kind. His one concern was the price of the corn he had contrived to hoard!

A nation, whose "Orthodox" religion is a compound of superstition, ignorance, and intolerance, can never be truly prosperous. Russia has yet to learn—it may be in a very bitter school—that it is righteousness only which exalts a nation, and where this is found without mercy it is not after the Divine type and pattern.

It is pleasing to read that the Mayor of Burnley the other day, after a gathering to which guests of all denominations and parties were invited, handed to the treasurer of the local hospital the sum of fifty guineas, the amount which intoxicants would have cost had not his worship wisely determined to entertain his guests without giving them spirituous liquors. The example is one that might, with much advantage to our public charities, be followed, even in private circles, and we earnestly commend it.

The Speaker of the House of Commons recently at Leamington commented upon the "appalling" dimensions of the pauper-roll of last year, showing 728,000 recipients of poor relief. It is well to remember, however, that these figures are apt to convey an impression more alarming than a closer view of all the facts justifies. After making allowance for children who are reckoned as paupers if the father merely receives some trivial, temporary relief at a crisis, and for the aged and infirm, the adult able-bodied paupers are not more than 100,000, or about three per thousand of the population. But even these figures are far larger than they ought to be. Many of the causes of pauperism are preventible; for instance, it has been calculated that fifty-one per cent. of its numbers are attributable to drunkenness alone. The vexed questions o the administration of the Poor Law cannot be entered into here, nor can the various preventive schemes at present in the air be discussed in these columns; suffice it to say that no action can be really successful which is not founded upon Christian motives and cemented by Christian purpose.

It is stated that the Intoxicating Liquors Bill (Ireland) will again be introduced in the next Session of Parliament, and hopes are expressed that the new First Lord of the Treasury will give the measure a good position in the "business," as he is personally favourable to the measure. Mr. Jackson, the next Chief Secretary for Ireland, unfortunately has hitherto voted against the measure, but it is anticipated that after a short residence in the sister island he will come to recognise what the drink curse really means in Ireland, and be led to change his opinions.

It is remarkable how the drink question invariably comes to the front when any broad question of poverty and distress has to be looked into. A writer in a recent issue of The Economic Journal deals with the subject of destitution in a certain large district, and in doing so gives the cause of the poverty in the case of 150 families, in the case of each of which application had been made for parish relief. In a painfully large number of instances—sixty-seven out of the total—sickness and want of work were responsible for the distress; but in no fewer than nineteen drink was the direct cause. The figures need no comment, especially when it is remembered that in many cases drink also is the indirect cause of the want of employment.

The Death of Mr. Spurgeon.

We shall have cause to remember the dark month which has just expired. For many a coming year it will be remembered for the sorrow that draped its days in mourning. First, the young Prince, in the prime of life, and on the threshold of his joy; then the aged Cardinal, who, however mistaken his religious convictions, wrought nobly for the welfare of his fellows; and now the renowned Pastor of the Metropolitan Tabernacle.

Wherever our mother-tongue is spoken, and in those foreign lands where translations of his books circulate, there will have been a sob of genuine regret and sympathy, which, though it cannot heal the recent wound or fill the desolate blank, must do something towards comforting those that formed the inner circle of his life. Even men who have experienced the heaviest blows which "the last of the Puritans" dealt out on behalf of the truth he loved so well, have already washed out the memory of the conflict with the tears of a manly grief for the stalwart warrior, who never took an unworthy advantage of his foe, and was ever animated by the purest, loftiest purpose. He might hit hard, but there was no suspicion of personal animosity. In the unanimous verdict of the great court of public opinion it has been a great life which, so far as this world is concerned, has now for ever closed; a life of which all Englishmen, whatever their religious convictions, may be proud. For once, the many voices that generally speak discordantly enough in our public Press, have blended in an almost unanimous testimony, when speaking of the nobility of his life and the greatness of his work.

Many elements of character have endeared him to the people, to say nothing just now of his fellow-believers. He has always spoken in a language which ordinary folk could understand, and expressed in colloquial English thoughts passing in many minds, but needing to be expressed. "I hate oratory," he said. "I come down as low as I can. High-flying and fine language seem to me wicked when souls are perishing." Clear, terse, transparent language expressed the results of robust, strong thinking, and wide reading in the works of Puritan theology. And to this we must add the music, the charm of that marvellous voice, which could cast its spell over audiences of twenty thousand people, and combined the sweetness of a flute with the volume of an organ.

It has been said that no man can wield power over men who is destitute of humour; and this quality played like summer lightning in spoken address as well as on printed page. It was homely, genial, mirthful. Many a lesson was taught in a joke. Many a weak point in an adversary's armour was indicated with a pleasantry that robbed the wound of its smart. How delightful to be in his company, especially if he met with a congenial spirit, then story would follow story, drawn apparently from inexhaustible stores, while mother wit and racy description and good-humoured sally would make the time fly fast. It was a rare treat to be in his company. And when he appeared on the public platform how easily could he put his audience and himself in touch by some genial pleasantry! And the most severe taste could hardly condemn the natural bubbling up of humour in some quaint touch during some most impressive discourse.

For forty years he has spent his life in the fullest blaze of popularity, surrounded on all hands by adulation and the evidences of unbounded affection, whilst success, such as is granted to few men, has crowned his every effort. But he never failed to be simple, humble, and sincere. Perhaps, the one feature in his character oftenest noticed by those who came into personal converse with him was his extreme humility, the absence of all affectation. Strong in speech, emphatic in denunciation, unsparing in his criticism of those whom he deemed disloyal to truth—though he was all this on the public platform and through the press, when great interests were at stake, yet in his home and among those whom he loved and trusted he was as unaffected and simple as a child. No breath of suspicion ever blurred his fair name. No stain ever attached to an unimpeached private character.

Probably there has been no instance in the history of Christendom, of one man able to hold an audience of six thousand persons Sunday by Sunday for thirty years. And when there is added the printed sermons, reaching an average of twenty-five thousand weekly, and reprinted in every part of the world; the mass of literature which proceeded from his prolific pen; the institutions which he inaugurated and maintained; the influence which he wielded through the students that had gone from his college; it is difficult to realise that all has emanated from one brain and from one heart. Into his life he has put the work of three or four ordinary lives. Nor can we conceive that any man, during an ordinary life-time, has spoken to vaster audiences, wielded a wider influence, or won more souls for the Redeemer's kingdom than he whom we mourn to-day.

But chiefly he endeared himself to all who love the Truth for the clearness of his teaching on the fundamental facts of the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. Brought up in Calvinistic doctrine, he yet preached the Gospel freely to all men, and did not blindly permit himself to be fettered by the narrower convictions held in that school of religious thought. There was, indeed, a perceptible broadening of conviction during the course of his ministry, though to the end he held most tenaciously to the doctrines of the straitest orthodoxy. For these he was willing to suffer the loss of all things, and, indeed—as all the world knows—did not hesitate to tear himself away from valued associations and early friends, prepared, if necessary, to stand and fall alone in the defence of the truth as he understood it.

But what Christian is there, who knows anything of his teaching or writings, that does not value them for their devoutness, their unction, their breathings of love to the Redeemer, their accurate delineation of the main features of the believer's experience, their triumphant outbursts of rapture, their emphatic references to the words of promise, their yearning eagerness over the souls of men? There are few that have not been deeply in his debt for a clearer apprehension of Christian truth, for comfort, direction, quickening, and increased faith.

What a welcome he must have received as he neared the celestial portal! If an abundant entrance is ministered to any, it must have been awarded to him. If "Well-done" is addressed to any, it must have been spoken to him. If rest is sweet to any, it must be sweet to him. And as we turn away from the door through which the man, the Christian minister, the author, the philanthropist, the friend, has passed to join his peers, we feel that earth is perceptibly poorer, and its atmosphere greyer and more ashen because he has gone.

Rev. Jas. Douglas, of Brixton, for many years an intimate friend of Mr. Spurgeon, writes:—

After a temporary and partial recovery, in which hope rose high in many hearts—a feeling in which Mr. Spurgeon himself strongly shared—our brother succumbed to the grievous disease that last summer made him to taste the bitterness of death, and is now absent from the body and present with the Lord. This deeply-lamented event took place on Sunday last, at 11.5 p.m. It is a comfort to know that his last moments were free from pain, and that she was by his bedside who had been so long to him a helpmeet indeed. Mentone was his earthly paradise. We think of him now as in the paradise of God.

Waiving, for the moment, relative considerations, the removal of Mr. Spurgeon will be deeply felt by many on personal grounds. He was a man to be loved. There was a large fund of human nature in him, and he drew to him a great variety of types. One felt an instinctive abandon in his presence. There was nothing to chill the heart, and everything to thaw reserve. Mr. Spurgeon was a great man were it for nothing else than this, that and his range of human interest wide. What we heard him say once of the late Hugh Stowell Brown, of Liverpool, might well be applied to himself: "There was room enough in his heart for all the fleets of Europe to anchor." Hence multitudes, and we subscribe ourselves among the number, mourn him for his own sake. We miss him, and will miss him, for there was a magnetism in his very presence that acted as a charm. That he had no faults is not for us to say. He was too impulsive, too child-hearted, to be altogether proof against criticism. But let those criticise who have a mind for it. We remember his warm greeting, his frolic sometimes, and fun, his rare mimicry of and genuine love for worthies of older-fashioned days than these, and as we think of them the words of Horace stand out with new beauty: "Dulce est desipere in loco—" (It is delightful to unbend on occasion). Nor can the times be forgotten when the gay gave place to the grave, and when some great trouble or profound feeling moved in utterance that tongue now stilled in death. And now the curtain has fallen. He is gone with whom we had so often sweet fellowship; but we sorrow not as others who have no hope.

But if the personal element weighs so heavily in the case of many, what are we to say of the relative aspects of this bereavement? We had hoped to have seen him restored, for was there not need of him? There was. Truly if any man might be deemed indispensable to the Church and the world it was Charles Haddon Spurgeon. He had the ear of men to an unrivalled extent. The Metropolitan Tabernacle great as it was, did not describe his sphere. His words penetrated to the uttermost parts of the earth. His sermons were reproduced in tongues to him unknown. His very holidays at Mentone were prolific of results. He seemed, even when he went out to glean, to return with sheaves. In some way or other, he addressed not one denomination alone, but

THE WHOLE UNIVERSAL CHURCH.

The Master had set before him an open door, and he did not fail to speak in such a way that all the world might hear. In such circumstances it is not surprising that the true Church of Christ at large should receive the news of his death with great lamentation.

Besides, the need of his continuance appears to our poor senses all the greater in the light of the firm stand for truth Mr. Spurgeon had been emboldened to make. Faithful amid the faithless he. We do not err in saying our brother knew vital truth, and so knew it as to risk all for it. The Gospel did not obtain at his hands a mere milk-and-water allegiance. He had a big-hearted jealousy which nothing could appease in regard to the crown rights of the doctrines of grace. He had no sympathy with the so-called teacher or preacher who had no creed, and who made it his boast that he knew nothing definitive. He loathed looseness of expression or error of statement wherever soul-saving truth was concerned or the fundamentals of the faith affected. It is easy to understand how all this could be misconstrued by men ignorant alike of the nature of the law on the one hand and expiation by blood on the other, and how the charge of bigotry could be constructed by minds whose only idea of charity was a pantheon of religious notions. But all these things only make the lover of the truth to mourn all the more that his voice should be stilled who could distinguish between things that differ, and who would rather die than sanction the action of corruption of the faith.

But that is not all. There was not only the mighty faith, and the grand, firm expression of it—Mr. Spurgeon was eminently a man of the people. "The common people heard him gladly." He was commissioned "to preach the Gospel to the poor"; he knew by Divine grace "how to speak a word to him that was weary"; he was a born preacher. He had no need to memorise or read his sermons. The truth he possessed possessed him. He marshalled his thoughts as a consummate general disposes his troops on the day of battle. His simple, and clearly-cut. There were no hump-backed or broken-backed sentences, no wearisome iterations, no obscurities, no monotony. The effect of the service was always cumulative. There were many changes of scene, but one purpose ran through the whole. The subject opened out and grew in his hands, anon stimulating interest by its homeliness, anon thrilling us by its sublimity, anon melting us by its pathos, anon searching us by its pungency, and anon entrancing us by its worth. In the judgment of truth Mr. Spurgeon was an orator of the foremost rank, in whom reason, passion, imagination, and utterance had full play. Now, alas! he is gone, and yet the need of him is as great as ever before.

Nor can we fail to think at such a time of the many works that were the accompaniments of his ministry. He had, under God, a large household to provide for. He was the widows' and orphans' friend.

The Pastors' College, too, will miss him more than tongue can tell. The College Conference will hold their next gatherings under sad auspices indeed since their President has fallen on sleep.

But why enlarge? It has been said that men die, but principles do not. It is well to remember it. Elijah departs, but his mantle remains, and the spirit of his testimony is immortal. It is not yet clear who is to be Elisha. We hope that if he exists at all the bereaved church of the Tabernacle may speedily find him.

Monday, by suggestion of Mr. Spurgeon, had been set aside for special prayer as to "the prevailing sickness and sorrow," but the tidings, flashed from Mentone at midnight, of his decease (in his fifty-eighth year), turned the whole proceedings of the day into a fresh channel. From the early morning prayer-meeting to the last gathering at night, a quiet, restful spirit was manifested. "It is the Lord. He doeth all things well."

Mr. J. T. Dunn, at the morning service, said: I do not know how we can sing this morning. The Lord has been pleased, as no doubt most of you know, to take away our head. In meeting, however, for prayer on this occasion I may recall, in the first place, that we have need to plead with God for a blessing upon the beloved wife of our dear pastor, and upon all the friends who have been round about him so long. We also have need to plead for the blessing of Christ upon this church, and though we are called to mourn, yet we may not mourn as those who are in despair. It is true we have lost our pastor, but we have not lost our Lord, and He will remain with us, the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever. I think, too, that we might pray that God may mercifully turn the hard hearts of the people, so that by the death of his servant many thousands may be brought to the feet of Jesus. Their privileges are now gone so far as his faithful testimony is concerned, but may we not ask that God will so bless the bereavement to us as individuals that we too may be up and doing, not knowing how soon we may be called to render our account. We are now bowed in grief, for we have lost a loving friend, of whose value no person who is not a member of this church can form a proper estimate. But he has gone before, and we weep because we are on the earth-side. He rejoices, and would we might join with him in his joy. We have sympathised with him in his sorrow and in his pain, and there are scores of members of this church who would gladly have taken his place had that been possible. Let our sympathies, then, follow him, and may we have grace to become as valiant for Jesus as he, and fill up the vessels of our service full to the brim.

At the noon meeting a solemn and sorrowful stillness pervaded the bereaved assembly as they were reminded that their beloved pastor had passed at the close of the Lord's Day into the eternal Day of the Lord. They desired strength to bow before God—not in a stoical spirit of submission, as those who bowed to inevitable fate, but as those who would say, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

Dr. A. T. Pierson, who has filled Mr. Spurgeon's pulpit for the last three months, followed this line of thought as he expounded 2 Kings ii. We must not forget that it is the Lord's doing. Death had not come accidentally, but by the decree of God. He in his loving and wise purposes knew what was best for his children. We ought to pray for a double portion of the spirit which rested upon Mr. Spurgeon. The workman dies, but the work goes on. It would be a great iniquity if the sheaf of wheat fell asunder. Those who would honour their pastor's memory, let them carry on the work in which he had been engaged for forty years. The thought must not occur to their minds that that great church is to be disintegrated because the Great Master has taken away their head. The Almshouses, Orphanage, and Pastors' College are not in any sense to decline. The Lord God of Elisha still lives, and they must stand by the waters of their sorrow and cleave them with the mantle of Spurgeon, calling upon the Lord God to let the work go forward, with new consecration, and emulation, and imitation of everything good that Mr. Spurgeon has done. This would be the noblest monument to his memory, and if there be any communication between this world and the next, and it were possible to add to the joys of their pastor in heaven, nothing would do more to increase his happiness than to see the work go on uninterruptedly with double promise and increased faith in God.

(From a photograph by Messrs. J. Russell and Sons, Baker-street, London, W.)

Another great gathering was held in the evening, when the platform railings were draped in black, and the time was chiefly spent in prayer.

It is understood that the remains of the beloved pastor will be brought home and buried in Norwood Cemetery early next week, in compliance with the desire expressed by many, that Mr. Spurgeon's ashes should rest amongst his friends at home.

PROTESTANT REVIVAL.—A meeting for humiliation, and prayer for Divine guidance will be held at St. James's Hall, Piccadilly, on Friday evening next week, at 7.30. It has been convened by Mr. J. L. Wood, of Oakleigh-park, Whetstone, with the co-operation of the Protestant Alliance.

CHRISTIAN BLIND RELIEF SOCIETY.—The annual tea was given on Tuesday in last week to the pensioners of this society at the People's Palace. Short addresses were delivered by the Bishop of Bedford, Mr. Spencer Charrington, and Mr. T. A. Denny. The society has 327 pensioners on its books, who reside in all parts of the United Kingdom. Information respecting the Society's work may be obtained from Rev. J. Pullein Thompson, St. Stephen's Vicarage, North Bow.

THE LIVINGSTONIA MISSION.

The Glasgow Committee of the Livingstonia Mission, Nyasaland, have issued a letter, signed by Mr. J. Campbell White, in which they recall the story of the origin of the Mission in British Central Africa, and add: Notwithstanding much hardship, disease, and death in the earlier years the progress of the Mission has been steady and rapid. The Spirit of God has blessed the teaching and the preaching of the Bible in the native languages, to the formation of native churches, the members of which support missionaries to their countrymen. Thousands of children and of young men and maidens flock to the schools, which in many cases they build for themselves, while they pay fees and purchase books. The medical missionaries attract hundreds of men and women to the dispensaries, where they learn the Gospel, and are influenced by gratitude to seek the highest good. The workshops, under godly skilled artisans, are making civilised and busy Christian communities. Agriculture and trade are taking the place of war raids and slave hunts. Every year the number of adults baptized, and the numbers of inquirers under training for admission to the Church of Christ, are increasing. The warlike Zulu tribes on the uplands are tamed, the weaker on the Lake shore are no longer oppressed, but manifest a Christian independence and growing self-respect. In very truth the process is going on before our eyes predicted by the Old Testament prophet—nations are being born in a day.

The Livingstonia Mission began at Cape Maclear, at the south entrance from the sea to the Lake, where the Shirè flows out of it. That is now a subordinate station under the first convert, A. Namalambi; and the headquarters of the Mission have for several years been at Bandawè, which commands the west shore of the Lake. From that centre, south and west and north, the Mission has extended. A country the length of Scotland is now taken possession of for Christ, by a series of central and out-stations linked together so as ultimately to be brought into the kingdom of Christ as one vast unit. The Livingstonia Mission depends entirely on subscriptions specially given, and manages its own finances in Glasgow. It is locally conducted, under the instructions of the committee in Glasgow, by a Mission Council, consisting at present of seven graduates, of whom six are medical missionaries.

The missionaries have reduced to writing seven languages, in which they have prepared grammars, and into which they have translated the whole or portions of the New Testament. They have prepared school books in Nyanja and the other dialects, on the principle of the Board School standards of our own country. The Native Church must be more than a hundred strong as to communicants alone. All the different lines of work, preaching and teaching, healing and printing, industrial and agricultural, "converge," writes Dr. Laws, "in what is the main object of our efforts, and of which these are the handmaids—the evangelisation of Livingstonia. Direct evangelistic effort is carried on by regular Sabbath services on the different Mission stations, various meetings and daily services held during the week, when people are at work on the stations, and by preaching at out-stations, in connection with the various centres."

To the south and south-east of the Livingstonia Mission is the Blantyre Mission of the Established Church of Scotland. To the north is that of the London Missionary Society. To the north-east, in German territory, are those of the Moravian Brethren and the Berlin Evangelical Society. The Dutch Reformed Church of South Africa works along with our staff in the Livingstonia Mission field.

REPHIDIM.

EXODUS XVII.

If you essay to lead men, you will sooner or later come to a Rephidim. We are distinctly told that it was according to the commandment of the Lord that the children of Israel journeyed "by stages" (R.V.) from the wilderness of Sin and pitched in Rephidim. The character of the worker is as dear to God as the work he is doing, and no pains must be spared by the Divine artificer to complete the design to which He has set his hand. Do not be surprised then, Christian worker, if you find yourself landed in Rephidim. There are lessons to be learnt there of incalculable worth.

Geographers and historians have found it difficult to fix on its precise locality, but the site is immaterial. It lay, no doubt, somewhere along that coast in one of the wadys that lead up into the heart of the mountains of the central table-land. But the experiences of which that place was the scene are common to all lives, ages, and lands.

I. THERE WE LEARN THE LIMIT OF OUR ABILITY.—Few of us can stand great or long-continued success. It is comparatively easy to walk in the valley of Humiliation when our path is hidden and the faces of men are averted; but to stand on the height, with none to rival, with nothing left to scale, the wonder and the envy of a host—ah! this is a task in which the brain reels, the step falters, and the heart gets proud. It is easier to know how to be abased than how to abound, how to be empty than how to be full. We are so apt to repeat the folly of Hezekiah in showing his treasures to the ambassadors of Babylon, and to utter the mad vaunt of Nebuchadnezzah, "Is not this great Babylon which I have built, by the might of my power and for the glory of my majesty?"

But whenever this happens, directly the heart of man is inflated with pride, and lifts itself up in self-confidence, there is an end to its usefulness. God will not give his glory to another. He will not permit his power to be employed for the inflation of human pride, or to minister to the exaltation of the flesh. It is his solemn decree that no flesh shall glory in his presence. "Shall the axe boast itself against him that heweth therewith? Shall the saw magnify itself against him that slaketh it? As if a rod should shake them that lift it up."

This is why so many of God's servants, who once did yeoman service, are laid aside. They were marvellously helped till they were strong, but when they were strong their hearts were lifted up to their destruction. They still preach the old sermons that once pealed like the archangel's trumpet, or thrilled with the wail of Calvary's broken heart, but there is no stir or shaking among the dry bones that strew the valley of vision. They utter the old exorcisms, but the demons laugh at them from behind their ramparts, and refuse to go forth. They know that the Lord has departed from them, and that it is not with them as in the days that are past. If such would only consider and search their hearts, they would find that they had commenced to trust in the momentum of past success, and to think that somehow the draught of fishes was due to their own fisher-experience, instead of being the direct gift of One who often traverses all the rules of art by a Divine knowledge and power.

We can easily suppose that Moses was in danger of a similar fall. For the last few months his career had been an uninterrupted line of success. He had brought the proudest monarch of his time to his knees with the cry of a suppliant. He had become very great in the eyes of priesthood and court. He had led the greatest exodus the world had seen or would see. The parted ocean, the submerged host, the song of victory, the fall of the manna, the evidence of his statesmanship and sagacity as a born leader of men—all combined to place him in an unparalleled position of authority and glory. As the triumphal ode puts it, "He was King in Jeshurun, when the heads of the people were gathered."

Was there no temptation in all this? Men warn others against temptations on which they have been at the point of sliding to their fall; and may it not have been from his own experience that Moses derived the caution given to the people, "Beware lest thou forget the Lord thy God, lest when all that thou hast is multiplied, thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God, and thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this"?

Great and good men are not proof against these attacks of pride and vainglory. We are none of us free from the tendency to sacrifice to our net, and burn incense to our drag, because by them our portion is fat, and our meat plenteous. It was for this reason that Paul gloried in his infirmities, finding in them perpetual reminders of his weakness which kept him low enough for God to choose him as the platform for the putting forth of his might.

It was probable, therefore, that God brought Moses to Rephidim to counteract and check all uprisings of self-sufficiency, to bring him down to the dust of abject helplessness, to teach him the narrow limits of his resources and ability. "Lo, all these things doth God work, that He may withdraw man from his purpose, and hide pride from man."

Whatever Moses may have been beginning to think, all self-confidence must have vanished like a wreath of mist among the hills when he found himself face to face with that infuriated mob, who broke through every barrier erected by gratitude, or patriotism, or self-respect, or memory of past deliverances, and with violence demanded water. "The people strove with Moses and said, Give us water that we may drink. And the people murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore hast thou brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us, and our children and our cattle with thirst?" And such was their irritation that they seemed ready to stone him.

Was this the way that they repaid his unstinted service for them? Did they not care for him more than this? Ah! he was not king of their hearts, as he had thought and hoped! And as for water, whence could he procure it? No wisdom or power of his could help in such a strait. Nothing that he could suggest would meet the case. He was absolutely at the end of himself, and "he cried unto the Lord, saying, What shall I do?"

It is a blessed position to which the providence of God reduces us when we find ourselves face to face with an overmastering necessity. Were it a brook we might ford it, but here is a river! Were it the thirst of a little child we might quench it, but here are two millions of hirsty souls! Were it for the water of earth's wells, we might begin to build aqueducts from the lakes that lie in the bosom of the hills; but here is thirst for the living water which issues from the throne of God and the Lamb! Then we learn the limit of our sufficiency. We cry, Who is sufficient for these things? And we confess that we are not sufficient of ourselves, to account anything as from ourselves, but our sufficiency is from God. We cannot make a revival; or save a soul; or convince a heart of sin, or break it down in contrition; we cannot comfort, or counsel, or satisfy the parching thirst. And when we have reached the end of self, we have got to the beginning of God. It is from the low threshold of the door that the life-giving stream gushes on its heaven-sent way.

II.—HERE WE LEARN MUCH ABOUT GOD.—This always follows the other lesson. We are brought to know ourselves that we may be prepared to know God. The Master always says, "Whence are we to buy bread that these may eat? how many loaves have ye?" not because He needs the information, but because He desires to bring his workers face to face with the utter inadequacy of their supply, and to prepare them better to appreciate the greatness of his power. But that question, eliciting the fewness of the loaves, is invariably followed by the demand, "Bring them hither to me," and by the heaps of broken victuals, evidence of the abundance of the supply. So at Rephidim the need which abases us and drives us to God reveals God.

We learn his patience. Not a word of reproach or remonstrance breaks upon the still desert air. If the people had been exemplary in their humble trust, they could not have met with more tender willingness to supply their need. The people, and perhaps Levi especially, proved Him at Massah, and strove with Him at the waters of Meribah, asking whether the Lord were among them or not, though the cloud brooded overhead, the manna lay each morning around the camp; yet there was no word of rebuke, only directions for the immediate supply of their need. It is only at Rephidim that we learn his patience towards ourselves and towards others, because He will ever be mindful of his covenant. "His mercy endureth for ever."

We learn the reality of his spiritual presence. "I will stand before thee upon the rock in Horeb." The people had just threatened to stone Moses, but God, in effect, bade him not to fear. It was as if He said, "Fear not, I am with thee; be not dismayed, I am thy God; none shall set on thee to hurt thee, for I am with thee to deliver thee; pass on before them, thou shalt take no harm; and this shall be a sign that I am actually there upon the rock, it shall gush with watersprings." Never before had God been more real to his servant than He was that day, when He rose up as a rampart to protect him from the infuriated crowds with their threatening stones. It is when men turn against us most, that the Lord stands beside, as He did to Paul, and says, Fear not.

We learn God's secret storehouses.—"Thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it." This is strange! A rock would seem the last place to choose for the storage of water. But God's cupboards are in very unlikely places. Ravens bring food. The Prime Minister of Egypt gives corn. Cyrus lets go the people of Israel from Babylon. The Jordan heals the leper. Salt makes poisoned pottage wholesome. Wood makes iron to swim. A Samaritan binds up the wounds and saves the life of the pillaged traveller. Joseph of Arimathæa buries the sacred body in his own new tomb. It is worth while to go to Rephidim to get an insight into the fertility and inventiveness of his providence. There can be no lack to them that fear Him, and no fear of lack to those who have become acquainted with his secret storehouses. "Eye hath not seen what God hath prepared for them that wait for Him, but He hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit."

That smitten rock was a type of Christ. A ock, indeed, stable amid upheaval, permanent mid change. A smitten rock! Reproach broke is heart, and the soldier's spear set abroach the lood and water, which have issued to heal the ations and quench their thirst. "They drank f that spiritual Rock that followed them, and hat Rock was Christ." There is no water that ill so satisfy thirst as this crystal Rock water. Rock of Ages, cleft for me."

III. THERE WE LEARN THE POWER OF PRAYER. -The tribe of Amalek was probably descended rom Esau, and, like him, was wild and fierce nd warlike. Were they likely tamely to submit to he intrusion of a new people into their pasture- nds and fastnesses, which they had succeeded n holding against Egypt? It was impossible, nd so, according to Josephus, this powerful ribe gathered to this spot all the forces of the esert, from Petra to the Mediterranean; and they smote the hindmost of the Israelites, even ll that were feeble among them, when they ere faint and weary."

If Egypt represents the power of darkness, malek is a type of the flesh, which, though horoughly defeated and broken, is always apt o crop up in moments of weakness and un- atchfulness. Far down the history of Israel laman, the Amalekite, had nearly compassed he annihilation of the whole people. It is in eeping with this typology that Saul was com- issioned utterly to destroy the Amalekites, and hat Jehovah solemnly pledged Himself to have ar with Amalek from generation to generation.

Moses, now eighty-one years old, shrank from he brunt of the battle. He entrusted the troops o Joshua, here first brought into prominence, whilst he climbed the hill, with the sacred rod n his hand. Thence he surveyed the battle, and tretched out his hands in prayer, fought with nseen combatants the livelong day, and won the ictory by intercessions, of which those steady rms were the symbol. It is a most beautiful icture. Three old men in prayer! Two staying p the third!

In Rephidim we learn the lesson, that prayer ill do what else were impossible. In earlier lays Moses would never have thought of winning battle save by fighting. He now learns that e can win it by praying. Probably Paul, too, earnt that lesson in his long and wearisome im- risonments. How they must at first have chafed is eager spirit; accustomed as he was to gird himself, and go whither he would. He may have ven been tempted to feel that all his power to ffect the destiny of the Church was at an end; hen he suddenly discovered a leverage by which e was able to secure greater results than ever; nd henceforth each epistle contains a reference o his prayers. Remember his recurring phrase, I never cease to make mention of you in my rayers."

We cannot compare ourselves with either of hese, save as Lilliputians might with a Gulliver, nd yet we may, at least, emulate them in their ntercessions. According to the prayers of a hurch are the successes of a church. Are they naintained, the banner floats on to victory; are hey languid and depressed, the foe achieves a ransient success. Let us, then, learn to pray, lling our Rephidims with strong crying and tears, btaining by faith for ourselves and others ictories which no prowess of our own could win. hese shall encourage us like nothing beside, lling our heart with joy, our lips with songs, nd our hands with the spoil of the foe. What eliverances might we win for our dear ones, nd all others who are strongly molested by the lesh, if only we were more often found on the op of the hill with the uplifted rod of prayer in ur steadied hands!

Bethany Church, Philadelphia.

MAJOR WHITTLE, assisted by Mr. Geo. C. Stebbin, began a series of meetings in Bethany Church, Philadelphia, January 3. This church of over wo thousand members, is the outcome of a Sunday-chool organised by Mr. John Wanamaker, then a usiness man, now Postmaster-General at Washing- on. He continues as superintendent of the school, oing from Washington to Philadelphia each Satur- ay to be present at the Sabbath services.

The church has had a large ingathering during he past twelve months under the pastorate of Rev. Wilbur F. Chapman. In spite of this fact, on the first night of the Mission fully fifty persons stood desiring an interest in the prayers of God's people, hat they might be saved. Mr. Wanamaker was present, and addressed the young men after meeting. The meetings have been well attended and much interest shown till the close on January 17.

THE FIGHT WITH UNBELIEF.

ONE who has met many sceptics in argument writes to us: "Atheism is a failure throughout the world. The leading infidel society has no meeting place of its own." This is doubtless true, but the correspondent goes on to show that though unbelievers may be disorganised as a body, the cloud of unbelief envelopes large numbers of people everywhere. Where there is not mental perversion and heart hostility to the Gospel of the grace of God, a spirit of indifference is abroad, arising largely from an impression that scientific investigation and historical criticism have so shaken the foundations of Christianity, that to reject its doctrines and disregard its institutions is only a sensible course for thinking people. A failure to grasp the real facts of the situation lies at the base of this state of things, for other ages have had their boasted victories of investigation and criticism no less than the present; but these do not satisfy the intellectual pride of to-day, any more than they upset the rooted convictions of believers at whom they were hurled when first launched upon the world of thought and speculation.

As the remedy for sin is the pure Gospel of Christ, so the remedy for the prevailing misapprehension and ignorance is light as to what the Gospel really is. Where there are doubts as to God and his revelation, a simple statement of the evidences on which the mind may grasp the truth, until the spirit realises it, may properly be circulated. Literature to serve this purpose should be plain and to the point, and for the perusal of thoughtful people, who are candid though distressed, we strongly recommend the "Present Day Tracts" of the Religious Tract Society (4d. each). About seventy in number, these publications, all from the pens of men of scholarship and weight, deal with a variety of topics, scientific, philosophical, theological, and critical. A list should be procured by Christian workers who have to deal with sceptics or doubters, for very often it will be found that the arguments of unbelievers have been fully and succinctly met by the able writers of this temperate and useful series.

The well-known pamphlets of Mr. H. L. Hastings, of Boston, Mass., are sufficiently charged with ammunition to silence most questioners. These pungent and powerful booklets have had a very large circulation—that on "The Inspiration of the Bible" being at present in the second million! Mr. Hastings originally issued his little works periodically in what he called the "Anti-Infidel Library," and many have laboured to send them all over the earth. Latterly some of the most valuable of the series have been republished in a penny form, and their character may be judged from their titles: "Who made the New Testament?" "Is the Bible a true Book?" "The Witness of Sceptics to the Truth of the Bible," "Friendly Hints to Candid Sceptics," and "Fourteen Nuts for Sceptics to Crack." Other publications well worth reading are: "A Warning Word Concerning the Spread of Infidelity," "Israel's Messiah; or, Why the Jews Reject Christ," and "Israel's Greatest Prophet." These, as well as budgets of "grape shot" leaflets for distribution at infidel meetings, may be had from Marshall Bros., 10, Paternoster-row, E.C.

In the same connection we may mention, too, the "Anti-Infidel" tracts and pamphlets of Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh, brother of the late infidel leader. His monthly magazine, The Anti-Infidel, is yet another weapon in the fight, published by him at 70, King's-cross-road, E.C.

Real service may be rendered to the cause of Christ by the dissemination of such literature, and we would strongly urge those who cannot distribute them, either in person or by post, to aid, with funds, those who can.

In days when some public teachers so misapprehend their duty as to sow the seeds of doubt broadcast, it is needful to remember that the ignorant as well as the learned are affected by the consequent evil tendency. To counteract the mischief, we advise our readers to spread the simple truth, and proclaim the unadulterated Gospel of Christ, the Light of the World.

EXETER Y.M.C.A.—Better premises have long been needed in which to carry on the work. Friends have now completed the purchase of King's College, off High-street, and alterations will at once be made to adapt it to the requirements of the Association. At least £3000 will be required. The General Secretary, Mr. E. D. Collins, 49, St. David's-hill, Exeter, is receiving promises of help.

CENTRAL AFRICAN NOTES.

SEVEN senior students have just lately left the Lagos Training Institution for missionary service in the Yoruba interior.

Latest letters from Uganda state that Rev. R. H. Walker visited Mengo from Budu in July, and Rev. G. K. Baskerville returned with him to Budu at the end of that month. Mr. Smith was at Mengo in September, and gave an encouraging account of the work in Busoga; the chief, Wakoli, was friendly, and the people anxious to learn. Mr. Smith was purposing not to return to Wakoli's, however, but to a place about three days' journey from Mengo, where the people had offered to build a church. Four Waganda Christians were to accompany him to labour at various out-stations under his superintendence; they were to be entirely supported by the Church in Uganda.

It is deeply interesting to find in Mr. G. L. Pilkington's latest letter from Namirembe (Uganda) the following evidence of the desire felt for instruction in the way:—"I have the names of thirty-six chiefs who have offered to build for and feed a European residing at their place. I could easily add to this list if I tried, but surely this is enough to show what is wanted. At most of these places a good number of the people have already learnt, or are learning, to read. The outlay would be (the missionary once in the country) next to nothing, and who can estimate the returns? The Baganda have already begun to go out to preach in other countries (in Busoga and Usukuma). I believe that, with God's blessing, this ought to be the centre of African Christianity, sending the messengers of peace East and West, North and South."

Dr. G. A. Wolfendale (L.M.S.), writing of his first year's service in the Urambo Medical Mission, in connection with the Central African Mission, now well established, states that he selected Kilonguli, situated on a hill three miles from Urambo, as the site for his own residence. Prior to going there he occupied temporary premises at Urambo, and treated a great variety of cases from far and near, averaging ten to fifteen per day. Even native doctors came to him, some for treatment, and others bringing their own patients. Many of the people in their ignorance scarcely know what thankfulness is, but he has been cheered by the thought: "Done to one of these, done to Me." "In my own mind," he adds, "I feel convinced that our work is not in vain." He has not, indeed, been entirely without manifestations of gratitude on the part of his patients, and those who have shown gratitude have been in thorough earnest. For example, "a poor old man came with a tumour which was giving him a great deal of pain, and gradually weakening him, wearing away his strength. I operated, and thus relieved him, and the poor fellow fell upon his knees and elbows, and with clasped hands and tears in his eyes, and a face full of gratitude and love, expressed in his native tongue his gratitude. I said to myself: 'Well, if only I see the spirit of thankfulness thus shown once a year, I shall feel rewarded.'"

Rev. J. C. Price, of Mpwapwa (C.M.S.), in a short account of an itineration made in September among the Wagogo, the people who are such a terror to caravans, says:—"I thought the people in Ugogo would have almost forgotten me, after being nearly three years without going to see them; but nothing of the kind. Almost everybody seemed to know me, and I was often asked why I had stayed away from them so long. Some remembered what they had heard on previous visits, and it was encouraging to be told, 'We are still holding on to Jesus Christ; we have given up Satan.' It would be difficult to know how far they spoke the truth; still, it shows they had not all forgotten—praise the Lord! The old chief of Msómalo seemed quite overjoyed to see me again; he took my hand in both his, and kissed it over and over again!"

MOTHERS' UNIONS.—The friends carrying on rescue work in Swansea held, on Wednesday in last week, the first gathering of the members of their mothers' union, when three hundred members sat down to tea, and the meeting was afterwards thrown open to all mothers. Between four hundred and five hundred listened attentively to addresses given by Lady Llewelyn (who presided), Mrs. Henry Trotter, Mrs. J. Allan Smith, and Mrs. F. S. Bishop. Such gatherings of mothers we believe do much good, as they tend to rouse the thoughtless mother to her solemn responsibilities which she has hitherto, in many cases amongst the poor, much neglected. Hence arises the need for rescue and preventive homes.

Mr. Moody's Schools.

Mr. D. L. Moody is desirous that the Press throughout Great Britain and Ireland should give publicity to the following facts with respect to his schools in America. This would enable him to satisfy many inquiries concerning them:—

By the goodness of God and the hearty aid of many generous friends, Mr. Moody has been enabled to set on foot a number of schools that are now in active operation as channels of blessing and help to many young men and women.

THE NORTHFIELD SCHOOLS

were the first to spring into existence. Mr. Moody was led to think first of the large number of young girls throughout New England of fine mental ability, but whose parents had not the means to give them a liberal education in the high-class schools of the land. Many of the keenest intellects in American communities are to be found among this class. He started a seminary at East Northfield for young girls, some twelve years ago. It began in a small way, but the Lord has greatly prospered it, and now there are about 350 young ladies from the ages of sixteen to twenty, largely from the New England States, being educated there every year. There is a three years' course of study, and a capable staff of lady teachers in the different branches. No pains is spared to secure the best talent in this direction. The school is established on a thoroughly Christian and evangelical basis, and practical religious instruction finds a prominent place in the daily studies of the pupils. Some of these young people, after graduating at Northfield, proceed to Wellesley College, near Boston, to Smith College, Northampton, and similar leading institutions, where they finish their collegiate course. They afterwards take up positions as teachers and as mission-workers at home or abroad.

Through the kindness of a friend, a school for boys was founded about a year later, at Mount Hermon, on the opposite side of the Connecticut River, and within sight of Northfield. It is intended for youths of sixteen to twenty, who have not had early advantages in education, who possess some force of character and show considerable promise as to the future. The course of training, from an educational and religious standpoint, is on similar lines to that in the girls' seminary. Practical daily instruction is also given in agriculture and in other forms of industrial occupation, so that the young men may be as fully equipped as possible for any branch of the world's work which they may afterwards take up as their life's career. Before being admitted to the advantages of the school, candidates must furnish good testimonials as to character. They are not restricted to America. Among those who have already passed through the Mount Hermon school have been a number of young men from Great Britain and Ireland. Some of these are now filling important posts in the United States as Christian pastors, and in many other departments of Christian work.

Mr. Moody specially wishes it to be understood that both these institutions are not in any degree orphan schools or reformatories; they are strictly confined to the helping forward of such young women and young men as are here described. The cost of board and tuition at either of these Northfield schools is £20 per annum for each scholar. That amount represents only about half the actual cost; the balance is made up by the sale of books and donations from Christian friends.

WINTER SCHOOL FOR DOMESTIC TRAINING.

The large "Northfield" Hotel recently erected in the village is closed to its ordinary visitors during the winter months, and Mr. Moody resolved to utilise it for a training school where Christian young women could be taught the different branches of domestic economy, dressmaking, and related subjects. The purpose in view is that when these young women enter on mission work among the people they may be well qualified to instruct mothers in the best ways of housekeeping, and to counsel them in making their homes healthy and attractive. This is a kind of practical Christianity that is greatly needed in all large cities.

THE CHICAGO SCHOOLS.

Some years ago, Mr. Moody established a Bible Training Institute in the city of Chicago. It has two sections. The ladies' department is under the management of Mrs. Canon a returned Indian missionary. Regular instruction is given in the truths of the Bible, and much attention is paid to training in Gospel song. The work of the ladies in the Institute is to visit the homes of the working people in the city and to carry the Gospel to the lapsed masses. There are many mothers with large families in the poorer parts of the city who never go to church. If they are ever to be reached with the message of the Gospel, it must be by godly women who can go into their homes, hold cottage and kitchen meetings, and attend them in their times of sickness. Some portion of every day is allotted to such work in addition to the Scripture training, and lady workers are, in that way, fitted for practical Christian work among the needy.

The men's training school is conducted in a separate building, where the students attend Bible lectures every morning. In the afternoon and evening they engage in some kind of actual mission and evangelistic work in halls or tents. This practical element constitutes the difference between the Northfield and the Chicago schools. Tuition and board at the Chicago training school are given to each student for £30 a year, which is only about half the real cost; the remainder is provided by the kind aid of friends of the work. One year's training will in most cases qualify the student for some post where that kind of work is needed. If students desire to go to the foreign field, they are better fitted for service there after having had practical training in mission work at home.

The Great World's Fair in Chicago, during 1893, will furnish such a wonderful opportunity for preaching the Gospel to men and women of all nationalities as is not likely to occur again in this generation. Mr. Moody strongly feels that while the world will be very active in providing numberless allurements in order to catch the people, the Christian Churches ought to be fully awake to their privilege and responsibility in taking the message of salvation to the perishing multitudes. He proposes to arrange for the carrying on of special Gospel effort in all parts of the city while the Fair lasts—in churches, mission halls, or tents, as may be found practicable. In order to sustain such a large enterprise many earnest-minded helpers will be needed, and Mr. Moody is hopeful that many young men and women in Great Britain, whose hearts are on fire with compassion for the unsaved, will come to his aid. Young friends of both sexes who desire to consecrate themselves to this service, if they were enrolled among the students at the Chicago Institute within the next six months, would be prepared for work among the thousands of strangers in the city by the time the Fair commences.

Such young men and women are invited to put themselves at once into communication with Mr. D. L. Moody, Christian Institute, Bothwell-street, Glasgow.

SURSUM CORDA.

Long lasts the night of sin,
Slowly the darkness wanes.
Oh! faithless heart, look up, rejoice,
The Lord Almighty reigns!

The weak are trodden down,
And none their cause maintains.
Think not their sighing is unheard,
The Lord Almighty reigns!

See China sore opprest,
Still suffering cruel pains.
Yea, One forgetteth not her cry,
The Lord Almighty reigns!

Shall Britain's Opium still
Reap its unrighteous gains?
Let that unholy traffic quake,
The Lord Almighty reigns!

Remember that for Him
Eternity remains.
A thousand years are as one day,
The Lord Almighty reigns!

At his appointed hour
The judgment He ordains.
The vintage shall be counted ripe,
The Lord Almighty reigns!

Then from our ransomed world
Shall rise triumphant strains.
"Rejoice! Ye Heavens, thou earth give thanks,
The Lord Almighty reigns!"

REUNION OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS

On Thursday, January 14, a meeting was held at the Wellington-road Hall, N., by special invitation, "that brethren and sisters who are engaged in active service for the Lord may have the opportunity of meeting one another for a season of fellowship, both social and spiritual, for the promotion of unity and brotherly love, for renewal of consecration, and for the glory and praise of God."

The number present fell decidedly short of what had been anticipated, only about eight turning up out of 140 acceptances. The time allotted to social intercourse prior to the general meeting in the Hall was a period of deep interest, those who seldom meet under conditions favourable for the purpose being able to give and receive experiences, and speak of the Lord's goodness, and "of his wonderful work to the children of men." Heart seemed to flow out to heart, and all toward the gracious "Author and finisher of their faith." At the meeting which followed there was no regular president, but Rev. Darlow Sargeant took the lead, and the great and glorious subject of "The Will of God" was selected as being of paramount importance as the centre around which it was requested that the remarks of the speakers would to concentrate.

Mr. H. W. Fry, as the nominal convener of the meeting, briefly explained the object of asking those present, and unfortunately others who were unable to come, to meet where they were; and bidding, in the name of Dr. and Mrs. Miller and the Wellington-road Hall friends, a most cordial welcome to all who were present, with most earnest desires and prayer that a very rich blessing might be the result of that evening's gathering. A season of heart-searching prayer followed, and the presence of the Lord was, indeed, felt by those present. Rev. Darlow Sargeant then more formally opened the meeting, leading into the subject selected. We do not intend to particularise the remarks of the various speakers, but cannot refrain from alluding to the telling and loving words of Mr. Crossley, of Manchester, on Christian tenderness, as being inseparable from the will of God. On the whole the meeting was a very helpful one, and it is to be hoped that it will prove only the first of the kind held within the great metropolitan area. The proceedings were interspersed by hymns.

Among those present we noticed Messrs. F. W. Crossley, T. B. Miller, C. Boardman, Frank Smith, E. Fox Butlin, Rev. C. G. Moore, Mr. Rendel Harris, and other well-known workers in the vineyard. Of those who had accepted, but were not present, were Mr. Russell Hurditch, Dr. McKilliam, Major Mackinlay, Dr. Latchford, Messrs. Reader Harris, A. A. Head, Sir Christian Dundas, Miss Mason, and others. Letters of regret at inability to be present were received from Generals Sir Robert Phayre and Sir John Field, Dr. Barnardo, Messrs. Gawthorn, Kirkham, J. E. Mathieson, Mrs. H. W. Smith, Dr. Maxwell, and others.

PREACHING ON BOSTON COMMON.

Mr. W. F. Davis, of Mount Washington, Chelsea, Mass., in a recent letter, says: "I have preached Christ publicly and freely on Boston Common every season but one during the past ten years, and have never asked a permit of the Mayor or of any other officers of the civil Government, as required by a wicked city ordnance. Not only is there no valid law against the free publication of God's Gospel on the Common, but there is no consistent and persistent attempt on the part of Boston city officials to enforce the prohibitory bye-law. The attempt was, indeed, made four years ago to frighten Christ's servant by thrusting me into gaol for a year. But at the end of eleven months I came out, and went straight to the Common and preached, and have preached there every season since, without asking permit of any one, having plain commands from God, such as have all who read and fully believe the Bible.

"This summer, for example, the police have repeatedly threatened with arrest, and that is all. Others who have preached on the Common this summer have also been similarly threatened. The startling deaths of a number of the most prominent persecutors of free preaching in Boston within a short time after my incarceration has checked the fearful blunder into which the priest-ridden politicians of Massachusetts led four years ago."

Days of Humiliation,

PRAYER, FASTING.

E Committee of Urgency appointed by the National Christian Anti-Opium Convention ondon has issued the following appeal to sters of Christ in Great Britain and nd :—

AR BRETHREN,—It has been said that Britain e known in history as the nation that made to sin. Yet who can say that our national is one of humiliation? Do we not the r thank God that we are not as other peoples God has exalted us with privileges, and in midst we are the guilty principals in the est crime against humanity that the world ver witnessed.

nguage is powerless to portray the miseries n Britain's hand is scattering over vast lations in Asia. Through the sin of our leged nation, millions of Asiatic homes have plunged into a depth of sorrow not less acute that which has recently overtaken the y of the heir to the British throne. Through in there ascends to the ear of God to-day, countless homes in India, Burmah, China, Malaysia, the heart-breaking sounds of ning, lamentation, woe! Do our countrymen usly regard these far-off peoples as of less equence than our own in the sight of the tor of us all, or as not possessing similar butes of affection? The Lord Jesus Christ s the depth of sorrow of which an Asiatic t is capable, for in the days of his humanity Himself groaned and wept at the grave of rus; and it was upon the Cross at dark ary that the heart of an Asiatic, howbeit the of God, broke beneath the weight of the of mankind. "For verily He took not on the nature of angels; but He took on Him eed of Abraham."

it nothing to Jesus Christ, who in his human nation "was in all points tempted like as are, yet without sin," and who now as the Priest of mankind is "touched with the g of our infirmities"—is it nothing to Him this privileged nation of ours, through our esentatives in India, is committing in cold d the unparalleled crime of tempting millions ose for whom He died, into the most im- us vice that is known to humanity? Shall lead before Him that it is done for revenue? have mercy upon us.

Britain will be known in history as the nation made Asia to sin." Mark the infamy of our ion. The drug which is grown, manu- ured, sold, and exported under the auspices ur Indian Government, is thus scattered dcast—for what purpose? For its only legiti- object, medicinal use? No. For purposes of uchery. We are engaged in a stupendous ness of panderers to the vilest and most de- tive passions. From the Government opium eries at Patna and Ghazipur in 1890, seven ts were issued for medical use (in the British y in India, &c.), and 57,526 chests were sent which had been specially prepared under supervision of two experienced and highly ied chemists, Government officials, for pur- of loathsome and degrading sensuality; the moral and physical massacre of beings ed in the image of God, and belonging to same race as those by whose hands God e his Holy Book—the race that produced great characters of sacred history, the archs, the prophets, and the first martyrs ne Cross. It may help us to measure the nt of our national sin if we consider the vast tual possibilities of the countless multitude ir victims.

der the deepest sense of our national guilt, in its essence and in its magnitude, a call has issued to three days of prayer at Exeter London, on February 8, 9, and 10.* The 's people throughout the United Kingdom nvited to observe these three days in their tive localities by congregational gatherings possible; but where that is impracticable, by prayer in the family and in private. our prayers be accompanied by whatever nal sacrifice our Lord is requiring of us, to bringing the terrible iniquity of the opium to an immediate termination, that thus sting may be not only of the letter, but of irit.

"It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed." "Let us search and try our ways, and turn again to the Lord."—We are, faithfully yours in the Lord's service,

BIRMINGHAM FACTORY GIRLS.

THE condition of many thousands of factory-girls has for some years occupied the minds of Christian workers in our large towns, and evening homes, or clubs, have been started where they may pass their evenings. A useful work has been successfully carried on during the past year in Chapel-house-street, Deritend, one of the busy manufacturing districts of Birmingham, densely populated by factory workers of the poorest class. An Evening Home, opened in 1890, showed such a necessity for the work, that at the commencement of 1891, enlarged premises were secured and opened as "The Young Women's Institute" and "Girls' Evening Home." Very bright and happy the girls look, sewing and knitting round the tables in the sewing-room, and enjoying a piano kindly given by a lady. Classes for cookery, dressmaking, and singing are also formed, while any wishing to improve in reading or writing are helped. An interesting Bible-class is held each Sunday morning and afternoon.

At nine o'clock each evening the work is put aside and a short portion of Scripture is read and explained, and prayer offered. The attention and interest of the girls are most encouraging. After prayers, coffee and cake are sold at the charge of ½d. A coffee supper, held monthly, is much enjoyed by the girls, and kind friends are generally found willing to entertain them. The first Annual Tea and Entertainment—held on December 30—was a great success. Much as has been done, the work is still in its infancy, and the Secretary feels the great need of more funds to carry on a home so much needed, so that she may be able to devote more time to visiting the girls. Communications should be made to Miss E. Marshall, Secretary and Superintendent, Young Women's Institute, Chapel-house-street, Deritend, Birmingham.

Mr. J. B. Wookey at Mildmay.

ON Tuesday evening last week a meeting was held in the Conference Hall, Mildmay, on behalf of Dr. Barnardo's Homes. Colonel Morton, who presided, spoke in warm commendation of the work. The musical boys from the Homes gave various selections of music.

Mr. James B. Wookey founded his remarks on the words, "No man gave unto him," and said the Church had much cause for thankfulness in these latter days, that the criminal and vicious poor are receiving attention and help to an extent never perhaps known in the history of the world. Very earnestly and tenderly did he plead for the children with their cry so weak and claims so strong. Unlike the prodigal son, thousands of them had never enjoyed the priceless privileges of a home; they were born in the "far country, and had always fed on swine's food." Yet they were amongst those for whom the Savior died. Mr. Wookey emphasizes the fact that the work of the Homes is something more than a gigantic humanitarian scheme for feeding the hungry and clothing the naked. It is pre-eminently a Christian effort to bring the children to the Lord Jesus Christ.

The address was illustrated by a series of beautiful limelight views, and the meeting, which was largely attended, was both interesting and profitable.

POOR JEWISH CHRISTIANS AND INQUIRERS.—The fifty-sixth anniversary of the Episcopal Jews' Chapel Abrahamic Society was held on Wednesday last week at the Chapel, Palestine-place, Cambridge-heath, E., Rev. A. Lukyn Williams, M.A., chaplain and president, occupied the chair. The honorary secretary, Mr. F. Spiro, having read the report and financial statement, Rev. J. H. Scott, M.A., rector of Christ Church, Spitalfields, delivered an address. To illustrate the need for this Society, he said that when a Jew comes out of Judaism, and therefore is cast off by his friends, and practically stands alone in the world, he very naturally looks to those who brought him to the knowledge of Christ to help him in case of need. Christians cannot answer such an one that they have a purely spiritual work in hand, and therefore cannot help him in his straits. They must help such, and thus show that sympathy which Christ teaches. To search out good cases, and to help them as the Society does, is the best form of charity.

NEW SAILORS' REST AT GENOA.

SIXTEEN months ago we read of the changed condition of the Genoa Harbour, of the transference of the floating Bethel to Naples, and of the purchase of a house on shore which was to be transformed into a Sailors' Rest when funds could be found. The response to the appeal was prompt and generous, and the Rest has been opened, though at a cost of £5000, practically free of debt.

The inauguration service was on Sunday, January 17, when Rev. Donald Miller preached, as the Master did of old, from the text, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Captain Clucas and another Christian Captain prayed for the blessing of the Lord to rest on the building, and the Sailors' Rest was dedicated.

Monday night saw two hundred people, half sailors, half shore friends, assembled to hear how it had come about, and what were to be the uses of the striking-looking edifice. That, the Chairman, Mr. J. R. Young, happily and graphically explained, while the Consul-General of Sweden and Norway, the German and the Waldensian Pastors spoke of what they, too, hoped to do in these rooms with their sailor fellow-countrymen. Then followed music, songs, and recitations, a foretaste of what may be expected on Friday evenings.

The building is peculiarly adapted for its purpose, and all readers of THE CHRISTIAN who may pass through Genoa are asked to pay a visit to the Sailors' Rest, 15, Via Milano. Prayer also is asked that this house may not have been built in vain, but that God's richest blessing may rest thereon. Thanks are rendered for the widespread response to the appeal made in these columns for reading material.

WORK AT CAMBERWELL.

THE Schools and Mission at Toulon-street, Camberwell, is really one of the oldest educational and evangelistic stations in London. As a charity-school it attracted the notice and the patronage of the late Duke of Sussex, a son of George III., more than eighty years ago. Later on, towards the middle of this century—or what may be called the heroic age of ragged-school effort—this Nelson-street School, as it was then called, was an enterprise which delighted the heart of the late Earl of Shaftesbury and Judge Payne. During recent years the original building has been taken down to give place to a more commodious pile better adapted to modern requirements, the hon. secretaries being Messrs. John Kirk and A. H. Ward, of the Ragged School Union. Like many of the other older stations, the work here has now developed into one of a really comprehensive character. It was here that we first became acquainted with Sunday morning breakfasts to the unemployed, followed by an earnest evangelistic service, and which, though a depressing sight to look upon, have been followed by good results.

The work is now carried on by seventy voluntary helpers. The Sunday-school meets twice a day, in addition to a service in the morning; and there is a Gospel service for adults in the evening, when the hall is well filled. The mothers' meeting attracts a goodly company on Mondays, and on Tuesday the City missionary conducts a people's service. The Bible-readings by Miss Poor, on Wednesdays, have become so much appreciated that the conductor was last week presented with a writing-desk by way of testimonial. The Band of Hope and a Temperance meeting occupy Thursday evenings, and this is followed on Thursday by the Christian Band. There is a Lads' Club, which meets every night, and on Wednesdays, during the winter, dinner is given to three hundred children who do not get enough at home. There are, besides, Bible-classes and prayer-meetings, the whole being supplemented by a penny bank, a library, and various clubs. Efforts are being made to hold a bazaar in May, with the object of raising two or three hundred pounds in aid of the work, which at a recent meeting was cordially advocated by Mr. J. R. Kelly, M.P., and Rev. W. R. Mowll. The hon. secretaries at 37, Norfolk-street, Strand, answer all inquiries.

BRIGHTON.—Owing to the continued success which has attended the labours of the Bute-street Mission, at Brighton, it has been decided to erect a new hall capable of seating three hundred people. The Mission began in 1876 in a carpenter's workshop.

h day at 11 a.m., 3 p.m., and 7 p.m. In consequence all being otherwise occupied on the evening of the the closing meeting will be held at the Friends' g House, 52, St. Martin's-lane, Charing-cross.

THE OUTLOOK IN IRELAND.

(FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The present religious condition of Ireland is deeply—indeed, intensely, interesting. During many centuries the Irish Kelt and the religion of Rome seemed so suited to each other that he would have been pronounced a false prophet indeed who foretold their separation. Not alone was the priest the spiritual guide, but he was the parish dictator as well; while, owing to the isolated position of Ireland—"a wart on the chin of the universe"—clerical tyranny excited no public attention. The change in this respect has been rapid beyond expectation, and perfectly marvellous in its dimensions. A well-equipped and ably-edited pair of journals—one a morning, the other an evening sheet—are now in very extensive circulation, and their principal raison d'etre seems to be to drag the petty despotisms of the Roman Catholic clergy from the obscurity of village life into the glare of public notoriety.

The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin has, during several years, been writing on all sorts and conditions of things. From the report of a meeting of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, held in Westland-row Roman Catholic Church, one would gather that he might usefully have employed his superfluous energy nearer home. Rev. I. O'Malley, the administrator of the parish, informed the handful of persons present that while Westland-row parish has a Roman Catholic population of over thirty-two thousand, the subscriptions for 1890 amounted to only £35 8s. 7d. This, it seems, is the smallest subscription on record. In 1887, it amounted to £65 11s., but there has been a regular fall every year since. The same remark applies to the workers under the society. "In 1880, thirty-four visiting members were enrolled, now it can only count upon eight or nine to co-operate in the active work of visiting the sick poor of the parish." This does not convey the impression that Roman Catholicism is flourishing in Dublin.

The Independent has unearthed a very suggestive letter, written by Canon O'Mahony, a parish priest, living in Cork, a few days before the recent election in that city. It has been again and again denied that the priests interfere in Irish elections any more than ordinary citizens. This letter proves conclusively that Canon O'Mahony was the wire-puller from beginning to end. He says, in writing to a friend: "I think Flavin is the strongest man we could get. I had considerable difficulty with his domestic ruler, before the veto on his going forward was removed. We have called a 'convention,' consisting of our friends on the public boards, and all the members of the National Committee of last December, and the members of the Federation, to be held in the Imperial Hotel at one o'clock to-morrow. Pat Dunne is to propose Flavin, and Clanchy will second him, and he will be supported by Christopher Dunne. All clerical dictation will thus be avoided. We will then hold a meeting in the Hall here in the evening, and give it to those ruffians hot and heavy." Flavin was the clerical candidate at Cork. Every detail was arranged by Canon O'Mahony, who adroitly pulled the wires while laymen danced before the eyes of the public.

Very many of the Roman Catholic clergy do not seem to realise the altered aspect of affairs, and fancy that a little extra coercion will bring the people to their knees. Thus, Dr. Nulty, Bishop of Meath, heaps abuse upon the people of Waterford because they rejected Mr. Davitt, the clerical candidate. "A little more than two years ago," he says, "the people of Waterford would welcome and receive Mr. Davitt with open arms. But the citizens of Waterford had not then parted with their senses, and their political action was then guided by the principles of reason, religion, and patriotism." Then, the Irish Catholic, an organ specially favoured by Archbishop Walsh, recommends that there should be "embodied in any Catechism in general use in Ireland, some enunciation of the obligations of Catholics as citizens and electors which have been added in many of the dioceses in France." This is the very thing against which the French Ambassador at Rome protested, in a recent interview with the Pope.

Ireland at present is in a state of transition, and either additional glory for Christ and his Church, or a deeper degradation for thousands of Irishmen will be the outcome. At the present moment there are thousands of Roman Catholic Irishmen in Dublin alone who have ceased to go to mass or sacraments, and are among the most intense priest-haters in Christendom. What is to become of them? Are they to go the way of Continental infidels, or are they to be one day reckoned up by Christ among his most precious jewels? The Christian people of Ireland have responsibilities cast upon their shoulders of immense magnitude. The Christian people of England have their obligations too in this matter. Do they love their Irish Roman Catholic brother? Do they pray for him? Christ died for him. He has been born and reared in darkness and error, while they had the priceless privilege of an open Bible won for them by the blood of their martyred forefathers. The future no man knoweth, yet it would seem as if in the wonderful providence of God, while England is being torn and rent by Ritualism and Rationalism, Ireland was going to find her way back to her old allegiance—to the pure Gospel. May God hasten that glorious day! It is worth praying for; it is worth labouring for. "Behold He cometh." "Even so, Amen!"

SCRIPTURE READERS FOR IRELAND.

Preaching in Christ Church, Leeson Park, Dublin, a few days ago, Rev. Anthony Elliott, M.A., said: The Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland works alike among Protestants and Roman Catholics in the South-East and West in Ireland, and the Readers belong to the humbler ranks of life, and understand the ways and language of the people; thus they are admirably suited for reaching both their hearts and their understandings. They are earnest, godly men; they visit the sick and comfort those in trouble, and, not engaging in controversy, they receive a cordial welcome wherever they go. The average cost of the Readers is £55 per annum.

The number of the Readers is limited, because the funds provided for their support are limited. But, added the preacher, at the present moment no money can be better spent, and no evangelical effort more judiciously directed than that which is carried on through this instrumentality, which is warmly to be recommended to everyone who loves Ireland, and who desires to see the knowledge of the blessed Gospel spread among the people. The secretary of the Society is Captain J. Kearney White, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin.

NOTES FROM CHICAGO.

There is a general feeling of revival abroad among the churches here. Large numbers are giving in their names as having found the Saviour.

Our Chicago brethren are still vigorously working away on the World's Christian Congress for 1892. It is coming into shape slowly, and will certainly be intensely interesting.

The vigour of the Sunday-school work here is something worthy of note. About one new church a day has been dedicated during the past few weeks, some of them very fine structures. Growing congregations and flourishing Sunday-schools are gathered.

Miss Frances E. Willard has been very ill for some weeks at her home in Evanston, near Chicago. The funeral of Miss Ames, assistant-editor of The Union Signal, was conducted by Miss Willard, and the strain was too much for the noble worker.

The magnificent Woman Christian's Temperance Union building is under roof, and inclosed. An army of men are hastening the completion of the interior, which will be the first of its kind in the world, and one of the finest buildings in Chicago.

Lady Henry Somerset has made a powerful impression on the Chicago elite. It is a benediction to find one of high social rank possessing the true spirit of Christianity. She has won our estimable Miss Frances Willard, and the two are planning for more aggressive work in the Lord's vineyard.

Rev. Lewis N. Beaudry, of the new French mission work, called from New England to open Gospel service among the French, died of pneumonia, and is greatly missed.

CIVIL SERVICE PRAYER UNION.—The annual meeting of this Union was held at Exeter Hall on Monday week, Mr. Stephen Bourne occupying the chair, in the unavoidable absence of the president, Sir Arthur Blackwood, K.C.B. An excellent address was given by Rev. F. B. Meyer on "The Indwelling of the Spirit," and the meeting was made an occasion for special prayer and humiliation in consequence of the epidemic now raging.

DUBLIN HOLINESS CONVENTION.

The fourth annual convention for the "Deepe ing of Spiritual Life" was held in Dublin la week. The attendances at the various meetin were large. Owing to the regretted absence Mr. R. Wilson, Rev. E. H. Hopkins presided.

At the forenoon meeting on Tuesday the ke note was struck by the Chairman, "The need God's presence in our midst." In the afterno Rev. Hubert Brooke gave a Bible reading the responsibility of Christians to God as th Master. In the parable (Luke xvi.) Christ bukes the steward, not for having kept his goo but for having wasted them, therefore for bei dishonest. The speaker referred to the th classes of stewards mentioned in Scripture first, wise; second, faithful; third, good. Wi towards man, faithful towards God, and go towards his own heart or conscience, a "perfe heart." In the evening Mr. Sloan present three thoughts contained in Phil. ii. 5 (R.V.) T mind, humiliation, and obedience of Christ.

On Wednesday afternoon Rev. H. Broo spoke of God's people as priests, and enlarg upon the privileges and conditions of the prie hood. On Thursday afternoon a special meeti was held for ladies, at which an earnest addr was given from John xiij. 1 to 8, by Rev. Battersby, Christ teaching Peter the lesson humility. First, true humility will never h back from taking any position Christ has to gi or means us to take; false humility considers t details of ordinary daily life too common for G to have anything to do with. The second less was that Peter must yield to Christ, whether understands what Christ is going to do or n The third lesson is that the consequence of r permitting Christ to wash his feet would be have no part with Him.

The conditions of Christians walking wi God was also dealt with by Mr. Brooke. Fi agreement about three things—namely, t starting-point, the course of the walk, and t goal or end of the walk. It is impossible walk without such an agreement (Amos iii. The Cross is our starting-point, the course is o whole life, the goal is God's manifested gl hereafter. Rev. F. S. Webster spoke on Psa xxvii. 4. The single life, or life with one desi has its issues. "To dwell, to behold, and inquire." Mr. Brooke dealt with the th aspects by which God is known to his peop Isaiah xxxiii. 22, "Our Judge," "Our La giver," "Our King."

On Friday evening a parting word was giv by Mr. Hopkins, taken from Matt. v. 16: "I your light so shine," &c. A praise meeting w held on Saturday morning, at which many b testimony to having received blessing and h during the Convention. Afterwards, a missio ary meeting, presided over by Mr. Battersby, which the claims of both home and foreign m sions were pleaded for by Rev. Thomas Connell and by retired and out-going missionaries Africa, Ceylon, and Palestine. A special meet for children was also held, in connection w the "Children's Special Service Mission," a the large gathering of little ones was earnes addressed by Mr. Williams and Dr. Turner.

The Late Mr. Ahok, of Foochow.

It has been suggested that the most suits memorial of this earnest servant of God, would b build a new wing, for the reception of women, to hospital at Foochow, which in his lifetime he l so much, and to which he devoted so much of time and money. Such a building is greatly nee and would be the means of obtaining access to m houses, and many hearts, now unreachable.

Mrs. Robert Stewart, 7, Waldeck-avenue, Bedf writes: "If the Christian friends in England Ireland, who listened last year with such deep terest to the words of our dear Chinese sister, w give but a trifling sum each towards this ob the needed money, about eight hundred pounds, w soon be raised. A lady with some medical trai has gone to China to take charge of this branch o hospital, and over one hundred pounds has alr been contributed towards the new building.

SHAFTESBURY MEMORIAL.—Mr. C. Er Tritton presided last week at the annual meetin the Shaftesbury Memorial Mission Hall, U street, Borough, when addresses were delivere Mr. R. K. Causton, M.P., Mr. H. J. Millner (Treasurer), Mrs. Lynn, (representing the Ra School Union), Mr. P. Belsham, and Mr. Wardl missionary. The secretary read the annual r and statement of accounts, showing a defic £12 14s. 10d. in addition to outstanding liabiliti £9 17s. 6d.

For the Young.

READ YOUR BIBLES.

In our obituary is a short notice of the life of General Sir Arthur Lawrence, K.C.B. We cannot refrain from giving a memorable incident in his useful Christian life, for it may be suggestive to others similarly situated. When quartered at Halifax, in 1844, a young officer, in the heyday of youth—tall, handsome, with a singularly bright and prepossessing countenance—the most popular officer in the regiment—joined Lawrence's battalion. Captain and Mrs. Lawrence were greatly drawn to this young officer, and in October, 1844, they sent him an invitation as follows:—

"Dear Hammond,—We purpose devoting an hour on Saturday evening to reading the Bible with ——; and if you will join our party after mess it will give us great pleasure. At the same time, I would not wish you even to send an answer to this should you not feel inclined; or, if you should feel disposed to come to us this evening, that you should consider yourself the least tied to do so the following Saturday. We feel the value of these things, and we would gladly share them with you."

Maxy Hammond went, and the outcome of this Bible-reading was his conversion. From that year till he fell at the assault of the Redan, in September, 1855, Maxy Hammond's life was wholly consecrated to the service of that Saviour who had redeemed him, and whom he loved with all the affection which his ardent nature possessed.

If Maxy Hammond is a bright star in the crown of Sir Arthur Lawrence, both speak from their graves to young people (Hammond was little over twenty years of age, and Lawrence over only fifteen years older when this incident took place), and teach us to read and study our Bibles, to neglect no opportunities of helping each other, and to follow the Lord Jesus closely, earnestly, and lovingly unto death.

TWO BEARS.

Possibly some of the little folks who read this story have often listened with great delight to the marvellous fairy tale of "Silverlocks and the Three Bears."

It is not this I would tell you, but of a family of children, who heard that a great King who lived in a far-off country had issued a proclamation that he would send two beautiful white bears to any one who would ask him for them, provided the message was sent by an earnest, trusty messenger.

So these children sent the request to the King, and their parents promised, if the petition were granted, they would find room for the bears in the house.

One day, when they were all engaged in a grand game of hide and seek, the bears arrived. Everybody gave them a most joyful welcome, as well they might, they were such beautiful, perfect creatures, so docile and loveable. Wherever the children went they went too, and all were glad to have them. Mother never refused them a place, even at the dinner-table. They joined in the children's games, and often accompanied them to school, indeed, the teachers were always glad to see them come, and did not mind how much they walked in and out among all the school children.

But there was one peculiarity in these bears. Whenever their little companions quarrelled they immediately disappeared, and never came out of their hiding-place till peace was restored.

And they did not eat the same food as other bears. There is one called the Sloth, which is so lazy, that if it climbs a tree it does not trouble to come down again till it has eaten all the leaves and bark, and stays there till it is so hungry, it is obliged, from sheer want, to come down to look for more food.

Then there is another—a great, black bear, and if you were to meet him he would probably stand up on his hind legs, take you in his front paws, and give you such a hug, it would squeeze all the life out of you, and then he would devour you for his dinner.

But the two white bears did not eat that kind of food. Each day the children had to send a message to the King, who, in return, sent them just enough for the day. They were never hungry, except the children forgot to ask for their supply, and then they soon discovered their neglect, for the bears kept in some hiding-place, and they were always unhappy without them.

Thus they grew up together as inseparable companions, and as years rolled on, and the children merged from boys and girls into men and women, and left the homestead to form homes for themselves, the mother said, "Even if she were compelled to lose her sons and daughters, she could not spare the bears; she had grown so fond of them, that she hoped they would live with father and her till the end of their days."

So, as each member of the family settled down in their own home, they sent a request to the King for two white bears, and it was never denied.

But it is a singular fact that wherever the two bears went they were always called by the same names—Bear and Forbear!

And, dear children, if you, too, would send a message to the King of kings by the trusty messenger, Prayer, He would also send the two bears to help you, and be your daily and hourly companions.

> Prayer makes the darken'd cloud withdraw,
> Prayer climbs the ladder Jacob saw,
> Gives exercise to faith and love,
> Brings every blessing from above.

CHILDREN'S MISSION AT WANDSWORTH.

Special services for young people were held in the Presbyterian Church from January 24 to 29 by Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, of the Children's Special Service Mission. Although the numbers attending were much affected by the prevailing epidemic, there were many tokens of Divine blessing, the meetings all being characterised by earnestness and solemnity, and the interest and attention leaving nothing to be desired. It is believed that teachers and scholars alike have been helped and strengthened by the Mission.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., Feb. 7, Matthew ii. 1-12; Mon., Feb. 8, ii. 13-23; Tues., Feb. 9, iii. 1-17; Wed., Feb. 10, iv. 1-11; Thurs., Feb. 11, iv. 12-25; Fri., Feb. 12, v. 1-16; Sat., Feb. 13, v. 17-32.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. H. Hutchinson, St. John's, Highbury, Feb. 5 at 4.30 p.m.; Finsbury-park Congregational Church, Feb. 7 to 12; Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, St. Mary's Hall, Merton, Feb. 7 to 17; Mr. Livesey Carrott, Athenæum, Camden-road, every Sunday at 3 p.m.; Mr. E. Arrowsmith will conduct a Mission at Lecture Hall, Union Chapel, York-place, Oxford-road, Manchester, Feb. 6 to 21; Mr. Josiah Spiers will spend February in visiting Orphanages in and near London.

MISS ANSTEY and the KOLAR MISSION.

Miss Anstey, whose long and faithful service, at Kolar, as superintendent of the Faith Mission endeared her to many, has, since August last, had a home at Bangalore for Eurasian boys and girls, in which there are now sixty-four children. Writing in December, she remarks: "We received our first gift from England by last mail," and it seems to have been peculiarly welcome by reason of the fact that food has been at famine prices during the past month or two. The circumstances, we are informed, under which the work at Kolar was handed over to the care of Bishop Thoburn, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, have in some quarters been misunderstood. In order to remove such misconceptions, Miss Anstey has sent us a letter from Rev. A. H. Baker, Richmond Town, Bangalore, in which the various steps taken to ascertain the wishes and views of the native members, and the scrupulousness shown by Miss Anstey in avoiding any action likely to influence unduly any one concerned, are minutely and clearly detailed. We do not feel it needful to give this letter, but we think well thus to note the facts of the case.

With regard to the present state of the Kolar Mission, we are assured that evangelistic effort is going on earnestly and extensively, and that there are healthy tokens of growth and fruitfulness manifested in the various branches.

ON SIBERIAN ROUTES.—A colporteur of the Russian Bible Society (supported by the American Bible Society) has recently made a journey through Siberia, travelling four thousand miles and circulating upward of ten thousand copies of the Bible. He found copies of the Scriptures which he had left at various post-offices two years before, and that almost all showed signs of having been read by travellers along that route. One person in Irkutsk said that he had read the whole Testament through by reading a portion at each station. Some of the copies were so worn that it was necessary to replace them with fresh ones.

THE STORY OF AFRICA.

Until quite recently, stories of Africa were as rich in conjecture as the maps of the Dark Continent were lacking in scientific authenticity. To-day, however, "the Last of the Continents" is occupying a foremost position in the interest of Christian philanthropists, and is absorbing at the hands of civilised humanity the attention demanded by a "new world." Explorers have passed through the land which had been reckoned impenetrable, and peoples and tribes and languages which had never been conceived to exist have been discovered, and in some cases heralds of the Gospel of Christ have taken up residence in their midst.

This being the case, Messrs. Cassell are not behind the time in bringing out The Story of Africa and Its Explorers, by Dr. Robert Brown. The first monthly part has just been issued, accompanied by a beautiful map, showing the routes of the principal travellers and European possessions and spheres of influence. The many volumes that have of late years been published with regard to Africa have been so over-weighted with details of scant interest, that a work giving the cream of the romantic story will be welcome on all hands. This "Story," with its many illustrations, promises to meet a specific want, and we trust it will do much to excite Christian enthusiasm in the evangelisation of the continent.

In the introductory chapter we have a brief description of Africa as it was supposed to be, and as it actually is. During recent years much has been done to open up the country. Dr. Brown says: "There are steamers on the river down which Stanley canoed in 1877, Europeans of all sorts at the court of the savage king whom Speke and Grant first introduced to the outer world just thirty years ago. Post runners and ladies in Sedan chairs travel in perfect safety over the route between Bagamoyo and Tanganyika, which Burton first saw in 1858; railways are being surveyed between the east coast and the great lakes, and one is actually being built from the Portuguese colonies on the western side; and a recent traveller tells us of a 'pink-faced baby, in a British perambulator, whom he encountered on the shores of Lake Nyassa, which was not on the map of East Africa when the father of that child and the writer of these lines were 'boys together.'"

Dr. Brown tells us that within the shores of Africa—11,277,364 square miles, exclusive of Madagascar—there are 164,000,000 people, speaking more than six hundred languages and dialects. His reference to the labours of the missionaries makes us thirst for the graphic pages which subsequent parts of the work will doubtless devote to them and their work. We sincerely hope that this story will do much to direct attention to the spiritual needs of Africa. It may sound the Divine call to some to take up the mantle of missionaries who now rest from their labour; and others will, we trust, be stimulated to sustain those who, in various divisions of the field, are telling the negro and his neighbours of Jesus, and praying that the time may soon come when "Ethiopia shall stretch out her hands unto God."

Miss De Broen's Work in Paris.

Miss De Broen, the well-known foundress and honorary superintendent of the Belleville Mission, Paris, feeling the need of obtaining more systematic help for her work, and of extending and stimulating interest in it, has appointed Mr. W. Waters as travelling deputy for this country. Friends can render great assistance by giving Mr. Waters opportunities of laying before them the many interesting phases of work in connection with the Mission, and Miss DeBroen hopes that any who can lend their drawing-room or arrange a public meeting will write to him at the London office of the Mission, 4, Horbury-crescent, Notting-hill-gate, W. A very pleasant evening can be spent in any town or village by arranging with Mr. Waters to exhibit the magic-lantern slides of scenes in Paris and in the Belleville Mission. As he is now making engagements for February and March, communications should be made with him at once.

Miss De Broen also intimates that Mr. Waters is authorised on his tour to receive donations or subscriptions for the Belleville Mission, for which he will always give an official receipt.

REV. W. D. DALYRMPLE.—In reference to the paragraph which appeared on page 8 of our last issue, we are informed that Mr. Dalrymple died over a year ago; and while he suffered from leprosy, it was not "contracted while attending lepers."

A STEPNEY SLUM.

A few days ago the Ben Jonson-road Mission celebrated its eleventh anniversary, and the occasion was used by Mr. Jas. Taylor, the superintendent, to take some of his friends on a brief visit to a few of the residents in the neighbourhood of his work.

In a room, ten by twelve feet, occupied by a man and his wife, with her aged mother, and partly sublet, was discovered the dead body of a child awaiting burial. At the foot of the stairs, underneath the room just referred to, was a cellar, at the end of which a fire threw out light just sufficient to show that the dismal and damp den was inhabited. At one corner were some rags serving as a bed, and the whole of the household effects consisted of a few tin pans for cooking. In this place were four children—namely, a girl of nine in a ragged calico dress, a boy of seven with a short pair of trousers; another boy of five quite naked, save for a jacket which covered back and arms; and an infant partially in some tattered garment. The parents were out, trying to earn something wherewith to get food.

Space would fail for the detail of other and not less frightful discoveries. Occasionally, however, in the very midst of degradation and misery, homes were entered which were surprisingly clean and orderly. These were invariably occupied by avowed Christians, using their scanty means wisely, and—like Paul the Apostle in his prison—turning circumstances which might be productive of bitterness into occasion of joy.

It is no wonder that many of the poor are driven into a life which has no regard for the future, either for time or for eternity. Then, too, house-owners and employers take full advantage of the helplessness of the poor. Thus, between the upper and nether millstones of their own ungodliness, and the avaricious iniquity of others, the poor of large cities become an increasing reproach and peril. Indiscriminate charity will not meet the case, nor will anything else short of the grace of God. The most stringent enactments will not, without adequate support from Christian sentiment, suffice to make the rich deal justly towards the poor. No; the hope of humanity is not Cæsar, but Christ.

As the visitors retraced their steps respect for Mr. Taylor was apparent on every hand. There are unmistakable signs that he, and his good wife who so ably assists him in the work, are acknowledged as friends even by those who decline the Gospel message. His history is known throughout the district. In his life of sin as a dock labourer he was arrested by the death of his mother, and under the ministry of Pastor Archibald Brown he was found of the Saviour. Then he sought to reveal the truth to others in the darkest haunts of vice. In Stepney Market on Sunday morning, and to the amazement of buyers and sellers, he knelt in the open street, and implored God to guide him to the best measures for compassing the salvation of those around him. From that time he entered upon an evangelical mission, in which he received the encouragement and support of several good men, whilst the poor and the abandoned welcomed his devoted ministrations on their behalf. The Princess Louise and the Princess Christian are patrons of the Mission, and Mr. Richard Cory has become its president for the current year.

House-to-house visitation, street-preaching, distribution of Gospel literature, personal dealing with the unconverted, and the relief of the destitute,—all these things are energetically prosecuted in connection with the Mission. The lady superintendent, Miss A. Daw, is indefatigable in her efforts among women and children, and, under her management, the Clothing Club, strange as it may appear, has become self-sustaining—a fact which she accepts as an outward proof of inward Gospel influence.

Mr. A. Garstin presided over the annual meeting; Mr. Taylor related how converts had been made, and recounted some of the many blessings which God had vouchsafed upon the work; and Mr. John Harvey spoke hearty words of commendation based upon long acquaintance with the work and its founder. Communications to Mr. Taylor should be addressed to him at 28, Cressy-place, Stepney-green, E.

THE CONDITION OF CONVENTUAL ESTABLISHMENTS.

In a Conference of Protestants, held at Shoreditch Tabernacle on Monday morning, January 25, a resolution was adopted expressing approval of the movement initiated by the Protestant Alliance, for promoting petitions for the appointment of a Royal Commission of Inquiry into the condition of conventual institutions in this country, and in favour of such means as shall secure the due observance of the law and the liberty of the subject. Any person who is willing to help in obtaining signatures should write at once to the Protestant Alliance, 9, Strand, W.C., or to any of the undersigned (enclosing a few stamps for postage), and tracts upon the subject, with petition forms and full instructions, will be sent:—

Rev. Archibald G. Brown,
Pastor of East London Tabernacle;
Rev. W. Cuff,
Pastor of Shoreditch Tabernacle;
Mr. W. J. Orsman, L.C.C. (Costers' Mission),
Milton House, Shacklewell-green, E.;
Mrs. Arbuthnott,
Hon. Sec., Women's Protestant Union,
Plaw Hatch, East Grinstead;
E. Fromow, Esq.,

BIBLE SOCIETY NOTES.

Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to accept a copy of the New Testament in the Motu language of New Guinea. This is the first New Testament in the language of Her Majesty's latest subjects. The version was begun by Rev. J. Chalmers more than ten years ago, and has been completed by Rev. W. G. Lawes, who has borne a distinguished part in bringing "the Golden Isle" under British rule. The Port Moresby dialect, in which the version is made, is in the mother tongue of about five thousand natives, but it is the best known of the various languages along the coast, and the missionaries have resolved to make it the literary language for the entire island from Possession eastward. As it will be the language of commerce it will doubtless become the victorious and standard language of New Guinea.

An encouraging instance of the help afforded to the Society by the working-classes is given by the undenominational mission in Crossley Hall, Openshaw, Manchester, under Mr. Macknight, pastor, which seeks to evangelise the masses outside of al churches. The working people of the district, to the number of seven hundred or eight hundred or more, assembled at the various services and meetings in this fine hall, contribute generously to the Bible Society, the Church Missionary Society, the China Inland Mission, North Africa Mission, London Missionary Society, McAll Mission in France, and various philanthropic objects, such as the support of the poor, the Consumption and other hospitals. During 1891 the Bible Society has received over £22 from its friends at Crossley Hall.

The annual meeting of the Helpers' Association—a recently-formed auxiliary to the Bible Society, similar, in some respects, to the Church Missionary Society Gleaners' Union—took place on Tuesday, January 5, when a review of the work of the year was made. In the accounts given there was much encouragement. Many tokens of interest in the work of the Society were manifest. Mr. W. H. Harris has been elected President of the Association, and it is confidently hoped that accelerated progress will be made under his guidance.

MISSIONS ON THE CONGO.—On Thursday last, January 28, Rev. C. Ingham, who has spent over ten years in missionary work on the Congo, delivered at the Y.M.C.A. Rooms, Kingston-on-Thames, an interesting lecture illustrated by maps. The chair was taken by Mr. William Dixon, who has also been a missionary on the West Coast of Africa. The lecturer described the condition of missionary work at Banza Mantcka, and the surrounding districts on the Congo. It is evident that a steady work is in progress amongst the tribes surrounding the Mission stations. But it is also equally clear that the Congo missionaries labour under very great difficulties. Not only have they to contend against the climate and mysterious sleeping sickness that has decimated the native church at Banza Mantcka, but the passage and evil deeds of depraved Europeans form a serious barrier to the progress of the Kingdom of God amongst the Africans. Nevertheless, the Lord has given his servants great encouragement and there is promise of much blessing to come. The Chairman fully endorsed by his own experience what had been stated. He also expressed the opinion that in due time a great revival would take place amongst the native converts that would give a great impulse to the carrying of the Gospel into the interior.

BRIGHTON Y.W.C.A.

A public meeting of the Brighton Y.W.C.A. was held at the Hove Town Hall, Brighton, on January 27. The Countess of Chichester, who presided, in her opening remarks, said that the work of the Y.W.C.A. had, for a number of years, been very near to her heart. She referred to the basis of the Association as being "a living union with Christ," showing that it had therein followed the example of the wise builder and built upon the rock. After glancing at the world-wide influence of the Association, Lady Chichester referred to the fact that it had been for thirty years at work in Brighton.

In the absence, through illness, of the President, Secretary, and Lady Superintendent (Miss Hedley), a very interesting account of the local work was given by Mrs. Gregory, showing that there are in Brighton and Hove six branches, all doing good work. Included in this is a Bible-class for ladies, as well as those for young women in business, and servants. There is a very large and flourishing class at West Brighton, held on Sunday afternoons, chiefly for servants, but largely attended by others, presided over by Miss Annie Meyer. At the Central Branch, Victoria House, 51, Old Steine, there is accommodation for forty-eight boarders and five hundred passed through during last year, while seventy new members have been added to the roll. In summer holiday time the applications for admission are often so great that many have to be refused. The boarders' fees have been steadily increasing since 1885. But we all know that to this part of the question belongs an outgoing as well as incoming side, and it is to be regretted that there is a far less encouraging report of the income, derived from annual subscriptions and donations. These, on the other hand, have been steadily decreasing, with the result that, whereas in 1883-4 they amounted to £238, last year's report shows a record of only £125 from this source.

It was to stir up local interest on behalf of the branches that this meeting was held, and Mrs. Gregory made a special appeal for fresh annual subscribers. An interesting address from Miss Morley, of London, gave to those present a clear and comprehensive idea of the general work of the Y.W.C.A.

The Southsea Mission.

Mr. John Denning has issued a "Brief Record of Ten Years' Service for the Lord in Southsea," telling how, after sixteen years' labour in Somerset and Devon, he was led to pitch, in 1880, his Gospel tent on Southsea Common, leading by-and-by to permanent mission service in a new hall in King-street as well as in the tent during the summer months. Much interest also attaches to the accounts given of the Bible carriage and the Gospel tent work. He says: "For about twenty-six years now my whole time has been given to this most blessed work, and during the last ten years I have been in this town, thousands of houses have been visited, and souls of the healthy, sick, and dying continually been dealt with, and work amongst the fallen has been done at midnight and at other meetings, and in other ways; and much open-air preaching and tract distribution among the crowds at racecourses, reviews, regattas, on public holidays, &c. I have also frequently held missions in different towns, &c., as doors have been opened from time to time, with encouraging results.

"As to the financial part of the work, I would say my firm conviction, from my earliest days of Christian life, was that if the Lord needed my services, He was not only able, but would certainly provide for all that I needed, and by the grace of God I was able to start on this principle twenty-six years ago, and I can say He has never disappointed me; man has often done so, but He never has, and I can speak to the praise of his name; if I had to live over the time again, I would not, as far as his dealings with me, have had it different." Communications should be sent to John Denning, Myrtle Cottage, St. James'-street, Southsea.

WORKING LADS' INSTITUTE, WHITECHAPEL.—A meeting for special prayer is to be held in the Conference Room on Thursday next, Feb. 6. We hope that all who can attend will do so, and cheer our friend in his good work.

PROTESTANT DISSENTERS IN RUSSIA.—The several funds that have been opened for the relief of starving Russian peasants include one in connection with Mr. Hohenberg's Mission. Protestant Dissenters receive no help from funds that are officially administered, so that outside help is very urgent. Mr. Thomas Martin, writing from White-hill, Crowborough, Wilts, is receiving donations in aid.

MISS MARIANNE FARNINGHAM, in connection with a series of "Sunday Evenings for the People," specially designed for those who do not attend the ordinary administrations of the Gospel, addressed an audience of two thousand persons, which closely packed the Guildhall, Plymouth, last Sunday. Touching allusion was made to the illness of Mr. Spurgeon, his death not having then been announced, and the large assemblage showed manifest tokens of sympathy.

MISS ELISE SANDES,

THE FRIEND OF SOLDIERS IN IRELAND.

Miss Sandes comes of a good county family of Kerry, in the south-west of Ireland, and is the daughter of the late Mr. Stephen Creagh Sandes, of Sallow Glen, in that county. The great revival of 1859, which reached in some degree the whole of Ireland, brought salvation to her father's house, and in later years her home extended its hospitality to many Christian workers whose names are still prominently before the public.

When Miss Sandes was ten years of age one of the evangelists happened to ask her the question: "Do you love God?" "No," she replied, "I am afraid of God, but I do not love Him." Listening to an address, subsequently, on 1 John iv. 10: "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us," she learned the love of God, which dispelled her fears, and gave her peace and joy in believing. Other events early in her life's experience pointed to the future service to which the Lord was directing her course. A school companion in Dublin, Miss Marie Fry, held classes nightly for the band and drummer-boys, and this had the effect of suggesting to her some form of definite Christian work.

On leaving school she felt an earnest desire to enter upon a path of service for God, and in due course His providence opened the door, and pointed the way. Her mother, Mrs. Sandes, was led to hold a class for soldiers at her own house, and her daughter, Elise, assisted at these meetings. They, however, increased so rapidly in numbers that it became necessary to take a room in the neighbouring town of Tralee, and this was furnished as a reading-room for soldiers and policemen. The work here went on for about nine years, a minister of the Gospel, well known in the East of London, being one of the trophies from the ranks. During these years Miss Sandes had learned to leave everything for her Lord's sake. Not only the world, which is properly relinquished by the true Christian, but also legitimate society in which her talents and gifts would have given her a distinguished place, was also abandoned, that she might devote herself entirely to Christian work among the soldiers.

About this time the claims of Cork, where there was a large garrison, were presented to her mind. Earnest prayer had been going up from the hearts of Christian soldiers who had attended the meetings at Tralee that something of a similar kind might be done for their many comrades in Cork. Miss Sandes brought this to the notice of a friend, who spontaneously took for her a private house. Leaving her luxurious home, and leaving it, we may say, for ever, Miss Sandes went to Cork to occupy one small, scantily-furnished room in this house, the remaining apartments of which were used as a Soldiers' Home. She now gave herself up to hard work of every description, shrinking from nothing that her hands could find to do, in order to curtail expenses and keep the house over the heads of the soldiers who sought refuge within its walls.

In a short time she was joined by another Kerry lady and friend, Miss M. A. Stokes, who, possessed of a similar spirit, laboured devotedly for the salvation of the soldiers. Many were their triumphs and many their trials in their new home. The work of a single day included correspondence, visitation of the hospital, the married quarters, and the barrack-rooms, with notices of forthcoming meetings; the evenings were occupied by conversations in the reading-room with individuals and special cases, often till beyond midnight. In 1880, to her great sorrow, her dearest friend and fellow-worker, Miss Stokes, passed to her reward, leaving a vacancy never to be filled again in her heart or home.

(From a Photograph by Messrs. Guy and Company, Limited, Cork.)

Soon the private house, with even another, which had been taken for sleeping quarters for soldiers on furlough passing through the city, was found to be too small, and Miss Sandes gave herself to prayer for a larger and more commodious building. After some trials of faith, her touching record of the work done in the private house moved the hearts of several friends. The funds were found, and the Home, which now stands on Lower Glanmire-road, was erected and opened before Christmas in 1885. The new place offered a happy Christmas greeting to many a Christian soldier who received an invitation to spend it there, away from the many temptations and trying scenes of the barrack-room and other places of resort. In this Home Miss Sandes found wider scope for her untiring labours among the soldiers. The cheerful reading-room was the resort of many who cared nothing for religion, but it gave opportunity for quiet talks, that led many a soldier to the meetings, and eventually to Christ.

Very numerous are the testimonies to the value of the Home, and the following may express them all:—A sergeant-major said: "It is a regular heaven for a soldier; the greatest boon he has ever had." And from foreign lands and distant scenes, from the camp and the battle-field came words of grateful, touching acknowledgment to Miss Sandes and her fellow-workers, from those who had found a refuge in Christ amid the scenes of fire and blood and tumult.

Soon, however, a severe trial was in store for this indefatigable worker. Several things combined to bring this about—unceasing labours and excessive nervous strain being amongst them. In the permissive providence of God there lay a most important reason. Like many other diligent workers, the work itself had become the supreme end of her life, and devotion to the soldiers overshadowed devotion to her God. In love, her heavenly Father allowed the ill-course of overwork to bear fruit, and about the middle of 1886 Miss Sandes was completely laid aside. Very gloomy was the prospect of the future. The best medical authorities declared her unfit for work during life, and held out no brighter hope than that of permanent invalidism.

At this period one precious text of Scripture vividly impressed her mind: "And I will bring the blind by a way that they know not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them and not forsake them." As is frequently the case, the bodily ailment was attended with severe spiritual trial and temptation—sleepless nights giving place to days of weariness and gloom. Later on, her attention was directed to the subject of Divine healing, and in the end of 1886 she crossed to England in a very precarious condition. After staying for a time at various places, she reached Rutherford Lodge—a home of rest for Christian workers at Worthing, on the South Coast. Here she met some friends who had considerable influence upon her future life and service. It was here that the end of the dark valley through which she had been travelling was at length reached. She learned to give herself away to God in a new consecration, to trust with a new faith, to bring to Him her whole spirit, soul, and body, sickness and circumstances, and to trust Jesus to save, heal, and deliver. Almost immediately the crisis was passed, restoration to health proceeded steadily, and her spiritual darkness and trouble were dispelled by a new-found joy in her Saviour and God. With brighter hopes and fresh joy she returned to Cork in March, 1887.

About this time a friend brought to her notice the claims of Belfast, where there was a large garrison, but no Home for the soldiers. Miss Sandes was unwilling, on account of her still feeble strength, to attempt to open a fresh field of labour, but, having in a measure been committed to it by her friend, who had seen gentlemen of influence in regard to the enterprise, she visited that city in July, 1887 In a short time she found many kind friends in the bright, prosperous Metropolis of the North. The people of Belfast responded nobly to the call for funds to establish the Home, and last March the commodious and handsome premises in Clifton-street, having passed out of the hands of the builders, were thrown open in a quiet way to the soldiers of the neighbouring garrisons.

On September 23, H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, accompanied by Lord Wolseley and Staff, in the presence of a distinguished and brilliant assembly, formally opened the Belfast Soldiers' Home. On that occasion His Royal Highness bore striking testimony to the value placed by the military authorities upon the work which Miss Sandes has been enabled to accomplish. In the course of his speech he said that "Miss Sandes, to whom he was happy to be introduced that day, had been most successful in establishing that Home in Belfast, as she had done also in other parts of the country. He thought the public, the official public like himself, and the Commander-in-Chief in Ireland, should express their sense of appreciation of the work of so excellent a lady, and he did so with pleasure." Lord Wolseley also gave expression to his high and cordial appreciation of the efforts Miss Sandes was making for the weal of the British soldier, adding that "she had done a noble work."

About the same time, the Committee of the Soldiers' Home at Dublin, finding that for various reasons the institution there was failing in its usefulness, persuaded Miss Sandes to undertake the superintendence. In a similar way the Homes at Dundalk and Fermoy have come under her care. Simultaneously with these events, a Home at Queenstown, which friends there had in contemplation for some time, and for which they had raised funds, was started in a temporary form, Commandant-General Davies rendering practical support to the institution. These in all make six "Homes" for the soldiers in Ireland which the grace of God has enabled one little woman to found or take under her superintendence.

Faith has often been sorely tried in efforts to find suitable workers to fill responsible positions in these various fields of self-denying Christian labour. May this sketch of what one life has already accomplished, stir up the hearts of some others to devote themselves to this singularly interesting department of work, for the glory of God and the salvation of the sons and brothers of many a loving mother and sister far away from home, and exposed to the fiery temptations of military life.

PRESSING MISSIONARY CALLS. — Of four candidates recently accepted by the Committee of the Missionary Bureau (1, Gresham-street, London, E.C.) Two, Mr. and Mrs Allen, were chosen for work among the aboriginal tribes of Eastern Bengal, and two to act as colporteurs in and around Bombay. Applications were also before the Committee from Mr. John Yair, who has been called to work in Jamaica, and from Mr. Geo. Eveleigh, Cape Verde Isles, who wishes a substitute to be sent. Both he and his wife greatly need a change to England, but cannot leave till relief arrives. To enable the Committee to send out these six workers there will be required a sum of £300.

PECKHAM-PARK MISSION.—For the past fourteen years Mr. Lewis Wood has carried on this Mission, and he reports that he does not remember a time when the distress in the district was so general or so severe. He writes, "As I visit the homes, I am continually finding whole families without food and firing, and destitute of almost everything. In order to get bread, many have sold or pawned even their bedding. We are giving over four hundred meals, every week, of bread and soup to poor children besides groceries, &c., to deserving families." The work of this Mission is well known to me, and I beg to commend its claims to the practical sympathy of your readers. V. J. Charlesworth.

Keswick in Winter.

BY J. E. BUDGETT MEAKIN.

Snow lies on all the Cambrian hills—pure, spotless, white, and untainted by the smoke of busy haunts, untrodden by the foot of man. Where once we gathered in the Keswick tent to wait upon the Lord, silence now reigns—that hallowed spot in Nature's winter mantle wrapped. The glinting sun strikes feebly now where once it burned. The lakes are bridged across with crystal, and the boughs above the roadway droop with ice. The ring of skates on Derwentwater takes the place of splashing oars, and Friar's Crag, in hoary grandeur, is as silent as the tomb. Whatever Keswick was in summer, it is none less beauteous now, for winter lends its own peculiar charm, since God has planned it all.

How one unfathomable Love pervades the whole! How one creative mind is visible throughout! Instinctively one's thoughts go back to when the place was full of seekers after truth—when every corner swarmed with happy faces, Bible in hand and God in heart. Did Keswick possess aught at that time which it lacks at this? Was the Holy Spirit's work confined at any time to this fair spot? Thank God, his gifts are everywhere, at all times, and for all men; the same if we but ask for them in faith, in spirit, and in truth. His blessing may be ours, and we may learn as much amid the piercing blasts of winter or the darkest clouds of woe, as when the summer sunbeams gladden or our fondest hopes are ours.

What would this landscape be when spring returned, but for the rest of winter, but for its icy coverlet protecting all below? Forced inactivity and days of tribulation are to us as needful—when they come—for 'tis an all-wise Father's hand that sends them. How often the coldness of human friends draws us closer to the Friend of friends. It is when we feel the frozen side of selfishness that we appreciate most fully the true warmth of Him "who pleased not Himself," and are reminded of our duty to be like Him.

And trouble is often a shield for us. Many a temptation is drowned by sorrow, and many a proud thought levelled. In health and happiness we may forget our constant need for prayer and watchfulness, but in the time of sickness we remember that we are but dust. The ice that covers yonder lake protects the fishes and the water flowers beneath, and so our trials often hem us in, and keep our faith alive. The bite of poverty, though hard to bear, is precious too, for the temptations of the rich increase with riches, and grow daily more insidious.

Hark! How the wind whistles through the tree tops. Down from that gorge below Skiddaw sweeps that subtle unseen power. We know not whence it cometh nor whither it goeth, but we see what is wrought by it. Such is the Spirit of the Holy God, a mighty, rushing wind, which fills us with a heaven-born strength and love, and overcomes all obstacles. Such, too, is the keen blast of adversity, inexplicable to our feeble minds, but part of one great plan for our well-being. The whirlwind, which would have carried us off our feet, but for the strong arm holding us up in slippery places, teaches us to rely more implicitly upon that sure support, just as its dealings with the oak trees' boughs make its roots strike deeper for security. And as that dalesman on the hillside there crouches beneath that grey rock's lea until the storm be past, so may we shelter beside a Great Rock in a weary land, for He who watches over us will stay his rough wind when the east wind blows. Not only shall no temptation, no trial overtake us but such as is common to man, but we have the assurance that all is tempered to our strength, and that in the might that is not our own we shall come forth as more than conquerors.

The sun is sinking o'er the hills, another short-lived day is nearly done, and starry night will soon be here. So shall the daytime of our earthly lives depart, and all the opportunities for good and bad shall cease. But as that sun shall rise, so man shall rise, for Christ has risen. Hallelujah! As the germs of springtide's beauty sleep beneath the fall of purity, so shall we sleep until the glad beams of the resurrection morn shall melt away our bonds, and we shall rise to be with Christ for evermore. Oh, death, where is thy sting?

The sunset is succeeded by the shimmering moon, night's opal beacon shedding fresh glories on the glistening scene. Then one by one the stars come out in all their scintillating brightness all the clearer for the frosty atmosphere. And so, as one light pales, another rises on the Christian's pathway, even his tears as lenses opening up new vistas to his gaze. Whether at home amid harmonious fellow-soldiers, or at work in desert wastes, he still perceives his Leader's footsteps, feels his touch, and hears his gentle "Follow Me." Rejoicing, sorrowing, summer and winter, he sees the Master's hand in everything around him, for all nature cries, "Lo, God is here."

Keswick, January 8.

MOVEMENT IN GIRONDE.

"If I could divide myself into four parts, and preach twice every Sunday in four places, I could not manage to satisfy every demand. During the whole winter I have held meetings in seven different villages, and new prospects open before me." Such is the cheering and solemn news that comes to us from St. Aubin-de-Blaye (Gironde), a little place in the south of France, near Bordeaux. The people are all Roman Catholics. Having been left without a priest for some months in 1886, they sent to the Protestant congregation of Bordeaux, and asked for a pastor.

A first meeting was held in the dancing-hall, attended by sixty persons. The work soon proved very serious, so much so that in August, 1890, a young and enthusiastic minister settled in the village. This was the starting-point of a most remarkable movement in all the country, one village after the other begging for the pastor. Over fifteen hundred Catholics heard the glad tidings for the first time. In the fairs religious topics became the favourite theme of these peasants, an echo of the Reformation times!

The young congregation of St. Aubin is in sore need of a place of worship, and its devoted minister has a real claim upon the sympathy, the prayers, and the help of his brethren, when he says to them, in the words of the Psalmist: "The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad. . . . O, magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together." Communications may be directed to M. le pasteur Alexandre Faivre, à St. Aubin-de-Blaye, Gironde, France. Pastor Theodore Monod, 36, Boulevard Henri IV., Paris, speaks of the excellence of the work, and may be referred to by interested friends.

ISLE OF SHEPPEY.—Branches of the Isle of Sheppey Y.M.C.A. have been established at Queenborough and Minster, the former with twenty-two members and the latter with eighteen members. The report of the Sheppey branch states that during the year the membership has increased from fifty-five to ninety, and at the annual meeting it was stated by the chairman, Mr. J. Chapman, that he had been personally told by several soldiers and sailors that it was through the Y.M.C.A. they had found Christ.

THE EVANGELISTIC MISSION.—The annual gathering of the Haverstock-hill Branch of the Evangelistic Mission was held on Thursday, 28th ult., at Malden Hall, and drew together a large and representative company of prominent leaders in evangelical work. Among those present who took part in the proceedings were Colonel Morton, Revs. John Wilkinson, F. B. Meyer, Dr. T. Neatby, and Messrs. Robert Paton, J. G. M'Vicker, and T. R. Miller. Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, who presided, asked united prayer on behalf of Her Majesty and the other Royal mourners. The eighteenth annual report showed that every department of this branch of the Mission is in a flourishing condition, and the warmest testimony was borne by the various speakers to the importance and success of the work of the Mission

The Revival in Scotland.

(BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

THE PERTH MEETINGS.

There are few towns in Scotland of an equal size more closely associated with the religious history of the last half century than the fair city of Perth. When the Duchess of Gordon, of blessed memory, departed this life, the annual Christian conferences held in her park, near Huntley, were transferred to a more central point near Perth. For a number of years the Perth Conference was the rallying ground each autumn for many of the most live and earnest-minded Christians throughout the kingdom. Conferences have vastly multiplied within recent years, but it is not to be forgotten that at Perth the flame of spiritual zeal was kept lit when in other parts of the country the Christians slumbered and slept.

With such a history it is not to be wondered at that Perth gave the evangelists a cordial welcome, and that large masses of people came together to get a share in the spiritual warmth that is generated wherever Mr. Moody holds high the flaming Gospel torch, and Mr. Sankey scatters the truth on the wings of the sweetest song. Perth would fain have secured more than two days, but that was all the evangelists could spare in fairness to other parts of the county. With the exception of a discourse in the Established Church on Sabbath forenoon, all the meetings were held in the City Hall. Here, on Sabbath morning, Mr. Moody exhorted workers to faithfulness from the story of Daniel. At four in the afternoon he faced a crowded audience of women, and at seven another crowded gathering of men. Meetings were also held Monday afternoon and evening, so that altogether, besides after-meetings in the evenings, Mr. Moody gave six of his red-hot sermons either to saints or sinners. Mr. Sankey, of course, sang on each occasion, not excluding the Sabbath forenoon service in the Established Church. Mr. Fleming, the pastor, for some reason or another, was not sympathetic when the evangelists were in Perth before, but this time he heartily joined with his brethren in the ministry in inviting and co-operating with them. The fact that our American friends are eagerly welcomed back after the lapse of years by all their old friends, and by new ones as well, is the best answer to the stray carping critic who crops up here and there. On Monday afternoon Mr. Sankey was accompanied by Mr. Bell, of Montreal, in the singing of that beautiful and heart-moving Gospel message—

Though your sins be as scarlet,
They shall be white as snow.

Another worker at Perth was Lieutenant Tapp, of Woolwich, who felt so interested in the Scotch work that he obtained leave of absence for a time and joined the evangelists to help in the after meetings. Perth is better off in respect of workers than many places which the evangelists have visited, but after a stirring appeal by Mr. Moody there are almost always many more anxious ones than there are helpers to point the way to faith and peace.

Since the departure of the evangelists the meetings were continued, for the first two nights, in the City Hall, afterwards in Free St. Leonards. Rev. M. Murray, of Glasgow; Mr. Robertson, of the Carrubbers' Close Mission; and Mr. McCracken, of Belfast, were speakers on the first two evenings; Rev. G. H. McGregor, of Aberdeen, spoke on Thursday and Friday. Last Sunday was the Quarterly Communion in most of the churches, and the City Hall was again opened for an evangelistic meeting in the evening.

A WEEK OF FLYING VISITS.

Since they started out in this Scottish campaign, Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey certainly have not allowed the grass to grow under their feet. Last week, however, they probably reached high water mark in the number of places visited. A Perthshire ministerial newspaper critic evidently thought he had scored a great point against the evangelists when he described them as "peripatetics." He got the best possible answer from a fellow minister, who said that in that respect they were only treading in the footsteps of the great Exemplar, Jesus Christ, who continually "went about doing good."

The beautiful county of Perth has been the scene of the past week's labour with the exception of a re-incursion to Fife for the closing day. On Monday the evangelists closed their work in the Fair City. On Tuesday morning they went northwards to Alyth, and after a single service there, drove to Blairgowrie for the afternoon and evening. By Wednesday afternoon they had reached the picturesquely situated town of Crieff, where two meetings were arranged. Next morning there was an early start by carriage for Auchterarder, where one of the most interesting and hopeful meetings of the week was held. A further five miles' drive brought them to the ancient little town of Dunning—a sort of modern "sleepy hollow," and there the Gospel was preached and sung afternoon and evening. Another early drive on Friday enabled the evangelists to get from Bridge of Earn to Ladybank in Fifeshire in time for an eleven o'clock service, and the working week was rounded off by two meetings the same day at Auchtermuchty. Eight different centres of population reached within the compass of five days; surely a unique record!

To those who know the workers it is not necessary to say that all this hurry implies nothing hasty or slipshod in the work. Mr. Moody has declared, time and again, that there is no spot on the world's surface where the way of salvation is better known and understood intellectually than in Scotland. It is almost like carrying coals to Newcastle for a preacher to come from another hemisphere to declare the Gospel message in Scotland. What the people in this land of Bibles and catechisms and Sabbaths and sermons really need is to have their dormant knowledge set in motion, and brought to a dúe and decisive issue. And this is what Mr. Moody has been striving to do with all the urgency of his native and national character, and all that passion for souls and for reality in Christian life with which God has so richly endowed him.

PLAIN SPEAKING TO CHRISTIANS.

One of the undoubted secrets of Mr. Moody's success is his great plainness of speech. He speaks as bluntly and outspokenly to the half-hearted Christian as he does to the procrastinating sinner. On Wednesday afternoon at Crieff, in the Free Church, he gave a very deep-cutting discourse on Conformity to the world. The futility of attempting to live a double life, and the misery that falls to the lot of "border Christians" were very tellingly and practically depicted. As the fruit tree that grows by the roadside gets more stones and sticks than all the other trees in the orchard, so the professed Christian, who tries to live hand and glove with the giddy world is a target for both sides, and gains the respect of neither. In his last sermon at Perth Mr. Moody dwelt on the importance of a faithful ministry. He urged that Christian parents, for the sake of their children, ought to bring them under the influences of sound Gospel teaching; if their minister was one who flattered his hearers, and did not deal faithfully with their souls, let them get out of the church, even though their family had attended it for generations. That was pretty strong and bold advice to give in a denomination-loving country, but the wisdom of it cannot be gainsaid.

A NOTEWORTHY FEATURE of the week's work has been the frequency with which the meetings have been held in buildings belonging to the Established Church. The same thing, indeed, has been true of the campaign from the beginning. Out of the Highlands it is rare to find a Free Church minister who does not heartily join in this evangelistic crusade, but there are here and there ministers of the Establishment who are such strong believers in "the authorised channels" of grace that they refuse to countenance what they call American importations, or irregular methods. But the extent to which the ministers of denominations that are, in certain matters, antagonistic to each other, have heartily united in rallying round the evangelists, has been a very happy feature of the work. Nobody seems to think of sects or parties while the Mission lasts; Jesus Christ is all in all. How far this delightful unity exists after the special effort has passed away one can scarcely surmise.

is a place of special interest in connection with the visits of our American brethren. Some eighteen years ago they held a solitary service there in the summer time, but that single testimony was blessed in leading to decision not a few which since have been adorning the doctrine of Jesus Christ by active work in their own community. Some of them were there to greet the evangelists on their return, and to thank them for the impetus given on that beautiful summer day, towards holiness and heaven. Several rather remarkable cases came to the knowledge of the workers on this day's visit to Blairgowrie. A man who had been in soul-concern prayed that morning that he might be consciously converted that day. He attended the meetings, and was able to step into the light of assurance. A well-to-do husband and wife were both in a state of anxiety at the close of one of the meetings. Both were dealt with, and the husband came so clearly and firmly out on the side of decision that the workers had scarcely left him before he joined himself to another anxious inquirer, and began to point out that way of life on which he had himself entered but a few minutes before. To some that may seem "almost too quick," as Mr. Moody would say; but there is a beautiful reality and naturalness about it which carries one back to the day when Peter, having met the Lord, went at once and invited his brother Andrew to join the ranks of the disciples.

The evangelists were greatly helped by the fine choir at Blairgowrie, led by a leading business man in the place, who had inspired the singers with something of his own consecrated enthusiasm. A warm-hearted and skilful choir leader can do much to oil the wheels of the Gospel chariot.

CRIEFF

is generally associated for its far-famed hydropathic establishment, which so many find a place of refreshment both to body and to spirit. The sojourners at Dr. Meikle's institution were greatly interested in the visit of the evangelists, and prayer-meetings were held by the more earnest spirits for a rich blessing on the work. United prayer-meetings were also held in the town. The two large meetings on Wednesday were held in the Free Church and Established Church respectively, with an evening overflow in the United Presbyterian Church. There were good after-meetings both afternoon and evening, and a good impression was evidently made on many. An interesting fact was the presence at the evening meeting of a little band of very intelligent youths, who are boarding at the local Academy, who came with their master in charge. Those who were conversed with showed a very hopeful interest in the truths that had been proclaimed.

AUCHTERARDER

was the next point of attack, and the single moving meeting here was regarded by Mr. Moody as one of the best of the whole week. The message, which was a very searching one, gripped the people, as abundantly evidenced in the short after meeting, when a number gave in their names. By some strange oversight Auchterarder had been left out of the original programme, in favour of Dunning, a much smaller place. Through the energetic representations of Rev. D. Colvin, the Free Church pastor, and the ready compliance of Mr. Moody, a morning meeting was arranged for at short notice, and the mistake was happily repaired. The local factories were stopped for the time to enable the workers to attend, and, altogether, this little town, which is historic in the birthday annals of the Free Church of Scotland, is not likely soon to forget the passing call made by the American brethren.

The meetings at Dunning, Ladybank, and Auchtermuchty were all marked by real interest, but there is not much that specially calls for notice. All of them were smaller centres of population than most of the places visited, but the districts round about sent their quota of expectant and eager hearers, who gave the utmost attention to preacher and singer, and showed all the customary signs of being impressed by the words of truth spoken and sung. Mr. W. Robertson, of Carrubber's-close (whose hearty and valued help during the greater part of this campaign has placed Mr. Moody under a deep debt of gratitude to the Edinburgh Committee), remained at Dunning to keep up the interest for an evening or two; and Mr. Colvin, of Auchterarder, was to lend a hand on Sabbath last. The following up has also been, or is being, energetically seen to at Kirkcaldy, Dunfermline, and other places, but we have not space for details in this issue.

MR. MOODY INTERVIEWED.

It is not often that Mr. Moody is lured into the net of the newspaper interviewer, but last week at Crieff he had a conversation with the special representative of The Scottish Leader, whose full and judicious daily reporting have had a universal meed of praise. As this interview covered a good many points of interest in connection with the progress of the movement, we make some extracts from it:—

"Where our work," said Mr. Moody, "has been preceded by preparation, and followed up by some good man, on whom the people could all unite, the results have been very gratifying and satisfactory. I have more confidence now in regard to the outcome of our visit than I had expected to have. Of course, if there has been nothing done before we get to a place, and nothing is done after we leave, eternity alone can tell what the results may have been."

"There are some places which can be very highly spoken of?"

"Yes; for example, Aberdeen, Dunfermline, Dingwall, Nairn, and Wick. There were good results there, because our work was followed up.

"You are being well supported by the clergy everywhere," I remarked.

"I can readily say we have never had such support from the ministers as we have had on this occasion. All branches of the Church are supporting us very cordially. I really cannot understand how we are receiving such united help; and we have hardly had any complaint. I should like to say in particular that the Established Church is more with us to-day than when we were here before. It might be said that the half of the time Mr. Sankey and I have been evangelising has been spent in Established Churches. That speaks well for the evangelistic spirit in the Church of Scotland."

"You have always had splendid congregations?"

"Yes, we have; and what has surprised us greatly is the large churches that we have come across in the more outlandish districts. We had no idea that such capacious buildings could have been found. The only defect was the scarcity of accommodation for meeting with inquirers. We need separate halls for the more efficient carrying on of this particular work."

"Something was said of your coming to a different Scotland than you came to previously?"

"Yes, some of the papers said we would find a 'New Scotland.' But we have not realised that. On the contrary, we have found Scotland more cordial than ever, and, as I have said, our hands have been held up in a way that is most encouraging."

"Then do you think that Scotland was ripe for this revival movement?"

"Well, we never came to Scotland without being invited, and we do not believe that such a large number of friends would have asked us at this time had there not been appearances that the present was eminently suited for evangelistic work all over Scotland. The reception and the response which we have met with show that if there is a special season of blessing it is now."

"I suppose you find some peculiarity among us?"

"The Scotch are very reticent and shy; but when you get a Scotchman converted you have got a man who will stick to what he has done."

"That leads me to ask if you have come across evidences of your former visits?"

"Everywhere we have been we have come across fruits of the work of '73 and '82."

I was coming away when Mr. Moody, as an additional item of interest, gave me his opinion that he had never preached to so many ministers as he has done during the last three months. He was struck with the number that attended every meeting, and it was specially gratifying to think that many had come to hear him and Mr. Sankey from twenty to thirty miles off.

THE STIRLING MISSION.

Seven meetings, besides overflows and after meetings, is a pretty good tale of work for two days. Sabbath and Monday last were allotted to Stirling, and that ancient, historic town had six out of the seven. A meeting on Monday forenoon at Bridge of Allan came in to make up the perfect number. These gatherings must have reached, at first hand, a considerable portion of the residents, for every time the buildings were crowded to the door; on Sabbath evening the meeting for women in the Free North Church overflowed into the Baptist Church across the street, where Mr. Sankey sang, and Mr. J. M. Scroggie preached to a packed and attentive audience.

The Sabbath morning meeting for workers in the Public Hall was an interesting occasion. Mr. Sankey invited his fellow Christians to "Throw out the life-line," and also sang sweetly about

The good we all may do
Whilst the days are going by.

Mr. Moody had many things to say about the importance of the disciples of Christ being small enough and weak enough for God to use them. He seemed scarcely able to find words expressive enough to describe his scorn for those who are all the time wanting to do some great thing, but are not ready and willing to do the humble piece of work that lies nearest to their hand. It was a very strong and stimulating utterance. Indeed, one might say that boldness and strength were the characteristics of his speaking throughout the day. To a splendid congregation in the North Parish Church, in the forenoon, he discoursed on the lessons to be learned from the life of Jacob — showing how much the patriarch lost by his sojourn at Haran when he ought to have been serving God at Bethel. In the evening when speaking to a great audience of men in the Public Hall, Mr. Moody had some very trenchant advice for ministers of the Gospel. He told them plainly that it were far better for them to lose their rich, rum-selling hearers, and even to lose their pulpits altogether, than to keep back any of the counsel of God. John the Baptist lost his head by his faithful testimony, but he gained immortal renown and his Master's "Well done!"

There was a large and very encouraging after-meeting of women in the lecture-hall of the Free North Church. When Mr. Moody called for tokens of decision, there were very numerous responses, and much interesting conversation followed.

The news of Mr. Spurgeon's death was received by the evangelists with deep sorrow. At the Bridge of Allan meeting prayer was offered for the bereaved relatives, and Mr. Sankey sang "Eternity is drawing nigh." At the Monday afternoon meeting in Stirling Mr. Sankey feelingly alluded to the occurrence, and sang the hymn, "Only remembered by what we have done." On Monday evening Mr. Moody spoke of the death of "the greatest preacher of the nineteenth century," and pressed home the lessons of the event. This closing meeting was singularly impressive.

Rev. John McNeill and Mr. Burke have closed a week's mission at Fraserborough and Peterhead. At the former place the work took hold from the start, and showed good results. The Peterhead people were stiff to move at first, but the closing services were marked by a breaking down of this reserve, and the Gospel messages were eagerly received.

WHAT SHALL WE GIVE THEE PRINCESS MAY?

What shall we give thee, Princess May?
Since fond Heaven stooped through the ages hoary
And illumed thy brows with love's tragic glory,
Thy fair name's writ in undying story,
And none shall erase it thence for aye.

What shall we give thee, Princess May?
Shall we give thee gold in a mighty dower,
A king's inheritance reaped in an hour,
What royal sceptre like this for power?
Ah, famine of heart no gold will stay.

What shall we give thee, Princess May?
Shall we bind in a bouquet to charm thy fears
All the blossoming heads of the coming years,
Seen snapt in a moment through thy tears?—
"They would die in my chilly grasp," you say.

What shall we give thee, Princess May?
Shall we give thee lordly lands and towers,
Where the winding stream haunts sylvan bowers,
And rainbows dance o'er the chasing showers?—
"But a wounded heart cannot rest," you say.

What shall we give thee, Princess May?
Some priceless watch whose magic chime
Of seraph bells shall cheat slow time,
All crusted with gems from every clime?—
"But I've heard Eternity strike, you say."

What shall we give thee, Princess May?
Shall we give thee love? Thou hast it all.
Shall we give thee tears? The great showers fall.
Shall we give thee honours? They only pall
On the orphaned soul of hope's castaway.

What shall we give thee, Princess May?
All our gifts are vain; but ah, instead,
With thy love-pierced heart that was never wed,
Just torn from a throne and bridal bed,
Run in with haste betwixt living and dead,
And, for love's sake, give thyself away!

Lo, this is God's message to thee to-day—
'Twas echoed of old where the martyrs trod,
And breathed with each breath by the Son of God
As He stretched those nail-pierced hands abroad:
Stanch others' wounds and thine own shall stay,
Brave, beautiful, stricken Princess May.

THE MILDMAY MEDICAL MISSION HOSPITAL.—The new buildings in Bethnal-green are now steadily rising, the difficulties caused by the labour strikes being now over. It is, we understand, fully anticipated that the structure, at least, will be completed in time for the June Conference.

OXFORD NOTES.

(From Our Correspondent.)

One of the oldest clergymen of Oxford lately passed away in Canon Chamberlain, who had been Vicar of St. Thomas' for the last fifty years, though unable to do much active service of late. He was a distinct High Churchman, and in sympathy with the Tractarian movement.

The United Methodist Free Church in Oxford has just lost its oldest member, Mr. J. M. Crapper, who has died at the age of eighty-two. He was a most active worker, and had filled several offices in the church with ability and success. The Rev. H. M. Booth conducted a memorial service, and preached from Heb. xiii. 7, 8.

Mr. Henry Thorne's Mission proved a very successful and helpful season. As the work advanced the attendances became larger and the meetings closed with large gatherings. Mr. Thorne inaugurated during his stay a series of Pleasant Sunday Afternoons for men at the new Y.M.C.A. hall. This marks the introduction of the movement into Oxford.

During the Vacation the Fellows of Pembroke met to elect their new Master, but, not being able to come to any agreement, the matter was referred to the Chancellor of the University, Lord Salisbury, who is also Visitor of Pembroke College. He has appointed Professor Bartholomew Price, Senior Fellow of Pembroke, and Oxford's most distinguished mathematician. During the last forty years Professor Price has been a well-known and eminent man in the University.

Public feeling in Oxford has been remarkably aroused over the proposed Newman memorial. A crowded meeting to protest against a public site being given was held in the Town Hall on Jan. 26. The meeting was of the most earnest and enthusiastic nature. Canon Ince, whose letter to The Times called forth the opposition to the proposal, spoke at the meeting; and also several other representatives of the University and City. Facts brought to light at the meeting showed the real character of the proposal, and its Roman Catholic source.

It is clear from letters received from subscribers to the statue, which were read at the meeting, that the suggestion emanated from a sub-committee of seven, five being Romanists, and that the general body of the subscribers have had nothing to do with this flagrant act of the Duke of Norfolk and his friends. The small opposition at the meeting were not slow to remind the speakers of the names of the subscribers, including some prominent Nonconformists. And a further difficulty was the conspicuous absence of the Nonconforming ministers of the city. It was a pity that such a splendid opportunity was missed of showing an united front on behalf of our common Protestantism and religious liberty. Nevertheless, the unanimity of thought and feeling among many very different men and classes was most striking, and the meeting will long be remembered in Oxford. Among the speakers were Canon Christopher, Rev. F. J. Chavasse, and Professor Burrows, and letters were read from some of the most prominent Ritualists of the city.

CAMBRIDGE NOTES.

On Thursday (28th) a meeting of the Gleaners' Union for the town was held, when Mr. H. C. Lees, of St. John's College spoke.

At the University C.M. Union meeting on Monday evening, a most instructive and stirring address was given by Rev. P. H. Chapman, M.A., on "Henry Martyn."

Rev. W. W. Hough, of the Corpus Christi College Mission, Camberwell, lately gave an account of the work being carried on there. He also preached in the College Chapel.

The deaths of Professor Adams and of Sir George Paget will be felt by many friends and admirers in the University. Dr. Adams was a fellow of Pembroke College for forty years. His funeral was attended by most of the leading members of the University.

The University sermon on Sunday (24th) was preached by the Bishop of Chester. His subject was "Eternal Hope." The Bishop dwelt at some length on God's love towards mankind, but his comments on God's justice were but few. An inadequate view of the sinfulness of sin in God's sight most evidently pervaded the discourse.

Rev. Handley C. G. Moule is preaching this term a course of sermons on Ps. xxxii. On Sunday (24th), he described "The blessedness of forgiven sin." In the course of his remarks he stated how that though there is a deep solemnity about religion inseparable from it, yet there is happiness in it; it is indeed a happy thing to belong to Jesus Christ, making earthly joy brighter. It is a practical happiness, not a figurative one, a joy that lives in practical life. The man who has found God in pardon, finds this very real. Jesus is the one possible secret for happiness for the one who has sinned.

BAGDAD.—Rev. C. H. Stileman, C.M.S. missionary, sends a forcible and urgent appeal for a missionary to the Jews in that city, who number, it is said, thirty thousand, and appear to be willing to listen to the Gospel.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which, of course, are entirely different from these.

2 THESSALONIANS.

Like the former Epistle, this was probably written from Corinth, during the Apostle's long stay there (Acts xvii. 5-18). It was probably indited soon after the first, in order to correct certain false conceptions of the immediate coming of Christ, which that had excited, leading to a feverish and unsettled state of feeling, prejudicial to a steady application to daily duty.

SUNDAY, FEB. 7.—2 THESSALONIANS I.

The Salutation (1-2).—Where we are in, thence we may expect grace and peace from. See that you are always in the blessed circumference of God's presence, which you may be if your heart ever circles around the centre of his glory, and then derive grace and peace as you need for each moment.

Thanksgivings (3-10).—What a record! Growing faith; abounding love; patience and faith in persecution. Can we stand the test? 4. The Apostle was able to point to the triumph of the Gospel in their case, as an argument for the Gospel which he preached. 5. The fact that God enabled them to endure so meekly and patiently was a certain evidence that He would ultimately avenge their cause (Phil. i. 28). Not that they should be counted worthy to obtain or earn the kingdom — that could not be in his mind, who attributed all so absolutely to the unmerited grace of God—but that their character should be in keeping with their high dignity as heirs of that kingdom. 6. This explains the first clause of verse 5. 7. The "us" intimates how eagerly the Apostle counted on the rest which remaineth; and which becomes ours at the first stage of the second Advent, when the saints are gathered around the Lord, previous to his descent to the world. "The angels of his power," i.e., through whom He manifests it. 8. This is a wilful ignorance, as it is a wilful disobedience. Man's rejection of the Gospel is the result of a disobedient heart. The taking vengeance is rather rendering (R.V.), i.e., meting out deserved and accumulated penalty. 10. The glory of Jesus will be reflected in his people. Ah, how wonderful that He should ever be admired in such as we are!

Prayers (11, 12).—We cannot imitate Him in his Apostolic gifts, but in his prayers we may. Oh to be people of more constant prayer, that God may fulfil every desire of goodness, and every work of faith, with power (R.V.). 12. We need not wait till his coming, as verse 10, in order to contribute to the glory of Jesus, but here and now He may be glorified in us.

MONDAY, FEB. 8.—2 THESSALONIANS II.

The Precursors of Christ's Coming (1-12).—"Touching the coming" (R.V.). Our gathering together unto Him must be the same as 1 Thess. iv. 17. 2. "Shaken out of your mind," i.e., out of your senses (R.V.). "That the day of the Lord is now present" (R.V.). It was being asserted that the Church was even then living amid the glory of the Lord's second advent. 3. "Except the falling away come first and the man of sin be revealed" (R.V.). This has been held by some to refer to the Apostasy of the Roman Catholic Church, while others think it indicates the heading up of all the corruption and evil of this age in some one horrible impersonation of sin, the last masterpiece of Satan, the fell mimicry of the Man Christ Jesus (Dan. viii. 26; xi. 31). 6. This, perhaps, refers to the presence of the Church in the world, through which the Holy Spirit works to the restraint of the powers of evil. 7. Both here and in vv. 3 and 8 the word lawless occurs in the Greek. 8. So far from the world being in a state of holiness when the Master comes, it will appear cursed by forms of sin, which his presence alone can subdue. 9. The words used here are remarkably significant of the spread of what we know as spiritualism, so alarmingly on the increase. 10. Men take pleasure in unrighteousness, therefore they do not love the truth, therefore they are open to believe the lie, and become enslaved to the working of error, which is permitted in the wise government of God, and which is, in point of fact, his judgment upon them.

Exhortations to Steadfastness (13-17).—"In sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." These are the two instruments of sanctification, the Spirit and the Word. We come in contact with the Spirit through the Word. We must keep in them, as the sponge in sea-water, or the flower in the air, so shall we become saved from evil, and realise the eternal purpose of God. What a contrast to those described in verse 10. 14. The purpose of God expresses itself through the Gospel call. How wonderful that we have an opportunity of sharing the glory of Jesus according to his prayer (John xvii. 22). 16. Notice that the Apostle does not hesitate to put the name of Jesus before that of the Father, showing the equality of the blessed Trinity. He hath given eternal comfort (R.V.), may He now give temporal and daily comfort. Oh, for the stablished heart! This is the work of the Holy Ghost (2 Cor. i. 21).

TUESDAY, FEB. 9.—2 THESSALONIANS III.

Pray for Us (1, 2).—The Apostle counted much on the prayers of his converts (Eph. vi. 19; 1 Thess. v. 25). He knew that it would make an appreciable difference to the success of his life-work. "Free course," i.e., may run (R.V.). 2. The opposition here referred to was overcome through Divine help (Acts xviii.), and how much of that was probably due to the power of believing prayer.

The Lord is Faithful (3-5).—This reference to the stablished life, so soon after ii. 17, shows how much need there is for it in our religion. Do we lay sufficient stress on it? "Guard you from the evil one" (R.V.). The word translated guard was a favourite with the Apostle (2 Tim. i. 12-14). 5. The thought in the word "direct" is that of putting them in the way of, or making a way through, so that the love of God and the patience of Jesus may enter to abide.

We command you (6-18).—"Disorderly," i.e., who does not keep rank. There is no room for eccentricities when an army is engaged in battle. 8. Acts. xviii. 3. 9. The Apostle felt that he was at liberty to claim support from them, but he forbore to use it (1 Cor. ix. 6). 12. What a lesson is incidentally taught to our hurrying, busy days—to work with quietness. 14. The Early Church was more stringent in its discipline than we are, but its exclusions always pointed to correction, as between brethren. 16. "At all times, in all ways" (R.V.). At hours the most disturbed, through means the most unlikely. 17. The signature attested the genuineness of the letter which was dictated to an amanuensis.

FIRST EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY.

It was written not long after Paul had left Ephesus for Macedonia; but it is a matter of debate as to when this was, some holding that it must have been about the time of the great riot which drove the Apostle from the city; others that it was nearer the time of his second and last imprisonment at Rome.

Timothy is first mentioned as living at Lystra (Acts xvi. 1). His mother, Eunice, was a Jewess (2 Tim. i. 5); his father was a Greek. He was early the subject of pious influence (2 Tim. iii. 14, 15). He was well spoken of by his fellow-believers, and became the intimate friend and companion of the Apostle.

The Epistle was designed to teach him how to deal with false teachers, how to conduct public worship, and to urge him to cultivate all those qualities which would better equip him for the discharge of his important duties.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 10.—1 TIMOTHY I.

The Inscription (1, 2).—That commandment lay at the basis of his life (Acts ix. 15; xiii. 2). All our hope for this life and the next is entwined about the person of Jesus. 2. Timothy had evidently been won for Christ through the Apostle, who therefore counted him as his child.

Reminded of his Commission (3-11).—Timothy had been left at Ephesus as temporary representative of the Apostle, and as if to guard against the evils prognosticated in Acts xx. 29. 4. Fables, probably Gnostic speculations about angels (Col. ii. 18). Genealogies, not those of human descent, but of spirits, emanations, aeons. Endless implies their tedious monotony of uselessness (Titus iii. 9). Questions, speculations. "A stewardship of God." 5. Instead of "now," but (R.V.), which shows that what follows is a contrast. "The end of the charge," i.e., that referred to in 3 and 13, and which includes the whole tenour of Gospel teaching. When the heart is purified by faith, and the conscience is healthy, and faith is simple and sincere, love arises like a pure fountain. 6. Many miss their aim, which should be love, and turn off into vain discussion. 8. The lawful place of the law is to use it, not by it to become good, but by it to convince of sin. 9. Instead of "murderers" read smiters. 11. "Sound," i.e., healthy, a word of frequent use in the pastoral epistles (vi. 3; 2 Tim. i. 13, iv. 3; Titus i. 13, ii. 2). "The Gospel of the glory of the blessed God." In revealing the love and wisdom of God the Gospel glorifies Him. Because He blesses, He is blessed, i.e., happy, and his aim is to make us so.

The Apostle's Conversion a Pattern (12-17).—God never puts us to a work for which He does not enable us. Some versions give the present tense, "enableth." "Appointing me to his service" (R.V.). We hold our office direct from our Lord. 13. Blasphemer toward God (Acts xxvi. 9-11); persecutor towards fellow-men (Gal. i. 13); injurious, insolent, overweening in pride. 13. Ignorance did not make him entirely guiltless, because he might have known, but it somewhat excused him. He did not sin against known light. 14. Grace brought faith and love into his heart, a great contrast to v. 13. 15. Compare v. 9; 2 Tim. ii. 11; Titus iii. 8. Faithful is the saying, because spoken of God, who cannot lie, and attested by universal Christian experience. Christ, as promised; Jesus, as manifested. (Bengel.) Each man thinks his own sins most aggravated, because he cannot imagine that any could have sinned against so much light and love. 16. "In me as chief." A sample of mercy, a specimen of what Christ could do, a sketch to be filled up. "Believe on Him"; Faith rests on Christ as a foundation. Peter and John use another preposition, towards or into, the mystical union, of which all else is a preliminary stage. 17. King of the Ages, all the æons of which the false teachers speculated were subject to Him. "Incorruptible, invisible, the only God."

The Charge Renewed (18-20).—"Child Timothy" (R.V.). The prognostications given when Timothy was formerly set apart, must have been unusually clear and hopeful. "War the good warfare;" there is only one kind of warfare which is good—that against sin. 19. Again (as in v. 5) these two are mentioned. When men thrust these away from them, they drive the only pilot away that can steer them safely, and make shipwreck. 20. Hymeneus, (2 Tim. ii. 17.) Alexander (2 Tim. iv. 14, 15). This sentence was possibly executed in some sickness which befell them.

THURSDAY, FEB. 11.—1 TIMOTHY II.

Universal Intercessions (1-8).—This multiplication of the terms for prayer indicates that mere cold and formal prayers will not suffice to fulfil the Apostolic ideal. How often did he plead for Nero who, like a lion, threatened his life! Such intercessions should have a larger place in our private, as well as public, prayers, and we should give thanks. 2. "Godliness and gravity" (R.V.). The one towards God, the other towards men. 4. God desires all men to be saved; if we then are in living union with Him, we shall desire it also. But such salvation can only come through the full knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. 5. As God is one, so He comprehends all in his tender love. And it follows that all our race is one. Between the one God and the one race there is One Mediator, himself Man. All blessings come to man through Him, and all who are reconciled and saved must receive those blessings by his instrumentality. It is by Him that all acceptable worship is presented to God. 6. The voluntary substitution of Jesus is brought out into clear and emphatic prominence: He gave Himself a ransom on behalf of all. The word translated ransom is a very strong one. Note that this vicarious substitution was for all. The full unfolding of this mystery was left to subsequent times. 7. "I was appointed a herald" (R.V.); see also i. 12.

On Public Prayer (8-15).—"The men" (R.V.), as distinguished from women. Every place may be hallowed ground. Only holy hands should be uplifted, and holy lips opened. "Doubting" as to whether their prayer is accepted. 9. "Shamefastness" (R.V.) is that which is held fast by an honourable shame (Trench). Perhaps with gold and jewels intertwined. 10. That on which a woman should lay most emphasis is not in outward array, but in the temper of her soul, the beneficence of her life. 11. She might teach, but not in the public assemblies of the Church (Acts xviii. 26; 1 Cor. xiv. 34). In applying these rules to our own time, we must remember the altogether different status of woman then as compared to now. 14. The receptiveness of the woman's nature makes her peculiarly liable to be led astray, and, therefore, unfits her to be a safe guide of the Church. 15. A woman's sphere is the home and in the rearing of children, and there she shall attain all the advantages and blessings of God's salvation, if she continues in faith and love and holiness. It is not in the arena of theological conflict that a woman will best reach salvation, but in the regular performance of home duty. Some lay emphasis on "the," e.g., "the child-bearing" (R.V.), referring to the bearing of the child Jesus, through whom salvation has come to all.

FRIDAY, FEB. 12.—1 TIMOTHY III.

The Eldership (1-13).—"Bishop," i.e., overseer. There were many such in one church (Acts xix. 28). Good work demands good men. 2. The restriction as to marriage indicates that the Bishop should not have lightly put away his wife after the loose notions of the time. "Vigilant," i.e., ever on the watch; "of good behaviour," i.e., orderly. The previous word, "sober," refers to his inward temper, this to his outward behaviour, manner, dress, &c. 3. How careful should the servant of God be in his demeanour, showing the gentleness of Christ in speech and act, especially avoiding contentiousness. "Not contentious, no lover of money." 5. What a man is in his home that he will be in the Church, and he who cannot secure right order in the one will certainly fail in the other. 6. "Not just converted," Satan fell by pride, and so brought condemnation on himself, and there is the same danger to those put into prominent places. 9. "The faith" is a hidden thing to the natural man, but it is revealed to those whose consciences are free from sin. 10. This probation was probably less one of time than of searching inquiry. 11. "The women" (R.V.). There is nothing here said about the wives of deacons, but about the women who were called to act as deaconesses (Rom. xvi. 1). 13. This does not refer probably to promotion in the church, but rather in that heavenly kingdom, the rewards of which are assessed according to our faithfulness here. Faith gives us great boldness.

The Mystery of Godliness (14-16).—The R.V. makes a remarkable change, not "how thou oughtest to behave," but "how men ought." The Church here is the holy catholic Church which is described as the House of God. It is also the pillar and stay, that is, the upholder of the truth about Christ in the midst of the world. The living witness of Christians to the truth of Christianity has been an essential condition of its maintenance amongst men. 16. In order that they might know what the truth was which was thus maintained, he proceeds to describe, and then enumerate, its more important facts, quoting apparently a bit of an old antiphonal hymn. The six contrasts being flesh, Gentiles, world, as against spirit, angels, glory; the Incarnation, Spirit-baptism, ministry of angels, heralding to men, acceptance by human hearts, and recognition in the Divine kingdom. These are the principal items cited.

SATURDAY, FEB. 13.—1 TIMOTHY IV.

The Signs of the Latter Times (1-5).—Many of these are taking place amongst ourselves, especially those which are included in the word "doctrines of demons," which can only refer to the modern development of spiritualism. The men who deal in these are false to themselves and to their knowledge of right, and become "seared in their consciences" (R.V.). 3. It is a remarkable fact that this prohibition of marriage is also in vogue amongst the very circles where spiritualism is rife. 4. The fact that you can thank God for that which you receive proves that it is his good gift, prayer and thanksgiving being the sufficient test. If you can pray over a matter, and give thanks for it, you need not refuse it.

A Good Minister (6-16).—"Nourished in the words of faith" (R.V.), so only can we become strong and healthy. 7. This is the exercise of the gymnasium, which is to be our model in our strenuous efforts after a godly life. 8. Timothy seems to have inclined to a vigorous physical regimen (v. 23), but the Apostle says that it is only profitable "for a little." The godly man inherits the best of both worlds, though this is not his aim. He places himself and his property at Christ's disposal, content to do so, and lo! he finds his nets filled to breaking. 10. There is a sense in which the salvation wrought by the Lord Jesus affects all men, but only those who believe experience its full meaning. 12. "Be thou a pattern." We should always consider the effect produced on others by our behaviour. 14. Beware of unused and buried talents. The special gift to Timothy seems to have been simultaneous with his setting apart to the ministry. 15. "Be diligent in these things" (R.V.). Only he who gives himself up to truth and God can find himself possessed and filled. 16. Character and teaching are the two essentials of a successful minister of Jesus Christ; the one is useless without the other; but they are mutually corroborative.

Personalia.

Rev. George Grenfell and his wife have, it is announced, reached the Congo safely.

Rev. G. W. Olver has been somewhat seriously ill, but is making satisfactory progress.

Rev. W. S. Swanson, has recovered from his attack of influenza, but is still forbidden to resume work.

The Bishop of Liverpool, whose illness we mentioned last week, was confined to his room for ten days. He is now able to resume work.

Mr. C. H. Collette, the well-known Protestant advocate, we regret to hear is lying somewhat seriously ill at his residence in St. Peter's-park.

Rev. John E. Wakerley who has been ill, recovered sufficiently to proceed to the seaside for a few days last week, and was able to resume his duties on Sunday.

Rev. G. S. Barrett entered last week on the twenty-fifth year of his ministry at Norwich. The congregational work of the past year has proved successful in every way.

Rev. Frank Smith.—Many who know of this devoted minister's work at Peckham-rye Tabernacle will deeply regret to hear of the blow which has fallen on him in the loss of his wife.

Dr. Pentecost, writing from Mandalay on January 9, says: "We have closed a good mission in Rangoon, and I am taking ten days' rest before beginning again in Madras on the 20th."

Principal Douglas, D.D., of the Free Church, Glasgow, has intimated his intention of resigning in May his post as Principal, and also that of Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Exegesis.

Dr. Baedeker, who has been enabled to cheer and aid suffering Christians, has been in Moscow and is now in St. Petersburg. Letters may be addressed care of Rev. W. Nicolson, B. and F. Bible Depôt, St. Petersburg.

Mr. James Monro, so well known in London as formerly head of the police force, has now reached Calcutta, meaning to labour as a voluntary missionary in the Nuddea district, where years ago he acted as magistrate.

Archdeacon Mules has been chosen to fill the vacancy at Nelson caused by the resignation of Bishop Suter. The selection is regarded as a guarantee for the maintenance of the Evangelical principles so sturdily held by the late Bishop.

Rev. Robert Steel, D.D., one of the best known and valued ministers in Sydney, who has been very seriously ill, writes to a relative here: "God has brought me up from the gates of death that I might serve Him better. I have many mercies, and much cause for gratitude to God."

Mr. John M. McAuliffe, of the Wayside Mission, has been very unwell. He fell ill in November last with a cold, which left congestion of the lungs and brought to light weakness of the heart. He had to cancel all distant mission engagements this side of March. Being partially restored, he is now preaching again at home, Tunbridge Wells, and God is graciously owning his labours.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, FEB. 14.

The New Covenant.—Jer. xxxi. 27-37.

Golden Text: Verse 34.

Jeremiah began his work as a prophet about the thirteenth year of the reign of Josiah, and continued until the people of Jerusalem were carried away to Babylon. Most of his messages were predictions of judgment upon the sins of the people; and he lived to see many of his predictions fulfilled. The prophecy of which this lesson forms a part looks beyond the captivity to the restoration; and even beyond that to the future glory of Israel, of which the restoration was a type. No event short of that can be a complete and literal fulfilment of this word. The continued preservation of the Jews among, yet distinct from, the nations is in order to that event. From Heb. viii. it is clear that the new covenant began with the Gospel dispensation.

Restoration (27-30).—With 27 compare Ezek. xxxvi. 9-11, and Hos. ii. 23. The condition in which the country would be left by the captivity would be one of desolation and ruin. The prophet foretells a change. The figure of sowing suggests the rapid increase of people in the land that had been desolate. While we look for a literal fulfilment let us learn the present lesson—where sin has caused desolation and distress, grace can give glory and prosperity. 28. This verse reminds us that God's threatenings of judgment are not idle words. See chap i. 10. The Baybylonish captivity and the present condition of Jerusalem are evidence of that. Do not trifle with New Testament threatenings. The word of God cannot be broken. But out of this solemn truth comes the inference that God's promises are just as sure as his judgments. He who is so true to his word in the one case will not violate it in the other. A boy who had done wrong feared to return home because he knew that punishmeut awaited him. "Oh, your mother is so kind she will not punish you," said a companion. The boy replied, "My mother never tells a lie." Neither does God (Heb. vi. 18). Fear his threatenings, and trust his promises, for neither can fail. 29, 30. Many proverbial sayings are dangerously false, because they only contain half a truth. That is true of this proverb. It was a false inference from Exod. xx. 5, and was used by the people as an excuse for their own sin, and as a ground of complaint against God (Ezek. xviii. 2, 3). But it was contradicted by Deut. xxiv. 16. It is true that every man's actions influence his children for good or evil; but this popular proverb went much beyond that, and destroyed the important truth that we have an individual responsibility before God (Gal. vi. 5, 7).

The New Covenant (31-37).—Why a new Covenant? Because the old was not faultless (Heb. viii. 7). Yet the insufficiency of the old covenant arose only from the fact that the people were unfaithful to it, although God had the strongest claim upon their obedience (32). They made promises with the best of intentions, but were not able to keep them (Exod. xix. 8).

The advantages of the new covenant are many. 1. Its surety (Heb. vii. 22). God deals with men in Christ, their representative and mediator. The conditions upon which all the covenanted blessings are to be ours are fulfilled by Him. We have not to purchase them; our Surety has done that. 2. Its promises (Heb. viii. 6). The language of the old covenant was "Thou shalt"; that of the new covenant is "I will" (33). What was then demanded as a condition of blessing is now promised in the covenant itself. (See xxxii. 40.) 3. Its obedience. The work of the Surety is not to be an excuse for our disobedience. "I will put my law in their inward parts" (33; Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27). This makes obedience possible, and shows us its character. It is not that which we render to a command outside of us; but that willing obedience of the heart. (See Psa. xl. 8; li. 6, 10.) 4. Its blessings. These are Acquaintance with God (34). To know means affectionate intimacy, and expresses itself in quiet confidence in Him. Possession of God and being possessed by Him (33). To have Him is more than to have some of his gifts. We are made "heirs of God" (Rom. viii. 17). And we only enjoy Him as ours while we recognise that we are his. Forgiveness (34). The covenant would be imperfect without this. No one ever gets beyond the need of pardon. The prayer for daily forgiveness is as necessary as that for daily bread. (See Matt. xxvi. 28; Acts xiii. 38.) 5. Its stability (33-37). Sun, moon, stars, earth, and the sea, all become witnesses to the unalterable nature of this covenant. The continuance of all things according to his word (2 Pet. iii. 5-7) strengthens confidence in the fulfilment of all that word has promised.

Anticipate joyfully the future fulfilment of this prophecy for Israel. Seek, through Jesus, the Mediator, a share in the new Covenant blessings now.

MR. HERBERT R. FRANCIS and his wife, who have been ill with influenza, are now, we are thankful to learn, much better. On Saturday they were able to travel to Bournemouth, and although all work is given up for some time—owing to weakness—Mr. Francis hopes that ere long he will be enabled to resume his labours.

Temperance Notes.

The Band of Hope Union annual soiree was held at the Memorial Hall on Monday week.

Dr. Richardson points out that alcohol, far from being a remedy, adds to the dangers of influenza.

Mr. Robert Rae stated last week that he had been a total abstainer and a worker in the cause for fifty-three years.

A coffee-house has been established in Tralee, co. Kerry, for the purpose of counteracting the efforts of the public-houses.

The Hitchin Blue-Cross Temperance Brigade reports steady progress during the past year, with forty-five new members.

At the annual service of the Bradford Band of Hope Union just held, the membership was reported to be twenty-eight thousand.

At a conference last week of the Leeds Working Men's Temperance League, reference was made to the evils arising from drinking clubs.

In connection with the National Temperance League 127 prizes were distributed last Thursday in Kensington Town Hall to boys and girls of West London Board Schools for essays on Temperance.

At the annual members' meeting of the United Kingdom Alliance, held on Wednesday evening (27th) in Exeter Hall, Mr. Kempster (secretary) gave an encouraging account of the past year's temperance progress.

Mr. W. S. Caine was a speaker at the fifty-sixth annual meeting of the Bristol Temperance Society, and moved a resolution protesting against the continuance of legalised temptation to the consumption of alcoholic drink.

The Free Church of Scotland issue a satisfactory report for the past year. Of the ministers in charges 681 are total abstainers, and of thirty-six ministers ordained during the year, thirty-five are abstainers. Out of 130 students in Edinburgh, 110 are teetotalers.

A canvass has been taken at Eccles, Maidstone, upon the Sunday Closing question in connection with the British Women's Temperance Association. The total number of forms issued were 280, and of these 110 were in favour of Sunday Closing, twenty-four against, and twenty-seven neutral.

At an adjourned conference of the British Women's Temperance Association, held on Thursday, at the Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street, it was decided, in view of the County Council election, to appoint representative ladies to interview the candidates in each of the divisions of London, in order that action may be taken in regard to temperance reforms.

On every hand we hear how missions at home and abroad are hindered by the drink traffic. One who has long laboured in the mission-field says: "After many years' experience in home-mission work, I feel convinced until the Church uses all her influence for the entire removal of the drink traffic, she is doing little better than wasting her money in supporting me as a missionary."

The thirty-fourth anniversary of the Irish Temperance League was held in Belfast last week, and was one of the most largely attended and successful ever remembered. The most important resolution adopted was one requesting Christian churches to cease using intoxicating wine at the Lord's Supper. As an illustration of the march of public opinion, it may be mentioned that three or four years since a resolution on this subject was ignominiously rejected at the annual meetings of the League.

Speaking last week at the annual meeting of the Church of England Temperance Society, the Bishop of Wakefield appealed to those who were not temperance people or total abstainers to set those around them an example of self-denial and self-abnegation for the sake of those less able than themselves to resist temptation, for if there was one truth more clear and patent on the surface of the Gospel than another it was that Christianity as regarded its human relations was unselfishness.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the G. P. O. Total Abstinence Society was held on Thursday evening in Falcon-square Chapel. Sir S. A. Blackwood, who presided, said, numbering as they did about 120,000 persons all over the kingdom, they ought to have one of the most numerous and effective societies it was possible to imagine. In conclusion, the chairman said he was sorry to say that during the past year no less than 375 cases had passed through his hands in which it had been necessary to inflict greater or lesser punishment upon officers for intemperance, the only class which did not figure in this "black list" being the telegraph messengers. Canon Leigh and others addressed the meeting.

The Canadian Liquor Licence Bill, the main features of which have been accepted by the Legislative Assembly of the North-West Territories, contains a clause by which liquor dealers are to be held responsible for fatalities resulting from the too free sale of intoxicants. It is provided that if any person shall drink to excess of intoxicating liquors on any premises, whether licensed or unlicensed, and while so intoxicated, come to his death by suicide or drowning, or by cold or other accident, "the keeper of such hotel, restaurant, or other house or place, and also any person who for him or in his employ delivered to such person the liquor whereby such intoxication was caused, shall be jointly and severally liable to an action for personal wrong at the suit of the legal representatives of the deceased."

Letters to the Editor.

"PRISONERS AT SINGAPORE."

SIR,—In his communication to you respecting the Prisoners at Singapore," Mr. W. H. Stanes has newhat overstated their numbers. There are not re than one thousand prisoners in the gaol at gapore, and the average is generally between ht hundred and nine hundred. He rightly scribes as a most wonderful sight the assembling these prisoners every Sunday at noon for service. ey are divided up according to their language and lect into groups of fifty to one hundred, and are ached to by the missionaries or catechists speak- that dialect, and the results have been most couraging, several men having been baptized from ong them. I was privileged for three years to d the Sunday morning service for the European soners, and can testify to the truly Christian luence that the converted prisoner Grabousky exer- es in his ward, and to some men thanking God that y were sent to prison, as it was there that they t received the message of salvation.—Yours thfully, PARSEES IN BOMBAY.

DEAR SIR,—There are some mistakes which, if not rrected at once, will make a permanent wrong im- ession on the minds of many. As we are living at ch a long distance from you, I fear it is already late to prevent this in the case of one made by v. George Everard, who is represented in THE RISTIAN of December 17 as writing from India, at there is no missionary engaged among the rsees in Bombay. This statement is only correct intended to mean no agent of any missionary iety.

Mr. Everard was, I believe, only two or three days Bombay, but there must be few residents who are aware that a missionary to Parsees takes his daily nd at the junction of six of the principal thorough- es, preaching in their vernacular to a large num- r of them. Scores of them come regularly day after y, notwithstanding many counter attractions, igious holidays, &c. This is the only way in which husband can get at them, because, being a con- rt from among them, he is not received into their uses, and it would be difficult to get even two or ee into a building. Several inquirers have come see him at his own house, but from the want of oral courage they shrink from anything like being blicly seen in Christian meeting-places. Other tionalities crowd to his open-air preaching, and ese he also addresses in other languages, but his in object is to reach his own people, the Parsees, d for this sole reason he lives in Bombay.

Eighteen years ago, immediately after his conver- n, he commenced this work, and, according to the od hand of our God upon him, he has kept it up id great difficulties and opposition to the present e, excepting, of course, during intervals of absence m Bombay. Some Zenana missionaries, too, have ew Parsee houses, among others, to visit, in order teach the ladies.—Yours in the Lord,

ISETTE TERESA MODY.

Falkland-road, Bombay, Jan. 9, 1892.

"WHAT HINDERS THE LORD'S COMING?

SIR,—In the summary on the programme of the eek of Prayer, which you recently published, it s stated that "the great hindrance to our Lord's umphant return is the Church's apathy in regard the world's evangelisation; if we would hasten coming, we must see that the Gospel is preached a witness unto all the world."

This idea is no doubt gathered from Matt. xxiv. 14. is to be noticed that the passage does not speak of e Gospel of Salvation through the Blood of the mb, but of "this Gospel of the Kingdom." The ole preceding past from 23-27 regards Jerusalem d the Kingdom over which Jesus was born to eside, and the glorious time when He comes to g. over this earth. Until then Israel will not be livered from the ruinous condition in which they ve been so long involved; and not even then, til the knowledge that "the kingdoms of this rld have become the Kingdom of our Lord and of Christ" (Rev. xi. 15), and that his Imperial jesty is sitting upon the throne. Any one who ds the original will perceive the word rendered world" at the end of Matt. xxiv. 3, has nothing to with the material earth, merely referring to the riod when the sorrows of Israel will come to an d.

A far more important matter may possibly delay e coming of our Lord for his redeemed people; it sists in the hardened state of his people in using to obey his repeated orders to LOVE ONE NOTHER. The programme advocates this, yet o attends to it? Though often repeated by the s and, perhaps, by some hearts sincerely desired, ll, where is the indication seen of Christians for- king their own formalities and superstitions, and iting as the Family of God, in distinctive separa- n from the world that lies in the wicked one What will the Master think of this long-continued, glaring disobedience of his servants?

A Mission Bible-Class.

HAVING heard of a remarkable Bible-class in Paisley, I determined to pay it a visit. Passing along the main thoroughfare of the quaint old town, which has become famous all over the world for its thread and its philanthropists, we reached Storie-street. About half-way down it we came upon a beautiful hall, into whose open door was pouring a stream of young people from fourteen to twenty years of age. Most of them were girls, plainly but neatly dressed, who seemed to be eager to be in good time for the opening hymn, which was led by the wife of the missionary, Mrs. Andrew, who presided at the harmonium. The sight that now met my eyes as that audience sang was most cheering.

There were about two hundred present, a fifth of them young lads who occupied seats in the aisles, the girls in a dense mass filling the area. It was this central body that most drew my attention, for the girls "to a man" were singing with evident heartiness, whilst their bright faces, neatly arranged hair, and little shawls round their shoulders told of a short toilet after tea on coming home from mill. Here they were after a hard day's work, looking as happy as if they had just risen for this one enjoyment. Surely the Word of God has not lost its charms when to study it so many young people can be brought together, on a cold winter evening, in a town where there are many counter attractions to those held out by a mission-hall. The explanation of this presence is, however, largely found in the fact that the workers in connection with the Mission are zealous, the teaching given by the missionary, Mr. Andrews, simple and direct, and the singing all that could be desired. It is from this class that most of the workers come, so that they have a deep interest in inducing others to attend it, since it was there they themselves found the pearl of great price.

At the close of the lesson, which was on the first Passover feast, I was asked to speak to a young woman who had been impressed that evening. I found that she was anxious to be sheltered 'neath the shed blood of the Lamb of God. The light broke upon her mind as I continued the exposition of the lesson which had been up that evening, and her glad face at the prayer-meeting, held in the same place a night or two after, told of an experience which would soon lead her to take her place among the workers. Such classes should be tried in all our large centres of population, and wrought vigorously, for as prevention is better than cure, so when the young are brought to the Lord, they spend life not against, but for Him.

J. B. S.

Sunderland Y.M.C.A.

THE Y.M.C.A. at Sunderland is thoroughly aggressive and wide awake in its religious work, and it is remarkable how well the young men of the town support the Association in its highest and noblest efforts. Scores of young men have been won to the Saviour by the efforts of the members in the regular meetings and classes, as well as by open-air agencies. Some of these are now engaged in the mission-field. The average attendance at the Sunday afternoon Bible-class is one hundred, and altogether by the various agencies upwards of forty-eight thousand persons were brought under Gospel influences last year.

In the promotion of evangelistic missions and missionary conventions, the Association has been very successful. Rev. W. Hay Aitken is at present holding meetings in the largest hall in the town. The work began on Jan. 23, and will continue until Feb. 8. Inquirers have entered in the ante-room each night, and many have found joy in a risen and living Saviour. It is remarkable how many of those spoken to have had praying mothers or brothers and sisters. So far the meetings have been highly encouraging and successful.

THE LATE M. DE LAVELEYE.—The distinguished publicist, of Liège, Belgium, left the Church of Rome in 1878, and openly avowed himself an Evangelical Protestant. He maintained that morality must have a religious basis, and championed the cause of international concord and social purity as a humble disciple of Christ as well as a learned philosopher.

LIVERPOOL TOWN MISSION.—A public meeting of the friends of this Mission was held on Tuesday week in Hope Hall. Mr. B. F. Babcock, who presided, said that the work done during the past year showed they were [entitled to general support. There had been progress in every department of the Mission work; and, besides a better financial statement than usual, they had a larger number of missionaries at work. They were thankful for the changes that had been brought about in the condition of the city through the efforts of earnest Christian citizens. Rev. H. W. Bainbridge delivered a special address to the missionaries and friends on "Serving the Lord." Rev. J. K. Nuttall and others also gave short addresses.

The Book World.

Church of England Doctrine.

THE CHURCH AND HER DOCTRINE. By the Bishops of Sydney and Ossory, Revs. E. Hoare, H. C. G. Moule, H. Wace, and others. (6s. Nisbet.) Articles on leading doctrines and ordinances by such representative divines will interest many besides Churchmen. Papers on Justification and the Sufficiency of Holy Scripture could not well be entrusted to abler pens than those of venerable Edward Hoare and deep-thinking R. B. Girdlestone. But the paper that chiefly attracts us is one by Prebendary Wace on that most difficult subject, "The Church." After clearly distinguishing between the spiritual, invisible Church of Christ and visible Christian Churches, he repeats the protest of the Reformers against any true Apostolical succession apart from purity of doctrine. He states with masterly conciseness the good intention and disastrous results of Cyprian's view of the one true Church. The statements of Rev. C. Gore, so admired in some circles, about the efficacy of both Sacraments, he shows to be not only inconsistent, but heretical. On the validity of Sacraments duly administered in non-Episcopal churches, and the duty of intercommunion with them, he quotes large-hearted Bishop Cosins against the bigotry of some who profess the same principles. His remarks on the connection of a national Church with the sovereign, and the inherent blemishes of a so-called "spiritual" Court of Appeal are excellent. This article alone makes the book valuable, and it has ten worthy companions.

Missionary Publications.

THE ILLUSTRATED MISSIONARY NEWS. Partridge, Vol. XXV. contains last year's issues of this excellent monthly. The contents, original and selected, deal with work at home and abroad. There are many engravings, and in all its features the volume is calculated to stimulate interest in Christian missions, and excite sympathy with those who are engaged in the work.

INDIA'S WOMEN, the magazine of the Church of England Zenana Missionary Society, is always full of deeply interesting matter. The eleventh volume tells a tale of need, labour, and responsibility, the contents including many letters from European ladies who live and labour among the benighted millions of India, China, and Japan. There is a portrait and several items of news from Mrs. Abok, of Foochow, who visited England two years ago. (Nisbet and Co.)

THE MIRACLES OF MISSIONS, or THE MODERN MARVELS IN THE HISTORY OF MISSIONARY ENTERPRISE. By Alfred T. Pierson. (Paper 1s. 6d.; cloth 4s. Funk and Wagnalls.) The emphatic title of this little work is justified by the remarkable contents. In a manner peculiarly his own, Dr. Pierson surveys missionary biography and history, showing deliverances of missionaries and transformations of human character which admit of no adequate explanation if the Divine element in missionary enterprise be denied. The book contains twelve chapters, all of them informing and luminous; beginning with an account of John Williams's work in the South Seas, and ending with the wonderful story of Madagascar, which, it is truly said, should compel even the sceptical and unbelieving to exclaim, "What hath God wrought!" God's marvels in the mission-field have for the most part been wrought in answer to the fervent prayers and courageous testimony of his faithful servants, so these pages speak of Fidelia Fiske and Mary Lyon, J. E. Clough and J. G. Paton, Fritz Fliedner and Alexander Mackay. We trust they will have many readers, and be influential in pressing upon many the Master's call given long ago: "Go ...and preach...I am with you."

Miscellaneous.

Messrs. Cassell and Co. are issuing a popular edition, in threepenny parts, of THE CHILD'S BIBLE AND THE CHILD'S LIFE OF CHRIST. The complete book will contain about 500 illustrations.

CASSELL'S STOREHOUSE OF GENERAL INFORMATION. We welcome the second volume of this work, which is fully illustrated and furnished with maps and coloured plates. The contents extend from Beast to Castro, specialists having contributed many of the most valuable articles. As a companion to the dictionary, and a popular encyclopædia, this work will occupy an honourable place peculiarly its own.

OBITUARY.

DR. FREDERICK J. WOOD.

Many will have heard with regret of the death, on Monday week, of Dr. F. J. Wood, at the age of seventy-two, an additionally mournful point being that his wife died only two days previously, both being buried together in the same grave at Abney-park Cemetery. In his educational literary career he achieved considerable eminence, taking a leading position in the affairs of the London University, and being for some years Chairman of the Convocation of that University. As a Christian worker he was also loved and valued. In recent years he has done good service in connection with Rev. J. Guinness Rogers' church at Clapham. It is stated that as a deacon of that church he exercised wide influence, and secured universal affection by the sweetness of his spirit and his eminent consistency of character. In the British and Foreign Bible Society and in the London City Mission he found congenial spheres for untiring and energetic service. On the committee of the Bible Society his scholarship and devotion to the cause made him greatly valued.

GENERAL SIR ARTHUR LAWRENCE, K.C.B.

We much regret to hear of the death at the Fox Hills, on January 25, of General Sir Arthur Lawrence, K.C.B., Rifle Brigade, aged eighty-two. Sir Arthur belongs to a generation now passing away, but for many years this General was in the forefront of the Christian soldiers in our Army, and perhaps no single officer has done more for the Lord Jesus Christ in the British Army. We go back nearly fifty years, and find him in 1844 holding a Bible-class for officers in the barracks at Halifax, Nova Scotia. In that room met two or three officers of the Rifle Brigade and one or two of other regiments every Saturday evening, and at that meeting the late Captain Maximilian Hammond found Christ as his Saviour. We have not space here to detail the career of this departed saint. He was for a time a member of the Committee of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and for upwards of thirty years he was the president of the Army Scripture Readers' Society and an earnest supporter of the Army and Navy Prayer Union. Wherever he was quartered, whether in Nova Scotia, Canada, Aldershot, or in the Crimea, the late Sir Arthur Lawrence was a faithful witness and an active worker for the Lord Jesus Christ.

MADAME COILLARD.

We regret to announce the death of Madame Coillard, wife of the well-known French missionary to the Barotsi in Zambesia. She expired on October 28 at Sefula, and in the words of Rev. A. Baldwin, a Primitive Methodist labourer on the Zambesi River, she was a "good and heroic woman, who toiled and suffered to the last for the uplifting of the poor ignorant and sinful women and children of that part of Africa."

Madame Coillard was of a Scottish family, and the mission school was her especial care. In a short account of the work, recently issued by the committee of friends in Glasgow, M. Coillard says:—"When our native teacher left, the whole burden of teaching fell upon us. Mrs. Coillard threw her whole heart into it, but her health completely broke down. From twenty-five or thirty, the number of pupils rose speedily to more than one hundred. Four books and half-a-dozen slates composed all our school materials, and progress was necessarily slow." In these circumstances our brave sister was compelled to take rest, and her illness has for some time excited much anxiety among her friends and the supporters of the very interesting mission connected with her worthy husband's name.

MISS F. H. BAGGE.

We regret to report the death of Miss Frances Henrietta Bagge, eldest daughter of the late Sir William Bagge, Bart., M.P., of Stradsett Hall, Norfolk, which took place at Norwich on January 16. During the last three years, owing to delicate health, Miss Bagge had not been able to take the active part in Christian and temperance work which had been her pleasure for several years, but she still continued up to her death to let her influence be felt for the cause of good. In her village home at Stradsett she did much in Gospel and temperance work, and many soldiers have reason to thank her for being chief promoter, in company with General Hoste, R.A., C.B., then commanding the S.E. division, of reopening the Soldiers' Home, Castle-street, Dover (now removed to Snargate-street), in January, 1879. To her is, moreover, owing the selection of the present much-esteemed lady superintendent of that home. Miss Bagge several times took the superintendence of the Soldiers' Home at Woolwich during Mrs. Digby Dent's summer-holidays. She was also instrumental in reopening the little Sailors' Home in Chapel-street, King's Lynn, some years ago, and though she often wished the inhabitants of Lynn would wake up to their responsibilities in regard to those who visited their town by sea, and so enable her to do more for the temporal and spiritual welfare of the sailors, she was very thankful to find how much the little home and the kind, motherly attention of the matron were appreciated by those who visited the port. Miss Bagge, some months ago, started a missionary to visit the ships and change bags of books, which have been found to be a great help in keeping the men from the many public-houses. The superintendence of the home will be carried on by Miss Bagge's sister.

Evangelistic Notes.

Rev. T. Cook, the Wesleyan evangelist, has concluded a fruitful mission at Brixton-hill, and is now in Edinburgh.

Worthing.—Rev. Walter Bradbury and Miss Appleton have just held a nine days' mission in Holy Trinity Parish, Worthing, not without precious fruit.

Brookland (Romney Marsh).—A fruitful evangelistic mission, extending over two weeks, has been concluded here by Mr. Dykes, and several profess to have been converted.

Mr. George Hefford, of the Evangelisation Society, addressed two meetings at the Theatre Royal, Cambridge, on Sunday last: also a gathering of men only at Nelson-street Mission-hall.

Mr. William Forbes has just closed an eight days' mission at Leytonstone. The workers were greatly encouraged, and tokens appeared of good issue, many pledges being also taken.

Auchterarder, N.B.—A most interesting and fruitful mission work is going on in the villages round this town, under the care of Miss Hislop. The evangelistic service is extending far and wide.

Ireland.—Successful evangelistic services have just been held in the Railway Mission Hall, Belfast, by Mr. David Burrowes, of the Irish Evangelisation Society, and at Legateriffe, Co. Antrim, by Rev. W. J. Christie, of Glenavy.

Leeds.—A United Church Mission is being actively arranged for, to be held in the town February 14 to 24. A preparatory address was given last Sunday by the Bishop of Ripon on "Prayer Needs Single-mindedness," "God's Promise Unfailing," and "Prayer Sure of its Answer."

Dunfermline.—Following last week's large and impressive meetings addressed by Messrs. Moody and Sankey, Mr. Merton Smith, of Chicago, assisted by Mr. Ritchie Bell, of Montreal, conducted a most successful week's evangelistic meetings, under the auspices of the United Evangelistic Committee. Their earnest and forcible appeals and sweet singing of the Gospel attracted large audiences, and quite a number have professed conversion. Several most interesting children's meetings were also held.

Lincoln.—Under the auspices of the local Y.M.C.A., Mr. Henry Varley has paid a three days' visit to the old cathedral city. The Wesleyans kindly placed their largest chapel at the disposal of the Association, and large congregations gathered. On Thursday last week nearly sixty persons stood up in response to the appeals of the preacher, and confessed a desire to follow Christ. A meeting for men on Friday, at which a profound impression was evidently manifest, concluded Mr. Varley's visit, which will long be remembered.

Mr. Henry Lakin has just concluded the mission at Mill Hill Iron Mission Church, Blackburn, for which prayer was lately asked. Wonderfully rich blessing has been poured out, in spite of inclement weather and the fact that the curate in charge and many helpers were stricken down with influenza. Notwithstanding that, humanly speaking, the mission was carried on under discouraging and almost disheartening difficulties and misfortunes, yet over three hundred have cause to bless the Lord for his goodness. Truly, it was the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes.

Mr. Richard Weaver.—The special meetings conducted by this veteran in Edinburgh, in connection with the McCrie Roxburgh Church, have now closed. The services have been carried on with very great interest, the attendance being so encouraging, while nearly every night there were some to be found inquiring after the way of salvation. One Sabbath evening the inquiry-room was quite a scene, both old and young being evidently under the power of conviction of sin. Mr. Weaver seems to be in excellent spirits, and a good deal of the zeal of his early days accompanies his preaching. Altogether there is reason to believe that genuine cases of conversion have taken place through the meetings.

Mr. Edward Hurditch, who has had many years' experience as an evangelist, with much acceptance at home and in Australia, is now at liberty to conduct missions or evangelistic meetings, for longer or shorter periods, in any part of Great Britain or Ireland. Address care of Mr. C. Inglis, Eaton-villas, Harlesden, London, N.W. We commend Mr. Hurditch as an able and faithful preacher of the Gospel.

JEWISH CHILDREN'S CHRISTMAS TREE.—The Hebrew Conference Hall, Old Montague-street, Whitechapel, was occupied on Thursday evening by about three hundred and fifty Jewish children who attend the hall for religious instruction. A Christmas tree, provided by Mrs. Ehrlich and friends, was the centre and source of much pleasure. Addresses were given by Mr. Cruikshank, Mr. Ehrlich, and Rev. J. B. Barraclough, the latter questioning the children and receiving ready and satisfactory answers. At the instance of Mr. Boyer, of the Drift Children Mission, the whole body sang, "I've got a Father in the promised land," after which they were entertained with recitations, the proceedings concluding with a distribution of cuffs, scarves, dolls, books, &c

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Dean of Norwich has accepted the invitation of the committee of the C.M.S. to preach the anniversary sermon in May.

Regret is freely expressed that a High Churchman should have been appointed vicar of Wakefield, in place of the evangelical Archdeacon Straton.

At last week's meeting of the Liverpool branch of the Church Association, General Sir R. Phayre dwelt strongly on the evils wrought in India by Ritualism.

Rev. T. Howard Gill has arranged for a series of Evidential Lectures in the Parish Church, Canterbury, to be given by Bishop Barry, Canon Elwyn, the Dean of Canterbury, Canon Girdlestone, Canon Bernard, and Rev. J. E. C. Welldon.

A conference of Evangelical Churchmen has been called for Friday (5th), in connection with the Clerical and Lay Union. Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe will preside; and a discussion will be opened by the vicar of Islington on "The best means of organising Evangelical influence in the diocese of London."

Prebendary Eardley Wilmot, who is leaving Walcot, Bath, for St. Jude's, South Kensington, preached on Sunday week his farewell sermons. In the evening he chose the words, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

Rev. James Ormiston, in a stirring lecture at Hastings on "A priestly delusion"—i.e., sacerdotalism—showed that the question must finally turn on the conclusion—Bible or no Bible? If there be a Bible, and if that Bible be of God, then sacerdotalism is condemned; for Christ by his one sacrifice, once for all, has made an end, and there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin.

Canon Bardsley, addressing a meeting in Huddersfield last week, pointed out that it was of small service reading the Bible in the schools without note or comment, and the children could not take in the facts and truths except by teaching line upon line and precept upon precept. Besides, no teacher was allowed to appeal to the Lord Jesus Christ, who could help the children to conquer sin.

The Bishop of Wakefield, speaking last week at Dewsbury, urged strongly the claims of the masses of London. He remarked that, "so far from young men seeking curacies where there is 'light work and good fishing,' the tendency is now to seek laborious work amongst the poor."

CONGREGATIONAL.

Mr. R. F. Horton, of Hampstead, disclaims the use of the prefix "Rev." to his name.

At Hessle-road Church, Hull, Rev. E. Dudley has just concluded a fruitful mission.

Rev. J. Fearnley, for fifteen years pastor at Bullershaw, has entered on his ministry at Norristhorpe.

Mr. D. A. Davies will commence his ministry at Aylesbury on the last Sunday of the present month.

We are glad to hear that Rev. John Thomas, D.D., is somewhat better. He is being urged to take a long holiday.

At Saltburn-on-Sea, an admirable site has just been secured for a new chapel for the congregation now meeting in the Institute.

At a meeting last week of the Manchester and Salford Auxiliary of the Church-Aid Society, an interesting report was rendered of progress in the village missions.

The week beginning Sunday, February 21st, is definitely arranged as the week of self-denial on behalf of the Forward Movement of the London Missionary Society.

For some time a successful mission has been carried on at a cottage at the village of Wilmington, Sussex, in connection with Pevensey-road Church, Eastbourne, and as a result a church has been formed. A suitable building has been erected, and opened last Wednesday.

A donation of £2000 has been received towards the "Forward Movement" initiated by the directors of the London Missionary Society from "One who desires to consecrate every talent to the Master's Service." It is proposed to increase the staff of missionaries by one hundred, and the yearly income by £30,000.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. C. Anderson Scott has received a warm welcome in entering upon his ministry at College Park, Willesden.

Rev. W. B. Macleod, who rendered good service at Norwood, has been warmly received by his new flock in Jersey.

The church at Leytonstone is making most satisfactory progress, and is proving a fresh and vigorous centre of work in suburban East London.

Rev. John More has completed a week of most successful services at Wolverhampton. The interest was deep, and there were many conversions.

The congregation at Nottingham are contemplating the raising of about £2000 to complete the mission premises and the two Sunday-schools, and increase the accommodation in the church, which has become a matter of urgent necessity.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church of Canada have issued an Open Letter, inviting sister societies to send delegates to a conference to be held at Toronto at the time of the meeting of the General Council of the Presbyterian Alliance.

Rev. Dr. Muir, speaking at a meeting a few nights ago at Mount Pleasant, Liverpool, emphasized the importance of labouring for those outside the church; for in proportion as a congregation reached the outside world would it build up the inside life.

Mrs. Stuart, widow of the late R. L. Stuart, who died in New York recently, bequeathed all her property, amounting to about £1,000,000, to benevolent and Christian uses. One of her bequests was £16,000 to her pastor, Rev. Dr. Hall, and £2000 to his wife. The family of which Mrs. Stuart was the last representative were eminent Presbyterians.

BAPTIST.

Rev. W. J. Mayers reports a warm welcome and good meetings in South Australia, Victoria, and Queensland.

The evangelistic work in connection with the chapel at Morley (Leeds) has of late been increasingly encouraging.

Fruitful results have attended a nine days' evangelistic mission, conducted at Zion Chapel, Gravesend, by Mr. A. A. Harmer.

Rev. G. H. Harris has resigned the pastorate of All Saints' Baptist Church, Guernsey. His address is now The Hundred, Romsey, Hants.

The Lodging-house Mission, in connection with John

The Late Rev. C. H. SPURGEON wrote in The Sword and Trowel:—"There is great wealth of information in this well-condensed, well-written book. Think of 587 miles of passages of CATACOMBS! The CATACOMBS have been a hiding-place for truths as well as for martyrs, and the sermons in stones which have been there preserved preach very forcibly against certain errors of the apostate church. Half-a-crown will bring a large return if spent upon this book."

"Here is a slashing book, which leaves no need for a second stroke. These sermons in stones (the monumental inscriptions in the Catacombs) are then used to prove in a relentless and unchallengeable fashion the wholesale departures from primitive Christianity by the modern Church of Rome. The verdict of the book is this—ROMANISM is baptized PAGANISM. And we entirely endorse the judgment. In these days, when Romanism is being stealthily spread among us, this book ought to be scattered in thousands all over the land."—Presbyterian Messenger.

After Influenza.

The resultant weakness of this depressing complaint will surely disappear if a short course of Guy's Tonic be resorted to. Guy's Tonic increases the appetite, strengthens the stomach, regulates the liver, gives tone to the nervous organization, and by imparting vitality, strength, and energy to the entire muscular and mental systems, makes the feeble and delicate vigorous, robust and strong. The weary brain, the languid nerve, and the prostrate muscular frame receive support and capacity for renewed exertion.

IT IS NOT CLAIMED

That Guy's Tonic will infallibly cure every ill under the sun, but we do say, here and now, that it should immediately be resorted to—

When digestion is accompanied by flatulency.

When pain, weight, fulness or distension is felt after eating.

When there is drowsiness after meals—a very common symptom.

When there is distaste for food of all kinds, or,

When there is a dull, weak, failing, or pining appetite.

TO ANY ONE DESIRING to test our remedies, we will send, securely packed in a special box, a bottle of Guy's Tonic, together with a free sample box of Guy's Fruit Pills and complete "Guide to Digestion," containing simple instructions as to the Guy's Tonic Treatment, post paid, for 2s. 9d. Address all letters to Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C. Guy's Tonic is sold retail of all Chemists, at 2s. 9d. per bottle, and Guy's Fruit Pills at 1s. 1½d. per box.

street Chapel, held its annual tea on Tuesday week, when many testimonies were borne as to the results of the past year's work.

The total receipts and promises for the Baptist Missionary Centenary Fund has now reached about £52,000, of which amount nearly £11,000 has been contributed by young people.

At the annual meeting of the London Baptist Association, held on Tuesday, 26th ult., Rev. F. B. Meyer, the new President, delivered his presidential address on "Our Attitude in These Trying Times."

Rev. F. C. Spurr, speaking last week on evangelistic effort, said that if we want to see a great revival of Christian life in London, we must subscribe to the conditions that God had laid down for its attainment, namely, implicit obedience to Him, the cultivation of the consecrated spirit, and an enthusiasm for saving souls.

On January 28, a meeting in connection with the centenary celebration, held in the Swaffham Baptist Chapel, was addressed by Revs. C. Williams, J. H. Shakespeare, the pastor, Rev. J. Wilkins, presiding. The fervent spirit and earnest words of the speakers thoroughly aroused the congregation and deepened their interest, both in the approaching commemoration and in foreign missions.

METHODIST.

A fine new Wesleyan Chapel was opened on Thursday, in Salford, by the Mayor.

A successful round of missionary meetings has lately been conducted at Dersingham, Snettisham, Bucham, and Docking.

The annual report of the Manchester Mission shows remarkable progress and not a little blessing in every department.

The South-East London Mission (in the Borough) has lately had a busy time, owing to the pressure of poverty in the surrounding district.

At the annual meeting of the Liverpool Wesleyan Mission, held on Monday week, Rev. C. Garrett showed a record of good work done.

There is now every likelihood that the work at Shaftesbury Hall (Aldersgate-street) will be taken charge of by the Central London Mission.

At the fourth annual meeting of the Adult Bible-class held last week at the Centenary Chapel, Middlesbro', the membership was shown to be six hundred, while many tokens of real usefulness were reported.

Rev. Arthur E. Sharpley, who has charge of the Methodist work at the Portsmouth Garrison and Naval Port, is being greatly encouraged just now by the gratifying success of the Eastney Soldiers' Home.

The "Gospel Car" has been working through Newcastle circuit with good results. At Stargate, where a fort night's mission was held, many interesting cases of awakening occurred. The Car next visited Crawcrook, remaining nearly two weeks, with much success.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Two new Protestant churches are in process of erection in Belfast.

There are now thirty-two Methodist students in Queen's College, Belfast.

Presbyterian services have been begun, under encouraging circumstances, in New Ross, a town of six thousand inhabitants.

The influenza epidemic in the diocese of Armagh is so extreme that two or three Sundays ago six churches were closed, the rectors being ill.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church is to meet in Dublin in June, and Rev. R. McCheyne Edgar is freely mentioned as likely to be chosen Moderator.

The Church of Ireland Young Men's Society, Belfast, has added 157 to its membership during the past year, and has resolved to continue the experiment of admitting as associates members of other denominations.

Miss Logan, who for the last seven years has been engaged in mission work in Syria, is at present home on furlough, and has been addressing missionary meetings at Radalstown and elsewhere with marked effect.

A successful missionary conference has just been held in Kilmore Presbyterian Church, Revs. T. Alexander, R. H. Semple, Jas. Knowles, Dr. Brown (Moderator of General Assembly), and others taking part in the proceedings.

Mr. Thos. Plunket Cairnes, J.P., Governor of the Bank of Ireland, and High Sheriff of co. Louth, has recently given £9000 for religious and benevolent objects, including £1000 towards building a children's home at Monkstown, Dublin, £3000 towards increasing the clerical incomes in the diocese of Meath, and £5000 towards building artisans dwellings in Drogheda.

The Belfast Female Mission—an undenominational society—is a very valuable organisation. During the past year its agents paid nearly eighteen thousand visits, many of these being to the aged and sick, got sixty persons to sign the pledge, cared for twenty-seven children neglected by their parents, and established clothing clubs for the purpose of teaching the poor habits of thrift.

The Belfast Town Mission is doing a most useful work. It employs seventeen agents, who last year visited forty-six thousand families, held nearly four thousand meetings, distributed a large amount of religious literature, and got 107 families to join different churches. Its aim is to lead the spiritually destitute to Christ, and its methods are house-to-house visitation, personal dealing, and the holding of cottage meetings. It finds drunkenness, gambling, Sabbath desecration, and the circulation of infidel literature its great hindrances.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Finsbury-park, on the 16th inst., Rev. R. Maxwell, long a devoted Wesleyan minister; at Wood-green, Mrs. Howell Jones, wife of the Wesleyan minister and a devoted worker: in the Precincts, Rochester, on Tuesday, 26th, Rev. Canon Burrows, aged 76, well-known as a theological author; at Langley, Rev. W. T. Taylor, of influenza, a devoted labourer; at Goodnestone-park, Kent, on Sunday, January 24, Mrs. Plumptre, widow of the late Rev. H. W. Plumptre, a helper of many; at Lowestoft, Mr. Michael Hinde, a Christian of exemplary piety, and influential of much good, formerly as master of the British School, and latterly as a journalist and preacher of the Gospel.

Special Religious Services in Theatres and Town Halls.

These Services were commenced more than thirty-two years ago and have been held every winter with great success. The Committee have recently added to their labours by building Mission Halls in memory of their late president, the seventh Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G., while some hundreds of smaller halls have been assisted by grants of money. The majority of these buildings are in the very poorest parts of London, where it is utterly impossible to raise funds locally.—Contributions will be gratefully received by the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, or by the Secretary, Mr. C. M. Sawell, 3, Bridewell-place, E.C.

PEPSONYMIN TONIC

THIS is a Genuine Remedy. It cures INDIGESTION. This is not mere assertion. It is a fact. Experience has proved it. DR. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., says:—"The many martyrs to the ignorant use of unsuitable and crude drugs will benefit largely from its use." MRS. HENRY KING-PARKES, F.R.S.A., says:—"I have had its efficacy tested in several severe cases of dyspepsia, and invariably with beneficial results." One patient says:—"I have derived more benefit from Pepsonymin Tonic than from any of the remedies so much advertised." Another writes:—"The headache, dizziness, and drowsiness have entirely, and, I hope, permanently left me." Try it. Ask your Chemist for it. If he does not keep it in stock, ask him to order it for you. If difficult to obtain, order direct from FRANCIS SPITE & Co., Ltd., St. ENOCH SQUARE, GLASGOW, who will send it post free for 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., or 4s. 6d. per bottle. A REVIEW BY THE LATE REV. C. H. SPURGEON.

RARA AVIS—A BOOK!

Preachers abound: but divines are few. The printing press pours forth a mass of matter: but a real book is a phenomenon. We count ourselves happy, for we have met with a divine in Dr. JAMES CULROSS; and in his work entitled we have found a book. It is part of our appointed suffering in this life to be compelled to winnow heaps of literature, with great result in chaff and dust and small gain in breadcorn, and therefore our rejoicing is the greater when grain comes to our garner as clean provender, in good weight and measure. The work before us is a great book for matter, though modest in size.

"JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED,"

Many writers are mere echoes of other men's voices, and are mainly of use in stirring up pure minds by way of remembrance. Dried fruits are their merchandise; such a thing as a freshly-gathered peach is never seen in their basket. One of the excellences of Dr. CULROSS is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch: he is no withered bough of the autumn forest. His mind allows young flowers to break through its soil after their own fashion, and to blossom in their own sweet way.

This excellent author deals with John—the man, the companion of Jesus, the apostle after the Ascension, the writer, and the theologian—thus furnishing us with a full-length portrait of "the beloved disciple." He has evidently chosen a congenial subject, and has such sympathy with the man before him that he can see far into his mind and heart. Even to comment upon John's writings is far from easy; he is so simple, and yet so fathomlessly deep; he uses so many of those pregnant monosyllables, so much more expressive than long words. Dr. CULROSS is a Christian of the Johannean stamp, and hence he is at home with the beloved disciple.

It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate on what they read.

We heard of a gentleman who entered an hotel and ordered a dinner of chops. One chop was brought him with due state, this being considered enough for a meal. The hungry diner inserted his fork into the lonely portion of flesh, and as he put it on his plate he said, "Yes, this is the sort of thing; bring me a dish of them." So have we risen from the perusal of many a modern book, feeling that the one or two thoughts we obtained were good; but we wanted more of them. No such tantalising have we undergone while reading this work; but, on the contrary, we have had a feast of fat things full of marrow.—Sword and Trowel.

and fifty-four arable and one hundred and five grass, under the Sayer's Farm superintendent.

"The eighty acres of arable for market-gardening are on the high table-land adjoining the London Road, which borders the Colony on the north, and are in first-class cultivation. With regard to the two hundred acres of saltings, which have been periodically covered by the high spring tides, it is proposed to embank these sufficiently high to prevent the influx of water, and then, by careful subsequent treatment, it is thought that in the course of a few years they may have a freehold value of £30 per acre. As in the purchase £4 per acre only was reckoned for these saltings, it may naturally be asked how this increase of value is to be obtained.

"After the completion of the embankment there will be put on the land heavy dressings of London dust and manure, which, when mixed with the alluvial soil, will form rich land, capable of growing a great variety of produce. The expenditure on such embankment and treatment of the land will, of course, be large, and necessitate a great amount of Appeals.

Southwark and Lambeth Mission.—The Evangelist appeals earnestly for help on behalf of the poor in the district.—William Benson, 129, Royal-road, Kennington-park, S.E.

Vale Mission, Guernsey.—This work, in a very poor district, is greatly crippled for want of funds.—Address, Peter M. Vaudin, General Superintendent, Vale Mission Hall, Guernsey.

Spurgeon's Sermons.—G. W. Gill, 24, Convent Lane Anlaby-road, Hull, asks readers of Mr. Spurgeon's Sermons to send him read numbers, with a view to circulation among working-men. He can use also back numbers of The Christian, British Workman, and similar papers.

Notices.

Several correspondents inform us that the hymn [containing the stanza, "I have heard the voice of Jesus, &c.," about which inquiry was made last week, begins—

"I was journeying in the noontide,
When his light shone o'er my road;
And I saw Him in the glory,
Saw Him—Jesus—Son of God."

The hymn is from the pen of Mrs. Frances Bevan. A poem on Abigail, by the late Mr. Denham-Smith, in his "Brides of the Bible," contains a verse similar to the one about which our correspondent inquired.

THIRTY-EIGHTH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

"CURED IN TEN DAYS"—CASE of OBSTINATE BRONCHIAL and THROAT IRRITATION.

Mr. H. J. N., of ST. JOHN'S, TUNBRIDGE WELLS, came to see me in May last. He had taken cold upon cold. The last cold, contracted six months before this, had set up bronchial irritation, which had become chronic and resisted all means, and irritating cough and expectoration continued.

The patient was thoroughly examined and advised. Some time afterwards, in sending another patient to see me, he writes:—"I was cured in ten days."

An influential Irish journal writes as follows:—

"IS CONSUMPTION CURABLE?

Many think it is not. Year after year the young and BEAUTIFUL ARE SWEPT AWAY by this fell disease—which follows so remarkably in the track of civilisation—and long sympathy and medical skill are powerless to arrest its progress! There are, however, well-authenticated cases, in which patients, undoubtedly far advanced in Consumption, have recovered and enjoyed MANY YEARS OF ROBUST HEALTH.

"Our attention has been called to Mr. GEO. THOS. CONGREVE'S work on Chest Diseases. The Author has devoted his whole life to the study, and has been most successful in the treatment of Consumption in all its stages. More than two hundred selected cases of cure are recorded in his book."

"ISRAEL MY GLORY;"

Or, Israel's Mission and Missions to Israel.

BY REV. JOHN WILKINSON.

the Rev. C. H. SPURGEON in Sword and Trowel:—
"A very powerful plea for Jewish missions. . . . Gives a world of information about rael. . . . In general we are at one with all that he says, and we confess that we are greatly tructed by his pages."

the Rev. Dr. BROOKES in The Truth:—
"A key to the Scriptures. . . . It is the clearest and most Scriptural discussion that has peared of the great and important question with which it deals."

the Rev. Canon FAUSSET in The Rock:—
"This is no ordinary book. It is the production of a master of the Israelite question, th in its practical bearing on our present duty to Israel, and in its prophetical relation to the po of Israel yet to be realised. . . . We heartily commend this instructive book."

the Rev. Dr. PARSONS in The Presbyterian Review (Toronto):—
"A most interesting work. . . . And the fact that there is strict allegiance to the letter God's Word will give to all who bow to its absolute and final authority a still greater delight d eagerness in carefully reading and searching the most instructive pages of this book."

the Rev. Dr. ELDER CUMMING:—
"Most powerfully and eloquently is the whole position stated and urged upon the people of d in 'Israel my Glory.'"

"The whole of the work is deeply interesting and instructive. . . . In these days of wing interest in God's ancient people this volume ought to have a wide circulation."
Nonconformist and Independent.

". . . . Occupies ground not covered by any other single volume. . . . Deals compre-nsively with the Jewish question."—The Christian.

"The book should be read to be fully appreciated . . . earnest . . . scholarly . . pful to Christian faith."—Christian Commonwealth.

"The subject is an important one, and in Mr. Wilkinson's hands it is adequately dealt h."—The Quiver.

Shemlan,

MOUNT LEBANON.

The Committee of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING FEMALE EDUCATION IN THE EAST are compelled to make an URGENT APPEAL for immediate help for the Native Female Training School at the above station. The shock of an earthquake has been felt there, and a portion of the premises has been so injured that they must be taken down and rebuilt at once. It is hoped that two hundred and fifty pounds will cover this unlooked for, but imperatively needed, outlay; and a lady has already promised fifty when a hundred and fifty shall be contributed. Will some of the Lord's stewards come forward speedily to make up this comparatively small sum? Mrs. Watson, the honoured Foundress of the School, has gone to her reward, and also Miss Hicks, one of the missionaries of the Society, who worked with her in it for twenty-five years. It has been suggested by some who knew and loved them both that this proposed little fund should bear their names as a tribute to their memories. Not only has this School sent forth many well-qualified schoolmistresses, but it has been a nursery for souls, and this presents a strong claim for help.

Contributions to the "Watson-Hicks Memoria Fund" will be thankfully received by Miss E. Rutt, Fernhurst, Upper Clapton, N.E.; by Miss Louisa Hope, 7, Ovington-gardens, Brompton, S.W.; by Miss Haldane, 118, Westbourne-terrace, Hyde-park, W.; and by Miss Webb, 267, Vauxhall-bridge-road, S.W.

COALS FOR THE POOREST.

Also warm underclothing. It is distressing to us who visit the sick poor in East London at this time of sickness and death, to find in most cases they are without fuel, or the means to get any. They have no means whatever of getting warmth for their poor bodies, being alike destitute of food and warm clothing—the poor children especially suffer. One Guinea will keep one fire going three months, but smaller donations will be thankfully received.

Parcels and donations will be thankfully received and acknowledged by EDWIN PHILBRICK (Deacon), 57, Stepney-green, London, E.; or donations to, to Miss BENN (Hon. Worker), 38, St. Peter's-road, Mile-end-road, London, E.

Coals for the poorest. Received with thanks P.O.'s and stamps for £1 from North London.
